Egypt Claims Russia Offers Full Support

Flashback

FDR Irked Britain

LONDON (AP) — Hitherto secret government papers show British diplomats feared that President Franklin D. Roosevelt sought peace with the Axis powers in 1940 to get a Democrat re-elected to the White House.

The papers were made public Thursday night after 30 years of secrecy imposed by British law.

The controversy arose over a tour of Axis capitals by Sumner Welles, then U.S. Undersecretary of State. Roosevelt dispatched Welles to sound out the possibilities of halting the Second World War, which the United States had not yet entered.

Sir Robert Vansittart, the chief diplomatic adviser to the British government at the time, said in a memorandum to the foreign office:

"It is now pretty clear . . . that President Roosevel is ready to play a dirty trick on the world and risk the ultimate destruction of the Western democracies in order to secure the re-election of a Democratic candidate in the United States."

Vansittart said Welles because of his peace probe "emerges more and more clearly as an international danger."

"His chief crime towards common sense and humanity is that he hwas now gone so far as to want us to make peace with Hitler," the memorandum said.

The documents show that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told his cabinet he believed Roosevelt "would make some attempt to bring the war to an end, even if that attempt should be embarrasing to us." and that his remarks and a toned-down version of Vansittart's memorandum were sent to the president.

Other papers showed the British government was incensed by U.S. Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy's predictions that Britain could not win the war against Germany, and that he favored appeasing Hitler even after the war broke out in September, 1939.

The records also show the British considered the appointment of Kennedy a Roosevelt bid to court the vote of Irish-Americans, and that they wanted him replaced.

Another series of documents made public disclosed that the British government ignored a peace offer made by top German generals who wanted to oust Hitler in 1940. The British war cabinet spurned the offer because it thought it was a trick.

New Year's Buffet, Food-watchers' Dream

Partygoers at the Sun Valley Motor Inn acted as spectators after ushering in 1971 as Sun Valley chef, Chris Giouroukos, set up the buffet provided for the New Year's Party occasion. The buffet, "the like of which Belleville has never seen," was three tiers high and fit for a king.

Joint Action Looms

By The Associated Press

Egypt says it has been offered unlimited military and political support by the Soviet Union in a joint struggle to isolate the United States and Israel.

The claim was in a report by Vice-President Ali Sabry that dealt with the talks the Russians and Egyptians held Dec. 20-27 in Moscow. Quotes from the report were published today in the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram.

Al Ahram said the Kremlin expressed "full understanding" of Egypt's military needs and said it would help Cairo confront "technological advances," meaning electronic weapons systems provided to Israel by the United States.

The report said the Soviet leaders "expounded at length their assessment of the conflict in the Middle East and its place in the world strategy of the Soviet Union" and "emphasized the necessity of Egypt's victory in the current struggle with America and Israel."

The Cairo press also indicated that Egypt would take a tough stand at the Arab-Israeli peace talks expected to resume soon in New York under UN mediator Gunnar Jarring.

Al Ahram rejected Israel's stand that peace must come to the Middle East before any timetable is discussed for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war. Egypt has been demanding such a timetable as a pre-condition for extending the current Middle East cease-fire, which expires Feb. 5.

Al Ahram said: "Such Israeli manoeuvring will only further complicate the situation, placing responsibility for an explosion—which could ocur very soon—squarely on America and Israel."

Egypt's UN delegate and representative at the Jarring talks, Mohammed Hassan El Zayyat, said in Cairo on the eve of his departure for New York today: "We shall not surrender to Israel's terms."

Doctors Studying Drug Use

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Medical Association is studying the possibility that amphetamines, barbiturates and tranquillizers are being overprescribed.

Dr. T. T. Zsoter of Toronto, head of a new CMA committee on the medical use of stimulants and sedatives, said in an interview Friday night that a questionnaire has been sent to Canada's 22,000 practising physicians.

They are being asked to keep a diary for one week of their stimulant and sedative prescriptions plus a total of all their prescriptions, for comparative purposes.

The questionnaire solicits their opinions on the use of the drugs, particularly the use of amphetamines which are often prescribed as an appetite depressant for overweight people.

He said the committee was set up—with special emphasis on amphetamines, also known as speed—after the interim report of the Le Dain commission on the non-medical use of drugs concluded that such prescription drugs are being over-used by doctors with heavy workloads.

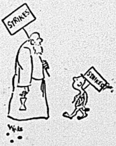
Six Die On Jan. 1 Outdoors

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With the New Year holiday only one day old, Ontario already had recorded six deaths in accidents involving snowmobiles by Friday night.

This brought the death toll in accidents involving snowmobiles across Canada to 42 so far this winter, and gave added credence to a recent statement by the Canada Safety Council that snowmobiling is becoming one of the world's most dangerous winter pastimes.

A total of 93 persons died in snowmobile mishaps last winter and the council has predicted 100 will die this year.



THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A trough of low pressure brought light snow to the western regions early today. Throughout southern Ontario it was to have ended by this afternoon with only a trace accumulating. Babies Ready For New Year

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Weighing in at six pounds 15 ounces, Scott Maurice Robert Andre Dolbec is provisional winner of the annual New Year's baby race.

The first Canadian of 1971 made his appearance in Edmonton at one second after midnight Friday night.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dolbec beat a Toronto girl by just one second.

"I'm just glad he's a real healthy baby and has 10 little fingers and 10 little toes," said Mrs. Dolbec who, like other parents of early arrivals, was to receive a variety of prizes from local businesses.

The Toronto arrival is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert DeLuca The baby was delivered at two seconds past midnight and is the couple's third child.

A girl was born 30 seconds after midnight in Saskatoon. She weighed six pounds, six ounces and is the daughter of Robert and Judy Laurien.

The first baby in the Quinte area was born at B.G.H. at 9.25 a.m., a daughter for Mr. and Mrs. John Leavitt.

The honor of being Quebec's first baby in 1971 is shared by one boy, as all were born in one minute after midnight.

In Quebec City, Mrs. Jean-Claude Tardy gave birth to a six-pound, five-ounce son. An eight-pound daughter their eighth child greeted Mr. and Mrs. Andre Desrosiers, of Joliette, Que., 30 miles northeast of Montreal.

In Montreal, the first baby of the year was a seven-pound daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Sansone. Quebec's fourth baby was a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Jean Noel Roy of Cap de la Madeleine, 90 miles northeast of the city, also weighing seven pounds.

The first baby to greet the new year in Newfoundland was born at four minutes past midnight and was a 10-pound, seven-ounce girl for Mr. and Mrs. Richard Williams of Goulds, near St. John's. The Williams family has five other children.

U.S. Ban in Effect

Cigarette Advertising Goes Up in One Wild Puff of Smoke

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — The time has come to say farewell to Marlboro Country, Winston's bad grammer, the disadvantages of Benson and Hudges and all those idyllic scenes of springtime and cattle roundups and menthol-cooled mountains vistas on United States television.

A ban placed by Congress against cigarette commercials on TV and radio networks went into effect at midnight Friday night.

As the deadline approached the TV screen was clouded with smoke.

Philip Morris purchased 25½ minutes of time from the New Year's Day bowl games right up to the stroke of midnight on all three late-night talk shows.

Philip Morris paid $1.25 million for time in the Rose Bowl, Cotton Bowl, Sugar Bowl, the Tournament of Roses Parade, the Friday Night Movie and all of the time on the Johnny Carson, Dick Cavett and Merv Griffin shows up to the deadline.

R. J. Reynolds bought four minutes on the Orange Bowl telecast, two minutes on the Sugar Bowl and one minute for NBC's Bowl Day Highlights.

Liggett and Myers and Lorillard each purchased a minute on the Tom Jones Show.

The other cigarette makers either nought no time at all on the final day or put their money into spot announcements on local stations, where it was impossible to determine how much time was purchased.

Most of the money was concentrated on television. None of the cigarette companies, for instance, bought time on network radio.

By far the largest price tag of the day was attached to the Rose Bowl telecast, with NBC charging $135,000 for each commercial minute. The asking price is rarely paid by a regular advertiser, however, and it is doubtful that Philip Morris paid full price for its four minutes.

NBC asked $75,000 a minute for the Orange Bowl, CBS $170,000 a minute for the Cotton Bowl and ABC $53,000 a minute for the Sugar Bowl.

CBS said Philip Morris bought eight minutes on the Cotton Bowl, the Friday Night Movie and the Merv Griffin Show. The network declined to specify how many minutes were for each program.

The asking price for the CBS movie is $43,000 a minute and for ABC's Tom Jones Show $44,000.

The prices for the talk shows are Carson $18,000 a minute, Griffin $9,500 and Cavett $5,000. All of the time on the three shows from 11:30 p.m. to mi night adds up to about $80

The ban on ciga comes as similar le Canada is bottled t sign of early parlia tion.

New Year Arrives With a Whisper

New Year's, possibly the loudest of holidays has come and gone — with a whisper instead of a shout.

The new year, 1971, came in amid cheers of Happy New Year and the refrains of Auld Lang Syne in many parties but in Belleville at least, the partyers left their good times at the party and went home to a peaceful New Year's Day.

Police officials recorded an extra quiet holiday with the number of impaired drivers and traffic accidents failing to testify that a holiday was in progress.

The Belleville Detachment of the OPP reported one minor snowmobile acident, a couple of minor traffic accidents and the folly of one impaired driver in the entire detachment.

"It was a very quiet New Year's," an OPP spokesman said.

Of course the weather had a lot to do with the safety record on Belleville and area streets and roads.

Clear skies and cool temperatures kept main roads and streets clear of snow Thursday night as merrymakers preparing to ring in 1971 made their way to party sites.

The sun shone with seasonable temperatures New Year's Day to assist in retaining adequate driving conditions for travellers in search of ski runs, toboggan slides and snowmobile trails.

Belleville City Police reported an "exceptionally quiet New Years" and a spokesman described it as "surprising."

Like the OPP, only one impaired driver was picked up, the result of too much celebration. In addition there were only three drunks picked up New Year's Eve, "just the standard customers."

"They came in to wish us a Happy New Year," the police spokesman quipped.

Belleville Police reported only a couple of minor accidents with no injuries.

But young and old got together in the name of celebration New Year's Eve. Despite any grievances about the generation gap, youth joined its elders in welcoming the optimism and hopes of 1971.

Throughout the city merrymakers joined in private parties, club get-togethers such as those at the Bay of Quinte Curling Club and the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, and extravaganzas such as the party and buffet displayed at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Chris Giouroukos, chef at the Sun Valley, told The Intelligencer, prior to the event that "the buffet would be the like of which Belleville has never seen." And he wasn't kidding.

Revellers at the Sun Valley stood around in admiration as Mr. Giouroukos set up the lavish display of food. Sun Valley officials explained that this too was a tradition of New Year's Eve parties at the establishment.

The first New Year's baby was another cheerful aspect of the holiday in the Quinte district.

A baby born to Mr. and Mrs. John Leavitt of Picton took that honor, but even then hospital officials had to wait until 9.25 a.m., Friday for the delivery of the area's first — a girl at seven pounds 15 ounces.

Quinte's First in 1971

Mrs. John Leavitt of Picton cradles her new baby girl at the Belleville General Hospital where she was born at 9:25 a.m. New Year's Day. Weighing seven pounds, 15 ounces, the baby was the first in 1971 in the Quinte district.

Politicians Look at 1971

A multi-million-dollar paper mill may be more than a much-talked-of possibility in the Quinte district before 1971 has run its course.

There may be a cabinet shuffle in Ottawa. And people, generally, will be taking a more sober, serious look at government.

These are among predictions for the New Year made by the people closest to the course of public events in the Quinte district — its senior government politicians.

The paper mill prediction comes from Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward - Lennox — whose riding includes the Wellington-area shoreline of Lake Ontario where Canadian International Paper Company says it is studying location of a mill.

"I've nothing to base this on," admits Mr. Whitney, "but I do feel there's a very good possibility of the paper mill becoming a reality."

Mr. Whitney added he was satisfied the Ontario government's anti-pollution agencies would not permit a project of such magnitude if it carried the threat of pollution — fears of which last year sparked local opposition to the projected scheme.

The year also will see the arrival of a provincial hospital for the retarded at the former Camp Picton army base and the economic outlook for Prince Edward makes him optimistic for 1971, says Mr. Whitney.

Dispersal of industry and institutions into less developed areas away from metropolitan centres was sound future economy. It reduces the need for expensive expansion of public transportation facilities while raising local employment.

Changes in the federal cabinet are forecast for 1971 by Lee Grills, MP Hastings.

Already, said Grills, there is evidence that some cabinet ministers from outside Quebec "don't go along" with Prime Minister Trudeau's policies.

"I think there'll be some cabinet shuffles," he adds.

This will also be the year when the government must face the problem of unemployment which has grown to "quite serious" proportions.

The Trudeau government has yet to confront the "nitty gritty" of problems of the average Canadian, said Mr. Grills.

"They've been talking around the most important issues, putting up a smokescreen to cover their weaknesses. This is the third year of this government and this is the year it will have to face up to these problems."

This also will be the year when the people will be looking harder than ever at public issues and political policies says Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte.

"They'll be taking a real serious look at things — and they'll be expecting some serious answers," he says.

Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, says current signs augur well for his constituency's economy in the coming year.

Recreation — the riding's biggest industry — will "advance tremendously."

Henry Mitchell

One More Year to Go To the Century Mark

WOOLER (Special) — The oldest resident of this vilage eight miles north of Trenton had more than one good reason for looking forward to the Christmas season.

On Christmas Day he was 99 years old and started the countdown to the elusive century goal . . . his 100th birthday.

The second important event took place four days later — Tuesday, Dec. 29. Oldest son Stewart and his wife who live at RR1, Wooler celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. His name was at the top of the list of the host of relatives and friends invited.

Nonagenarian Henry Mitchell spent New Years Day relaxing quietly in the living room of his home. For him the holiday was an occasion to remember the past. In particular the many experiences that had been revived with the renewal of acquaintances at his son's anniversary party.

Good health is one of Mr. Mitchell's richest assets. Except for hearing, the rest of his faculties serve him well considering his age. He walks a great deal and when the underfooting permits, he'll stroll to his son's place a mile away.

Mr. Mitchell's prescription for longevity is unorthodox. "I eat all I can get," he revealed while stressing that habits of drinking and smoking in his case had been performed in moderation. "Most of all I trust in God," he emphasized. "He's my real friend."

Keeping the body and mind busy has much to do with living a long time says the former operator of a threshing machine in the summer months and a portable sawmill during the winter.

When most people were thinking about retiring, Mr. Mitchell studied stationary engineering by correspondence and acquired his fourth class papers. He folowed his trade at No. 6 Repair Depot at Station Trenton early in World War II and afterwards.

Mr. Mitchell, who raised nine children, believes the future of today's young people lies in the hands of their parents. "My children knew better than to misbehave when they were under my care and they knew better after they grew up and went out into the world on their own," he explained.

Mr. Mitchell lives with his daughter, Mrs. Nora Fox.

Snowmobile Races In Picton Sunday

PICTON (Staff) — The flag will drop tomorrow afternoon on the second of four snowmobile race meets sponsored at Picton Fairgrounds by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and the Prince Edward Snowmobile Racing Committee.

Included in the race program are nine classes for stock and modified machines. A ladies Powderpuff Derby will be a featured event.

Cash prizes will be awarded to the first five-place winners in each division, ranging from $30 down to $5.

First place winners also receive trophies.

Chairman of the race meet, Archie Kingma has reported that entrants from Toronto are expected to compete in tomorrow's races over the fairgrounds half-mile track.

At an earlier meet this winter, 86 entries were recorded.

The snowmobile races this month provide fanfare for a gala winter carnival planned by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce in late January.

The carnival, Prince Edward's first, will feature the crwning of a snow queen, a cross-country snowmobile race and a spectacular Christmas tree bonfire.

Many other events are being organized to highlight this special winter weekend.

Is CPR Crossing Officially Open?

Members of the city traffic committee don't agree with the Canadian Transport Commission that the Mary Street level crossing over the CPR tracks is an unauthorized cross over.

The committee admits that council back in 1914 voted to close the crossing but city officials say the decision was conditional and, with the terms never being carried out, claim the crossing was never legally closed.

And lending weight to the claim is that the crossing never has been closed.

The condition of the 1914 vote to close the Mary Street crossing was that an alternative crossing be provided at King Street.

In November representatives of the Railway Transport Commission met with city officials to view the crossing and a resulting letter from the commission asks "when" the crossing will be closed and suggests that the city at its own expense provide a new roadway running parallel, and south of the tracks to link up with the old Bay Bridge Road.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said he was extremely disappointed with the CTC reply and said that the claim the crossing was legally closed was open to challenge.

The Mary Street crossing provides access to Morch Manufacturing Ltd. and owner Ian Morch said it seemed strange that after 60 years the city was caught up with the question of whether the crossing was legally closed.

To have the crossing closed would be an inconvenience to the more than 80 company employees, he said.

Y to Introduce New Program

A new program making use of the "Bat and Ball" theory, will be instituted at the Belleville Family YMCA starting Jan. 12, it was announced today.

Much criticism has been levelled in recent years at the methods employed to provide recreation for today's youngsters.

Years ago, a child was given a bat and a ball and with a minimum of instruction from dad, the youngsters grabbed the nearest field, and look out windows!

The criticism arose with the heavy concentration of rules and regulations governing organized junior sports. Critics commented that a child was stifled, he couldn't have fun.

They were not attacking organized sport but were finding fault with the stifling of imagination and initiative.

The new YMCA program, called Movement Education, encourages the child to use his own imagination and body limitations to create the boundaries for his activities.

In other words, he can go as far as he wishes in his endeavors.

Dave Hahn, a program director at the recreation facility, explained that in "conventional settings, his (the child's) peers would set the limitations and goals for each programmed activity."

Rather than saying "see who can be first in running around the room' and structuring the child through competition, the class leader would encourage the child to proceed at his own pace.

He explained that the new program "doesn't set down rules but lets the child experiment under guidance."

This method aims towards elimination of competition and a feeling of superiority developed by the more agile and the more co-ordinated.

The Movement Education program, to be employed chiefly in gym programs for under - 8-year - olds, follows "much along the lines of theatre improvisations."

Mr. Hahn explained that, generally, 50 per cent of a child's learning is done in his first four years.

"By the age of eight, almost 80 per cent of his learning is completed."

He stressed that the under-8 program is geared for this period of intensive learning through self-exploration.

"This would allow the child to work within his own limitations and with his imagination."

Although the program will be used in the pool, a slightly different technique is used due to the nature of the surroundings.

"More emphasis is placed upon individual attention for each child in the form of the child's mother or volunteer helpers."

The needs of the child are adjusted according to age and advancement.

Using this program, the youngster of average agility and ability will not be made to feel inadequate by pitting himself against the all-Canadian hero type, but will be allowed to advance within his own limitations.

Ski Trail Now Open

Any Quinte district ski enthusiasts want to take up cross - country skiing as an adjunct to their downhill runs?

If so they are invited to get in touch with two Tweed area residents who already have a 12 - mile course laid out to suit both the expert and tyro skiers.

The two men — members of what they call the Moira Valley Nordic Ski Club — are Grant Elliott, skiing instructor at the new Mount Madawaska ski resort near Barry's Bay, and George Stromple, Department of Lands and Forests, with long experience in cross - country skiing in his native Czechoslovakia.

The cross - country ski route laid out by the two men runs from Latta to Tweed between Highway 37 and the Moira River.

The initial six-mile course — from Thomasburg to Tweed — was laid out last year, the highlight of the winter's activities being a cross-country race run in conjunction with the Tweed Winter Carnival.

The cross-country race event will be run again as part of this year's Tweed carnival scheduled for Sat. Feb. 13.

In addition to the full 12 - mile run there will be shorter races for junior and intermediates.

A weekend ski instructor at the new Barry's Bay resort, Mr. Elliott has a definite preference for cross-country skiing over the downhill variety.

With mechanical tows and downhill skiing "you go up and down like a yo-yo" Mr. Elliott says.

In addition, cross-country skiers escape the cost of ski tows and their equipment costs much less.

Mr. Elliott says skiers are welcome to use his club's cross-country ski course at any time — except on Feb. 13 when the Tweed Carnival event is being run.

Entries for the carnival event may be arranged by phoning Mr. Elliott at 478-2541, Tweed.

Last Review For Commanding Officer

Following review of trainees and regular militia personnel at the Belleville Armories Thursday, Lt.-Col. Ross Allan (left) took the salute from Capt. Carl Hubel, officer commanding a 4-day training course and 43 representatives of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Dec. 31, 1970 was Col. Allan's last day as commanding officer of the regiment.

Resolved: To Keep Identity

PICTON (Staff) — New Year's resolutions aren't just kid stuff.

To illustrate this point, several well-known Prince Edward county residents have revealed their "promises to keep" in 1970.

These resolutions were offered as suggested guidelines not only for their originators but for all persons planning a list of "dos" for the New Year.

Philip Dodds, vice-president of the Ontario Horticultural Association today urged county residents to "make Prince Edward a little bit better and a litle more beautiful because you have lived in it".

Mr. Dodds added that he feels the people of Prince Edward should resolve to co-operate in listing and developing county assets in a step-by-step program. He noted there are "great possibilities in industry, tourism, farming and recreation".

Mr. Dodds commented that the unfolding of such a county plan would necessitate involvement. "We should all resolve to become more involved. There's something that can be done about every thing if enough concerned persons get behind it."

Nationally recognized portrait photographer Lloyd E. Thompson has resolved through his work to concentrate on sincere efforts to promote Prince Edward county.

Mr. Thompson hopes to photograph a cross-section of the people of Prince Edward in the coming year, abandoning stylized studio portraits.

His efforts to promote the county through art will be furthered by an art gallery which he expects to open soon in the armory mall. Local artists wil find an opportunity to exhibit their work here.

"In a sense it will assist tourism," observed Mr. Thompson.

Harry Evans, Prince Edward county news columnist and humorist has suggested residents resolve to "keep local character".

"I'd hate to see a bloody big shopping centre here — I like the old streets the way they are," asserted Mr. Evans. "This county has a lot of character, a lot to speak for it. I love Prince Edward and I'd like to see it stay just like it is today. If we got prosperous there would be no character left.

Gazette news editor Jack Evans commented "the most practical and worthwhile resolution all of us in Prince Edward should make is to become a personal part of the anti-pollution drive".

He emphasized that the public should avoid littering by using the disposal facilities provided for cans, bags and garbage. He noted that suggested pollution controls should be followed by all.

Town clerk Andrew Jarvis offered the following suggestion, "Resolve — to study objectively the proposals for regional government in the area and to promote the co-operation of all local municipalities in the county for the purpose of ensuring that the identity of Prince Edward will be maintained and that the traditional boundaries remain intact to further our efforts to promote the prosperity of the county in a manner that is compatible with our natural resources and the needs of our inhabitants, and to promote the adoption of an official plan for the county that will insure industrial development that is not in conflict with our present development of tourism and agriculture."

Rev. W. J. Hamilton, Church of St. Gregory the Great, Picton, has resolved "to show kindness towards someone every day, even if it's just with a smile."

No major accidents were reported by either Provincial Police or Picton Town Police during the New Year's celebrations.

Snowmobile Lectures Offered

Loyalist College is offering a course on snowmobiles.

Marchpast Marks CO's Retirement

The Thursday afternoon marchpast at the Belleville Armories not only marked the completion of a four-day recruit and advanced militia training period, but was the occasion of the retirement of the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment's commanding officer.

Lt.-Col. Ross Allan, in his end-of - year address to representatives of the regiment, called upon the members of the unit to maintain the tradition of the Hasty-Pees.

"If you consider the regiment first and yourselves second, that will be the way you will keep this regiment the best," he declared.

The four - day infantry training period for the 11 recruits and other two - three year experienced personnel, came on short notice, a fact which Col. Allan spoke of with admiration.

There was "little or no advance warning for the course, and "I congratulate you men for the fine spirit you have shown."

As the 43 personnel marched past on the last afternoon of 1970, the click of polished military boots could be heard in an even, regulated beat, echoing through the armories.

Training, which included a night exercise at Point Anne, was basically that of infantry.

"This is what we are here for . . infantry training," said the retiring Colonel, "we are tradesmen second."

The recruits received training in handling the rifle, drill, first aid and map using. The advanced personnel received training in defence, withdrawal, battle drills, night patrolling, and target indication.

The 11 recruits, now on a higher pay ratio as trained soldiers will join the militia in its 1971 program which Col. Allan outlined in brief.

Winter training will go into effect on Jan. 9 and 10, the militia receiving instruction in winter survival.

In February, the Hasty Pees will take part in exercise competitions at Camp Petawawa.

Summer soldier programs are expected to continue again this year, with young men receiving training in militia avtivities both in the field and in the armories.

Special exercises in June will coincide with the termination of the school year. Arrangements have been made with the provincial government for students in militia to enter the service right after school finishes, thereby allowing them to benefit from summer jobs elsewhere.

Colonel Allan has served 11 years with the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment, three years as commanding officer.

Major Jack Richardson of Peterborough will assume the role of commanding officer and become Lt.-Col. of the regiment.

A special ceremony will take place sometime in January.

"LOVE" . . .

If I speak with the eloquence of men and of angels, but have no love, I become no more than blaring brass or crashing cymbal. If I have the gift of foretelling the future and hold in my mind not only all human knowledge but the very secrets of God, and if I also have that absolute faith which can move mountains, but have no love, I amount to nothing at all. If I dispose of all that I possess, yes, even if I give my own body to be burned, but have no love, I achieve precisely nothing.

This love of which I speak is slow to lose patience — it looks for a way of being constructive. It is not possessive: it is neither anxious to impress nor does it cherish inflated ideas of its own importance.

Love has good manners and does not pursue selfish advantage. It is not touchy. It does not keep account of evil or gloat over the wickedness of other people. On the contrary, it is glad with all good men when truth prevails.

Love knows no limit to its endurance, no end to its trust, no fading of its hope: it can outlast anything. It is, in fact, the one thing that still stands when all else has fallen.

For if there are prophecies they will be fulfilled and done with, if there are "tongues" the need for them will disappear, if there is knowledge it will be swallowed up in truth. For our knowledge is always incomplete and our prophecy is always incomplete, and when the complete comes, that is the end of the incomplete.

When I was a little child I talked and felt and thought like a little child. Now that I am a man my childish speech and feeling and thought have no further significance for me.

At present we are men looking at puzzling reflections in a mirror. The time will come when we shall see reality whole and face to face! At present all I know is a little fraction of the truth, but the time will come when I shall know it as fully as God knows me!

In this life we have three great lasting qualities — faith, hope and love. But the greatest of them is love.

Fashion and Violence

Incredible as it may seem in a country where the latest statistics show a sharp percentage increase in all forms of violence, from rape and robbery to homicide, the latest fashion fad in the United States is the wearing of cartridge belts.

We might put it down to simple-mindedness, immaturity or something enjoyed in adolescence, if it were not for the fact that adults are hooked on this dangerous nonsense. Pictured wearing one over an all-black outfit with pants tucked into some kind of leggings was Mrs. Robert C. Scull, wife of a New York art collector and taxi fleet owner.

Mrs. Scull, who wore the outfit to a party thinks the belts are "cute and amusing" and says she "feels like Butch Cassidy" when she wears one. Well she may find she attracts the wrong kind of attention with this sort of rig; some bandit might take her for real and want to take that cartridge belt — or worse.

Psychiatrists probably have an explanation for this, that it satisfies the basic repressed violence in the individual, or elevates him to the status of the lone hero in a "High Noon" situation.

Meanwhile, the latest figures from the FBI are not encouraging. We caught just a passing glimpse of them on television the other night but as we recall murders were up nine per cent, assaults some 15 per cent and rape two per cent.

A glance at the detective magazines also tells the story of what is happening day in day out in the United States — a young reserve police lieutenant, fatally shot in Indianapolis, and a companion wounded in a shootout with bandits fleeing from a store they had held up; a woman and her 11-year-old son slain — both shot in the back of the head as they lay on the floor of their Ohio store.

Law and order in the United States is the proverbial "impossible dream." It has always been thus and it is even more defiant of solution today. The police, understaffed and overworked, rush hither and yon, sirens screaming, but too often they are too late or get gunned down. Maybe if the President were to call out the National Guard and put them on regular duty in likely hold-up spots, or even in suburban streets, as a backup to the police, we might begin to see a dent in the armor of the bandits who terrorize American society today.

Prescription Service

Regular users of prescription drugs will tell you that the thing they desire most in the new year is some sort of system which will improve coordination between doctors and druggists and cut out the red tape and irritating delays often experienced in obtaining a prescription.

One can call for a prescription and find that it has not yet been approved by the doctor (and goodness knows they are busy enough as it is, not to mention difficult to track down), a provision necessary, it seems, even when a number of "repeats" have been authorized in the first place. Again, one may find that the prescription has lapsed, or the law has been changed and it must be re-written.

Is it too much to expect, moreover, that names are spelled correctly on the prescription data? If the regulations governing the release of the drugs are so strict, and not forgetting their inflated cost, then the same care should be exercised in dignifying customers with their proper names — a piece of advice, incidentally, which might be noted by the public generally when it comes to getting names down correctly.

New Bridge

The new Dundas Street bridge is proving its worth and drivers have adapted to its use rapidly and in relative safety. We say "relative safety" because as things stand, with only two-lane traffic, one encounters the odd incident of potential danger. Like the bus which accelerated away on the inside lane, from the lights at Dundas and Front Street, squeezing cars on its left out of the way. There are among the bus and truck driving fraternity some who think that the size of their vehicles entitles them to barrel along with little regard for auto traffic. In relatively confined spaces such as the new bridge offers at present this could lead to trouble. In such circumstances there is a need for all drivers to exercise caution and courtesy.

Still Bucking 'Hard Line' Trend

Stanfield Gets It Between the Eyes from Students

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The way things have been going politically, it could only happen to Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

First he got hooked on the party's new "youth syndrome," buying the advice of his amateur experts that the Conservatives could only wither on the vine if the party remained rooted in what they told him was its "elderly rural" environment.

Go, they counselled him, for what was described as "the urban youth vote."

So he did.

Impossible though it must have seemed even before he attempted it, and ludicrous as it was to turn out, he tried to be a "Trudy," going awkwardly through the motions and wearing some of the mod threads you would expect on Prime Minister Trudeau.

Then making his urban youth pitch, Mr. Stanfield went where the young are found in their greatest concentration.

Montreal and Toronto.

And whammo!

The kids socked it to him.

They turned out not to be the turned-on types he seemed to have expected, but instead sane and sober and to what must have been his surprise, very, very solid citizens.

He had gone to the two biggest cities to do a little heart-bleeding, as the Prime Minister in one of his tough moods might put it, over those few legal civil rights temporarily suspended under the War Measures Act in the battle against the terrorist FLQ.

You know what happened in Montreal, of course, when he defended his questioning position on the issue.

Some 1,000 Conservative party "militants," including representatives of the Quebec Progressive Conservative Students Association, gave him an uncomfortably chilly reception.

And Tory Student President Lawrence Weiser spoke of the young Conservatives' "disappointment" with his "soft line" on terrorism.

In your mind's eye, can you see Mr. Stanfield wincing and going "ouch?"

But now . . . over to Toronto.

There Mr. Stanfield appeared before the Grade Thirteens at Oakwood Collegiate.

And what did he do?

He had gone there with the same sort of "soft" pitch, and in reeling back from their demands that he should have taken a "harder line," he ticked them off.

The moment of "youth truth" hit him when Keith Tse, an 18-year-old Grade Thirteen Oakwood student coolly informed him that Mr. Stanfield's questioning of the need to invoke the War Measures Act to combat FLQ terrorism "was not very helpful," in either supporting an under-pressure government in the crisis or "keeping the country together in time of peril."

The Conservative - leaning Toronto Globe and Mail, with its own reporter on the scene, recorded that the students gave Stanfield critic Keith Tse 'a spontaneous burst of applause".

Was Mr. Stanfield upset?

"No," he reported, keeping his cool, "I really was not surprised at the support the young fellow got for his views.'

And why not?

Because, he responded, "it reflects the mood that is across the country.

"Obviously, he went on, "it goes right into our high schools."

Then he laughed at the mistaken notion, as he suddenly seemed to realize it was, that young people are supposed to be more small "l" liberal than their elders.

Seems a lot of them are turning out to be more small "c" conservative than Robert Stanfield himself.

Noting that student Keith Tse had scoffed at the idea that in facing down terrorism it might have been "extreme" for the Government to have invoked the War Measures Act, Mr. Stanfield confessed to be what he was quoted as saying "a little disturbed" by what he regarded as "the lack of concern for civil liberties" he had been encountering of late.

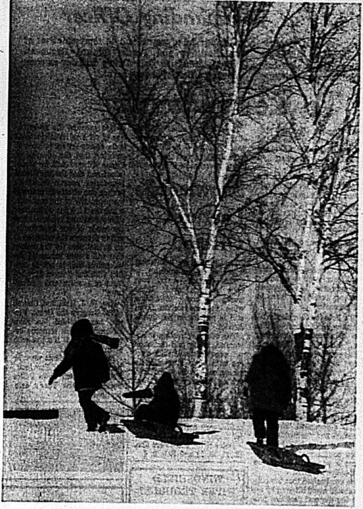
(The Stanfield people here still shudder when they face the day's mail. It has been that "hard line.")

Odd, is it not, that Mr. Stanfield and a small group of Conservatives — four at the greatest count — not only refuse to recognize what he admits is the "mood" of the country, but for some politically unfathomable reason seem to defy it?

He and his small band — with the great majority of the Conservative Caucus feeling just the opposite — can not comprehend, even when it is socked to them in the torrent of angry mail from the voters, presumably Conservative supporters, that the country has had far more than enough of the permissive "soft line" and demands some hard steel in political spines.

There was one other "spontaneous burst of applause" from the Oakwood Collegiate Grade Thirteens on that unhappy Stanfield Toronto day.

It came when "jokingly," as the Globe and Mail put it, he allowed as how he doubted whether he would ever be able to persuade Canadians to vote him into power as prime minister.



The Little People

Children go with the winter snow, as they do with the sun in summer. As 17th century writer John Locke put it: "Children generally hate to be idle. All the care then should be that their busy humor should be constantly employed in something that is of use to them." Children then are for all seasons. "I love these little people," said Dickens, "and it is not a slight thing, when they, who are so fresh from God, love us." (Picture by Ian Robertson)

A U.S. View of Canadian Hippies

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

There are many stories about the life of the hippies in big cities, but there is always something new. A visitor to Toronto from south of the border has his own impression of what he saw. "Things are bad at home," he said, "but in Canada it is even worse." Hippies with long hair and short skirts, soiled jeans or shapeless sackcloths look incredibly pathetic. They have left good homes to drift aimlessly on the streets to escape the realities of life. No jobs, no responsibilities, they are as free as birds, yet so miserable, their young bodies sag and they stare at people and sulk.

A group of them engaged in conversation was overheard by this man and strangely it was a young fellow reproaching an older man for not getting a job. The old man spoke up: "Look here," he said, "you expect me to find a job in winter, while you guys, young and strong, thousands of you, walk the streets, even in mid-summer. I am making my own without any help, and any job I would grab would reduce your own chances to make a living. Is this what you really want?"

To be fair, not all hippies are of the same mind. Some have learned their lessons and would return to the life they left, if they only had the courage to cut loose from the gang and make the first step to contact the old folks back home.

City celebrants welcomed the New Year in one of the gayest round of parties seen here in years, despite the fact the diapered cherub's inauguration was held on a Sunday midnight. Those who depended on radio music for their dancing rhythms did well if they followed the different networks' program across the continent.

January 1, 1941, will be a red letter day in the history of the Belleville Fire Department. It was January 1, 1916, just 25 years ago, that 10 men who had served the city in the capacity of voluntary fire fighters were taken on permanently. Prior to that date, only the three drivers who looked after the horses, the motive power of the fire - fighting equipment of that date, were permanent members. Only two members of the present force, Fire Chief William Lynch and Captain Frank Orr, were with the voluntary unit in 1916. Chief Brown was the first chief; George Campbell acted as the first assistant chief and James Clement as captain.

Rideau Canal's Future

Kingston Whig-Standard

In declaring its two-year moratorium on electrification and modernization of locks along the Rideau Canal system, the federal Department of Transport indicated a new willingness to listen to appeals for preservation of the historical character of the canal, as well as statements of support for government policy. It should be the responsibility of all municipal governments, groups and individuals interested in the future of this waterway to make their views known to Ottawa.

Stretching over 100 miles, the Rideau Canal provides invaluable opportunities for enjoying non-urban forms of recreation amid superb surroundings. It should be preserved as a quiet waterway where local resident and visitor alike can enjoy some relief from the pressures and machinery of modern society. Ideally, it should be a national park. In any case it should be kept, so far as possible, in its original condition because that is its main attraction.

The Dominion Government could spend years improving the Rideau waterway without any way destroying its beauty or its historical authenticity. Indeed, since the electrification of the Newboro locks and the erection of the anachronistic control building, there is evidence of much better government preservation on the Rideau. Where the Rideau is concerned, government dedication to "speed" and "efficiency" must be tempered with common sense. Anything which alters the colonial charm of the locks is vandalism.

Kingston City Council has fought for the preservation of historic sites in the past. The Rideau Canal is perhaps the finest relic of nineteenth century engineering in this country a monument to human achievement. Council should inform the Department of Transport that the City of Kingston favors improvements of the Rideau Canal system, but improvements which do not destroy in any way the beauty or historical authenticity of this waterway.

Abortions Show Sharp Increase

Has Public Been Lured Into Easy Acceptance?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

If you do it right you can get away with murder.

Ironically, the trick is to present the killings in a manner appealing to the finest instincts of the public: pity and love. The means includes confusing the people by questioning the obvious, e.g., when does human life begin? Then declare or give the impression that in its developing environmental state it is a nonentity. Here the game is almost won. Play on other emotions as required.

First, you must use a euphemistic word or phrase to hide the nature of the deed.

Second, you must have Government approval for the destruction of people. They will only add to pollution if they live.

Third, it must be a clean professional job, leaving no tangible evidence.

Presentation does count you know.

Never forget that the words you use to make destruction of human life acceptable are of the utmost importance. Do not use words that include the suffix "cide" because that means to kill and may put people off. You will find the suffix in homicide, aborticide and feticide. So it is better to refer to early severing of the human life-line as abortion. You can hear that word as softer and palatable to the public. That was apparent even to backstreet quacks who are accused of butchering thousands (?) of women, though no actual figures were ever given. The public visioned their hideouts as dirty and frightening. Ugh!

When the killing, with elastic provisions, has the legal sanction of "good and respectable men" of Government as a step toward achieving a Just Society, the public will accept abortion, aborting or terminat- what was once abhorrent.

Isn't it lovelier if the killing is performed in the sterilized rooms of accredited public hospitals, in which incidentally, everyone has a share through their hospital and medicare premiums? There, masked surgeons, assisted by pretty efficient nurses, all dressed in sanitary white, perform their functions in the approved killing of the unwanted child with precision, unhampered by the threat of prosecution. The extracted human embryos and fetuses find their way with the garbage into hospital incinerators. Now, isn't that a nicer and more assuring presentation than back streets, etc. The sales pitch is that it is safer and cheaper too.

You can see it is easy to get away with nowadays. So easy that when the Government's dispenser of facts, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, gave the figures, the newspaper headlines: "4,500 Legal Abortions in a Year" shocked only a few "squares" into public protest.

How many clergymen protested? In one community these killings jumped from 28 in 1968 to 537 in the 12 months preceding September 30, 1970. The physician who in a Letter to the Editor gave these figures stated half the mothers were unmarried. Did this astounding suggestion of widespread fornication and whether the mental and physical health of these women was in fact in danger, prompt the Editor to investigate and publish the findings? On the other hand, it is said CBC Weekend televised the procedure of aborticide (I should say abortion) without raising too much of a tempest.

Imagine the howls of consternation and protest which would have ensued if a plague were to kill the same 4,500 embryos and fetuses after they had developed to the next stage in babyhood. Here we have equally definite deaths and no fuss at all.

Use the soft approach, like ing the pregnancy and you can get away with murder and day, except in Catholic hospitals. There the soft wordage is recognized as a covering for a crime which they will not permit on their premises.

LEONARD C. WALSH,
Hamilton.

Jesuit Enjoyed Astronomer Role

HALIFAX (CP) — The young Jesuit became an astronomer by coincidence, and the science changed the course of his life.

Rev. Michael Burke-Gaffney, now 73 and professor emeritus of St. Mary's University, entered the Society of Jesus 50 years ago. At the time the Jesuits in Canada had no astronomers in their order, and astronomy has long been a tradition among the Jesuits.

"So the Father Superior looked around for someone to turn into an astronomer, and spied me," recalled Father Burke-Gaffney who had become familiar with the stars as a survey engineer in Ireland.

As an engineering graduate of the National University of Ireland, the Dublin-born priest constructed airfields in England during the First World War and later came to Canada, where he designed bridges in Manitoba.

"There was great satisfaction in conceiving a design and seeing it through to reality," he said in a recent interview. "But I was just making money for myself. And I began to lose satisfaction in that. In Manitoba, I saw the need for more priests and teachers and I thought I could do more."

Father Burke-Gaffney welcomed the decision that he become an astronomer after three years of teaching chemistry in the order.

"I was glad to get out of chemistry. I had spent an awful lot of time in my lab, boring corks and bending tubes. This was a breath of fresh air."

He spent the next several years in Washington, D.C., studying for his master's degree and doctorate in astronomy at Georgetown University.

At Georgetown, Father Burke-Gaffney became fascinated with the science, learning that it had wider appreciation in past centuries. Astronomy was a required subject as late as the 19th century in Oxford, Cambridge and Dublin.

"Even further back, in the 12th and 13th centuries, you had to have astronomy to earn a degree in medicine. It was thought there was a correlation between what went on in the heavens and occurring illness," he explained.

"Of course much earlier, the Romans thought that when the moon was full some people went nutty. The word lunacy comes from the Latin word 'luna,' the moon.

"Thomas Aquinas, I think, took up the question of lunacy. He reasoned that, if the moon affects the tides, might it not also affect the humor in our bodies"

Has his life as an astronomer brought Father Burke-Gaffney closer to God

"I think it has. Astronomers are all good Christians. Astronomy does raise your heart.

"Sir Edmund Hillary said the mountains are there to be climbed. Well, we astronomers think the stars are there for us to study. And the more we discover, the more marvellous it is. It must have been started by God."

Until a recent heart attack, Father Burke-Gaffney would go up on the roof of the administration building on the campus here in the early morning hours and stare in amazement at the stars until dawn.

"Well, instead of packing up and going to bed as soon as I'd see the dawn coming, I'd stay put. And I used to watch the stars gradually disappearing in the sky with the coming of dawn."

Now he's not allowed to climb the stairs and has given up star-gazing, although space is still on his mind.

The still-spry Jesuit has little patience with people who argue against space exploration by claiming that if God had intended man to penetrate space, He would have put him there in the first place.

That argument reminds him of a cartoon he recently saw in a magazine.

"It showed a big jumbo jet, with nine-abreast seating. One lady, turning to another, said, 'You know, I don't think God ever intended us to fly nine abreast.'" Father Burke-Gaffney chuckled merrily into his beard.

Minister 'High on Jesus'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — "I get high on Jesus. I love that man."

For a minister the sentiment is familiar, the way of expressing it a little strange.

But then the man who spoke those words is a little strange, for a minister.

Brien Thrasher's parish is the semi-slum area of Kingston's north end, and here they have grown used to his long hair, Nehru jackets and flare-bottomed trousers.

When religious sensibilities are upset, it's usually at more-austere churches where he has driven as much as 400 miles to pound the message home with the assistance of a hard-rock band.

Mr. Thrasher's basic message is: "Fly high."

"We have everything we need already inside to fly high," he asserts. "You don't need chemicals to let yourself go."

He should know, for he has dealt with drug addicts, alcoholics and criminals, and set them to work helping people not much different from themselves.

His own rock group, the Mission, 's a good example of the rehabilitated at work.

Mr. Thrasher met the bass player in nearby Joyceville penitentiary, his lead guitarist in the Kingston criminal courts. The bass guitarist is a school dropout and one of the female vocalists used to be an alcoholic.

The reason for the band and the music is to make people happy, because happy people, he reasons, don't steal, don't drink themselves into oblivion and don't go to jail.

Happiness too, he says, is necessary for proper worship.

His methods may be drawn to some extent from his experiences during seven years as sales manager of a large Canadian firm

He appreciates the hopelessness of preaching anything to a generation that "has made sales resistance an art."

"You follow an order of worship. You know what's going on and what's going to happen. That gives you a security, see. But that's a false security and it leaves no room for what you feel or what you could feel."

But there's no great feeling of security when Mr. Thrasher is around, either in the pulpit or behind his electric piano.

Unsuspecting congregations are shaken by both his music and the directness of his message, but back at his home parish the only problem is finding space for the crowds.

New Methods Turn Up

NEW YORK (AP) — Many American churches, faced with declining participation, are hunting ways to revitalize their work. And a growing number are finding means to do it.

A new, closeup look at the pattern in cities across the country has turned up a burgeoning, varied tide of fresh methods and broadened, diversified ministries among churches that have attained increasing strength.

In them, "change is the order of the day for congregations and clergy alike," relates Joan Thatcher, after a year spent in travel and research gathering material for the study on church renewal trends.

"The basic discovery of the church renewal movement seems to be that worship and service belong together in Christian life," she reports. A "balance is needed between reflection and involvement, prayer and protest marches."

The churches examined in the survey, in achieving their vitality and effectiveness, have employed a wide range of programs and functions for all sorts of people and ages. The activities include:

Coffee houses, guitar-strumming folk worship services, Bible study and discussion units, weekend retreats, an array of special interest groups such as in art and drama, counselling services, tutoring, apartment-house and street ministries, programs to help runaway addicts or those needing employment or housing.

In many areas, the efforts become ecumenical, inter-church endeavors.

A MASTER LETTER - WRITER

". . . and so letter writing became an important part of his life, a daily ritual." — Morton N. Cohen.

* * *

A MOST HAPPY NEW YEAR, EVERYONE!

As is hand in glove, snow in winter, or cream in coffee, so is answering letters ever a part of the (now passing) holiday season. And here, offered by a famed 19th century author, for whom letter-writing was a way of life, "I have to write about 2,000 letters a year," are some pointers on the subject:

1. Read the letter received again so you know what to say.
2. Then address and stamp the envelope before writing the letter. This prevents hurredly illegible written addresses.
3. Include return address "in full" and the date "in full".
4. Golden Rule: Write legibly. The whole human race, he assures us would have a sweeter disposition if this faithfully adhered to.
5. Don't write more than a page and a half of apologies for not having written sooner.
6. Begin by dealing with your friend's last letter.
7. Answer all his questions.
8. Don't repeat yourself.
9. Don't make "severe remarks".
10. Enclose all things you say you are enclosing.
11. Don't try to have the last word in an argument.
12. Make the letter-ending friendly "even if a shade more friendly (than the friend's) it will do no harm!"
13. Postscripts are fine, but "are not meant to contain the real gist of the letter."
14. Last, but not least — take the sealed letter in hand and post at once. If you put it in your pocket, you will come home with it still there, for you will forget to post it.

Our mentor not only lived up to most of his rules, but wrote a large variety of letters: on religious, educational, mathematical, scientific and artistic subjects. Numerous celebrities were among his correspondents: Alfred Tennyson, Joyn Ruskin, George Du Maurier, Charles Darwin and many others.

But his most interesting letters are to little girls, to children whom he knew how to please. They were his real and only friends, "they are three-fourths of my life" and for these he created lovely whimsies and flights of fancy, among which all the world knows and loves as "Alice in Wonderland."

Yes, our instructor is none other than the beloved Lewis Carroll whose real name was Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, who escaped as a most shy person with a stammer from going out into society by entering the realm of writing and receiving letters: to become also one of the world's great prolific letter writers.

Soviet System Recommended For Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Elements of the Soviet Union's child care system, including overnight and weekly care and preventive health measures, could easily be adopted in Canada, Dorothea Teakles says.

Mrs. Teakles recently returned from a three-month survey of child care centres in the Soviet Union, Finland and Sweden. Her trip involved a continuation of her studies of the Russian language as well as a study of day care centres, a service which she performed for the International Council of Women, of which she is a member.

In a report on that trip, she said Soviet day care centres aren't free or compulsory but they do come under the federal education department. The main goals are fostering good health habits, teaching children that they are units in a collective society, and emphasis on the fundamental Soviet assumption that personal gain is secondary to the common good.

Though Mrs. Teakles said she was concerned about the Soviet emphasis on group activity, she was impressed by the childrens' health and did not see one unhealthy-looking child in the U.S.S.R.

She attributed much of this to the Soviet system of preventive hospitals.

Some centres took weekly or even annual boarders, plus provision for family emergencies. However day care was not universal. In large cities about 70 per cent of the people could use day care services but in smaller cities it averages about 20 per cent.

Living space is cramped and food is plentiful, but queues often develop from poor distribution and uncertain supply, Mrs. Teakles said. Two hot meals and an afternoon snack are served.

Each group has two teachers and two nurses who alternate six-hour shifts. Teachers, selected for ability with children, are usually trained for a year. Directors have five years of training. Centres also have visiting dentists.

The day's routine includes play, nature periods, music and dancing. Children's books are plentiful.

Mrs. Teakles visited centres in Moscow and Stalingrad and in Helsinki, Finland, she saw a department store day centre. She also visited one of Helsinki's eight homes for unwed mothers, which are financially supplemented by the city if their clients cannot pay.

In Sweden she saw three types of centres expected this year to handle more than 93 000 children for full-time working mothers and part-time working mothers.

Tiffany Once Called His Glass 'Favrile'

Louis Comfort Tiffany was born in 1848 of wealthy parents. His father was a jeweller, Charles Lewis Tiffany and the name is perpetuated as Tiffany and Co.

Louis Tiffany was trained as an artist and studied under George Inness and Samuel Coleman in the States and then spent five years training in Europe. From his travels he developed an interest in mosaics and then revived the mosaic theory for the manufacture of stained glass. He maintained that glass should not be painted but should be cut in small pieces of pure color and then assembled like a mosaic to form the design.

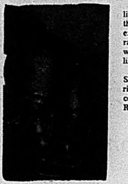
In 1878 he organized Louis C. Tiffany and Associated Artists. One of his early commissions that attracted attention and imitators was a decorative screen for the White House.

Tiffany did not like the quality and color of current glass makers and decided to manufacture his own. His glass works started as the Stourbridge Glass Co., but became known as Tiffany Furnaces and the Tiffany Glass Co.

Tiffany called his glass Favrile and much is marked with that name. He gave a number of explanations for the word Favrile. In one explanation he said it was from the Latin "faber", meaning "a worker in any hard material" or "ingenious, skilfull". On other occasions he said it was old English "fabrile" meaning "pertaining to a craft or craftsman", or that it was German "farbe" meaning color.

Favrile has come to mean art glass of the type made by Tiffany in the period up to his death in 1933 and strictly speaking it should not be applied to any of the imitations, even those of his former workmen.

In 1900 Tiffany was asked to design a lamp for Mrs. Curtis Freshel of Boston. Her home was surrounded by wisteria. Tiffany asked $10,000 for a single lamp with a stained glass shade of wisteria design. He agreed to make the lamp for $5,000 if he could be permitted to produce others of identical design. Mrs. Freshel got her lamp at half price and Tiffany produced copies. Even at $5,000 the lamp was a bargain. It currently sells for $10-$20,000. The most recent sale, last summer, recorded in London was for $16,000.



Picture Credit: The Metropolitan Museum of Art

Tiffany produced a vast range of decorative glassware, most so distinctive as to be unmistakable. Poor imitations of his stained glass shades were once as cheap as $15. They are now about $200 to $450. His original stained glass work occasionally turns up for his production was extensive. They are signed somewhere on the piece with a variation of his name, L. C. Tiffany, Tiffany Studios, Tiffany Glass and Decorating, "Favrile", and are worth considerably more than $450.

The cheapest items, ink wells and wine glasses, if signed, bring $75 to $100. Items like those illustrated bring several hundred and certain vases run to over $1,000.

USE MEASUREMENT

When making clothes for small girls, always choose patterns by body measurement rather than by age.

Ann Landers

Father of Twins Has No Legal Rights

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Three years ago I met a girl at work. She was separated from her husband. We fell in love. When she became pregnant I wanted to marry her but she decided to go back to her husband. She had twins and I was proud as can be.

The twins are the smartest and cutest little boys I've ever seen. I hope you won't think I am conceited when I tell you they look exactly like me. I want to marry this girl and raise the boys more than anything in the world. The trouble is the girl's husband — he likes the kids very much, too.

Last night I begged her to reconsider. She told me to get lost and stop pestering her. What are my rights? These boys are mine. I am willing to fight for them in court if I have to. Aren't there laws for people like me? — ROBBED.

DEAR ROBBED: Yes, there are laws — but they read like this, Bub: Children born to a woman who is married belong, legally, to her husband. Since you seemed to be so freaked out over kids, who don't you find a nice single girl and leave this woman alone? Take her advice. Get lost.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What can be done about party-line hogs who tie up the phone for hours? We know who these people are and have spoken to them several times in a courteous and gentle manner but it's the same as talking to the wall.

When we are on the phone they cut in with, "Quick, get off. I have to call the rescue squad. The baby just swallowed a safety pin." We get off and listen, and who do you think they called? The liquor store to order a six pack of beer and a fifth of gin.

A neighbor told us if we report these people to the telephone company we might have to go to court to prove the charges and risk getting sued for defamation of character. We don't want to get into trouble. Please tell us what to do. — BIZZY LINE.

DEAR LINE: Your neighbor gave you the wrong information. The telephone company doesn't insist that you do anything but pay your bill.

Report your problem to the complaint department and they will do their best to help you. They will contact the "hogs" and request co-operation. Usually they get it. If they do not succeed, you might get a new phone number and a new party. Few firms can match the telephone company for co-operation and service. (New York is an exception.)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 28. My girl is 24. We've officially engaged for six years. She is my first serious sweetheart and I am hers.

About a year ago she started to leave her engagement ring at home. When I asked her why she said she was allergic to the metal. So I had the stone reset in platinum instead of gold. Three months ago she started not to wear her ring again. This time she said it bothered her when she typed. Last week she asked me if I'd mind if she had a date with the personnel manager. I said, "Of course I'd mind." She has gone into one of her three-day sulks and I am getting fed up with her moodiness. What is your advice? — PUSHING 30.

DEAR PUSH: Set the prisoner free. She's beginning to suspect the world is not bound on the north, south, east and west by you. Take back the ring and tell her to date anybody she wants to. And you should do the same. You two may wind up together yet, but you both need to see some new faces.

Programs Can Change Laggards Into Self-starters

By DORIS CLARK

"Even if the world owes you a living, you have to be your own collector".

Incentive programs in industry offer everything from cash bonuses to automobiles and trips abroad to induce people to work harder, produce more, sell more, earn more. Though these programs usually accomplish their purpose while they last, can they permanently change laggards into self-starters?

"They can and do," says Bernard A. Marden of Marden-Kane Inc., one of the leaders in the business of devising such programs. "Take the case of a salesman who doubled his business during a six-month company contest and won a trip to Europe.

"This gave him a taste for foreign travel. He determined to see other parts of the world. So he set out to earn more to gratify the new desire. By that effort he became a self-starter." — From a Reader's Digest publication

Dear Doris: I read your column in the Western Producer. I need advice from you and would be very grateful for it about my personal problem.

I met a widow with two boys and have been seeing her regularly. We want to marry. I love this woman dearly. She's 49, I'm 48 and single.

She is an R.C., fairly strong in her religion. I'm a Protestant. She tells me her religion will not interfere with our marriage. Would this work?

The boys are 14 and 16 years; they are a problem to me in several ways., even though she has tried to bring them up decently and loves them very much. These boys think only about cars and running around. I don't see eye to eye here. I am a bit old-fashioned.

She can make me happy in all other aspects of marriage. I know. — Bachelor

Dear Bachelor: You love her. My guess is that love will find a way.

A mixed marriage holds certain pitfalls, but at your age you can face the facts squarely and with some understanding.

I'm not surprised that a 48 year-old bachelor finds today's teen-agers tough to tune in with. Yet these boys have feelings, need love, are growing up in different times from your own teen-age years. Can you remember some of the mischief and fun you enjoyed when you were their age — even if it wasn't in a sports car?

If you can give them love, and wait with good humor and patience for their response and their respect, you'll make it. Forget about the long hair, the loud music, and all the other so-called shockers.

Dear Doris: I would like to know if any readers have old dolls or parts they would like to part with. Am looking also for an Eaton's Beauty doll or body; and foreign dolls or costumes for dolls. — Dolls Wanted.

Dear Dolls: Doubtless we could help. I hereby hand it over to readers.

A Low-Slow Method of Roasting Beef

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Would you please send a copy of your low-slow beef roasting method to my daughter in Kamloops, B.C.? — Mrs. F. B. R.

ANSWER: I think this is a great way to start off the New Year — with an answer for Low-Slow roasting method for beef for it is one of my pet projects. Copy will go to your daughter promptly.

LOW-SLOW METHOD OF ROASTING BEEF

My roast was rolled prime rib, weighed 4½ lbs. I asked the butcher for beef hung two weeks; then kept it six more days in my refrigerator. So it was "hung" for 20 days. The age and quality of the beef is important. Just before roasting I spread the whole surface of the meat with this mixture:

1 tbsp. vinegar
¼ tsp. allspice
¼ tsp. black pepper
½ tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. paprika
1 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. brown sugar

I rubbed this well into all surfaces of the meat. I placed it on a small trivet in a small roasting pan (no water, no cover) and put it in the oven at 1:00 p.m. for dinner at 7:30 p.m. with the temperature at 200 deg. Fahr. At 4:30 I reduced the temperature to 175 deg. Fahr. The roast was well done on the outside and "rare" on the inside and fork-tender. If you do not want your beef rare, roast the meat at 200 deg. Fahr. for the full 6½ hrs. if it is the same weight as mine. There is no shrinkage. This amount serves eight.

This method of roasting beef is highly recommended for four major reasons: 1) it makes lovers of rare beef ecstatic; 2) there is no shrinkage which pleases the hostess; 3) if any is leftover it may be wrapped in foil and reheated for 1 hr. at 200 deg. Fahr. for another meal of hot roast beef; 4) the juices in the meat are all retained. The beef you have so carefully selected and roasted is never dry and hard.

You can try it with a standing rib (with bones in it) or a rolled Porterhouse. If your roast does not weigh 4½ lbs. you will have to adjust the timing. If it weights 5½ lbs. increase time by 1 hr.

LETTER: I have a little hint. I bought a new vacuum cleaner. The salesman warned me if we have a Scotch pine tree not to use the vacuum cleaner to pick up needles as they plug the cleaner. Maybe I can help on getting the tree out. Each year when it comes time to throw out the tree, I spread a sheet or blanket on the floor beside the tree. Then I lift the tree out and lay it on the sheet and wrap the sheet around it. With someone to help take it out, I take it outside and then take the sheet off and shake off the needles. It really saves a lot of work and there is only a little mess to clean up after. Before I always had a trail of needles right across the living room. — Eileen I.

ANSWER: Eileen thank you for sending this late last December. We have saved it all year to use today.

Stress In Cities Challenge Of The 70s: PM

TORONTO (CP) — Economic stresses, urban guerrillas and mushrooming cities may be the challenges of the 1970s, Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday in a New Year's Eve telecast.

Interviewed by Tom Gould, executive producer of news features and public affairs, in a CTV network special, the prime minister said:

"Each decade . . . has asked for responses from Canadian governments and the Canadian people. . . .

"In the '30s it was the depression; in the '40s it was the challenge of the war years and in the '50s it had to do with decolonization and the cold war. . . .

"Sixties was the cancer of Vietnam, and I think we see a little bit what the challenge of the '70s might be: Very great economic stresses, the contradictions between the dangers of inflation on one side and unemployment or slow growth on the other; the new threat of urban guerrillas thrown off from the advances in technology; the growth of cities, which creates a whole set of new social and, indeed, police problems for societies."

The prime minister said he believes the Canadian people reacted with remarkable maturity to "the new set of realities" presented in 1970.

Asked whether the suspension of personal liberties and use of the military which marked the Quebec crisis were part of the pattern of future government responses, the prime minister said the reaction in Quebec was to "specific challenges of a terroristic nature."

"The future will not be a series of that type of answer," he promised.

"On the contrary, it will be a great awareness of how these challenges happen, why and what can be done to defuse them before they happen."

In future, he said, the accent will be on coming to grips with the causes of terrorism

Mr. Trudeau said he saw no clear connection between poverty and unemployment and urban guerrilla warfare, kidnapping and social radicalism.

"In the past, poverty led to strikes, led to many things, but it didn't lead to urban guerrilla warfare.

"It is doing so now because in the urban complex there is the infrastructure which commits it to operate."

Technology, the prime minister said, at once creates a psychological climate of rejection and anonymity and provides the technical means of violent protest.

"We should find a new set of values which will recreate or correct the disenchantment in our society and this is more important than having better police work or having the statistics on unemployment a bit more favorable."

On the economic front, Canadians appreciated that the government had had to fight inflation.

"They say now 'you've got to fight unemployment,' and this is fine," the prime minister said.

"The pressure's on us to do it and we've got to deliver. . . ."

Mr. Trudeau said his government is putting a greater priority on human, rather than material values.

A case in point, Mr. Trudeau said, were the amendments to the Criminal Code sections on abortion and homosexuality.

Although the changes were considered too far ahead of public opinion, public opinion now had caught up, and perhaps outstripped, the position the government had taken.

Mr. Gould: "Are you going to go ahead again in terms of abortion on demand?"

"It is quite obvious that the people are demanding much more," Mr. Trudeau replied.

"Now, how much of the people is something we will have to test in the House of Commons."

O'Keefe Deficit $100,000

TORONTO (CP) — O'Keefe Centre recorded a $99,788 operating deficit for the year ended Aug. 31 compared with a loss of $24,430 for the corresponding period in 1969, Metropolitan Toronto auditor Gordon Cuthbertson said Thursday.

Metro council entered into an agreement with The Performing Arts Corp. Ltd., in 1968 to buy O'Keefe Centre for $2,750,000 with the title to the land and 3,200-seat theatre to pass to Metro in 1978.

"It was a tough season and there was hardly anything on Broadway worth trying to get," said an O'Keefe Centre director.

In addition to meeting the operating deficit — expected to reach a maximum of $106,000 this season — Metro is required to pay realty and business taxes on the property. An estimated $387,000 was paid in 1969 and $420,000 in 1970 in taxes.

Municipal Spending Rose to $8 Billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Municipal governments, school boards and other local bodies in Canada increased total spending in 1970 by almost $1 billion to more than $3 billion, despite curtailment of outlays on public works and other capital projects.

Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Thursday that total local-government expenditure for 1970 was estimated to run to $8.3 billion, up by 13.5 per cent from the 1969 tally-revised downward from original estimates that year—of $7.3 billion.

Gross revenue, including transfers from senior governments, was estimated to rise to about $7.8 billion from just under $7 billion in 1969. Thus, the total municipal deficit in 1970 was estimated at $506 million, up from $324 million the previous year.

Original estimates in 1969 had called for a deficit of $851 million, but sharp budget-paring later reduced the debit. The bureau said 1970 estimates indicate that tight budgeting is continuing.

The total local spending of about $8.3 billion in 1970 compares with total provincial budgets of about $14 billion and a current federal budget of about $13.3 billion. Those figures include financial transfers of more than $3.5 billion to local government bodies from provincial and federal governments and more than $3 billion to the provinces from Ottawa.

Education accounts for just over half the local-government spending, increasing in 1970 to about $4.2 billion from $3.7 billion in 1969, excluding payments on debts.

The report says the advance in spending on education resulted from increases in current operations, which offset a reduction in capital spending. That reduction reflected reduced demand for accommodation because of a slower growth rate in the numbers of elementary and secondary pupils.

Bride Has Seagoing Job And Husband Waits Ashore

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An immigration law designed to prevent sailors from jumping ship is keeping two newlyweds apart so the landlocked groom is able to see his sea-going bride only a few hours every 11 days.

Ron Waller, 37, a Hollywood photographer, met Elizabeth Jane Clark, 27, of London, aboard the Greek liner Orpheus which travels between Los Angeles and Mazatlan, Mexico, with a stopover in San Diego. A British subject, she operates the ship's gift shop.

Mr. Waller had won a 11-day Orpheus cruise with actress Mariana Hill on the Dating Game television show.

"Mariana and I had a marvellous time together until I met Elizabeth and after three days it was God Save the Queen. It was just there and we knew it."

They were married Dec. 23 in Mazatlan.

Last Sunday the ship returned to San Diego but Elizabeth wasn't able to leave because she is technically a sailor and "no way is she going to jump ship," said Donald Williams, Los Angeles County deputy director of immigration.

The Wallers have become involved in the immigration law designed to prevent alien crew members from jumping ship in American ports, Williams said.

Waller said Elizabeth had a seaman's visa which allowed her to come ashore but that was revoked by immigration officials in San Diego. If she comes ashore the captain of the Orpheus is subject to a $1,000 fine.

"I don't know exactly what's going to happen," said Waller.

Waller said the ship will dock for a few hours Jan. 7 in San Diego and Los Angeles and "I plan on being at the boat both times."

Berkeley Cabs Being Run By College Grads

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Taxicabs painted in psychedelic red, yellow and blue whiz through this University of California community, part of the Berkeley scene.

Like many students and residents, the drivers have long hair, consider themselves hip and are determined to preserve their freedom.

"We're under no human pressure and have no bosses except ourselves," said Bob Schneider, a 57-year-old former teacher who founded Taxi Unlimited in 1961 with a single cab.

After a shaky start, the company has grown to 40 employees and 14 cabs.

It is a co-operative run by drivers and dispatchers. Drivers now make 80 cents an hour plus tips. Dispatchers get $1 an hour—both substantially below competing companies

But the freedom from rules, a four-day work week and self-ownership are invaluable fringe benefits say the Taxi Unlimited drivers—most of whom are 25- to 30-yera-old college graduates.

The fare scheduled for all cabs operating in the city is set by the city council. But Tayi Unlimited permits its drivers to pick up hitchhikers when they have no pending fares.

Taxi Unlimited's regular clientele is mainly the elderly, and some disabled persons. Drivers willingly run errands or buy groceries for mileage and time costs.

Employees also embark on community service projects.

The firm's major financial crisis in June, 1969, resulted from a company decision to rush injured victims of the bloody People's Park riots to hospitals.

Immediately afterward, its insurance was dropped. Wages dropped to 25 cents an hour then ceased for two months until new insurance was found.

For eight months after U.S. troops entered Cambodia last spring, employees contributed one-tenth of their pay to bail funds for arrested anti-war protesters and to a free medical clinic.

Explosive 49er Offence Must Crack NFC's Scrooge Defence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A high-stakes test of strength between explosive offences and shock-proof defence unfolds Sunday with San Francisco 49ers making their first run for the big money against Dallas's often-frustrated Cowboys.

The 49ers and Cowboys go at each other at 5 p.m. EST for the National Football Conference Crown in a fight to the finish, with a sudden-death overtime if needed.

At stake in the game is a winner's share of $8,500 per player and a shot at the $15,000 winner's share in the Super Bowl opposite the victor of the American Football Conference title game between Oakland and Baltimore.

The NFC finale pits a potent San Francisco attack, led by venerable quarterback John Brodie, against the conference's toughest defensive club down the stretch.

It will be nationally televised by CBS.

Rain fell Friday night on old Kezar Stadium, from which the 49ers will move to Candlestick Park next season, but Sunday's weather forecast was for mostly clear skies with temperatures in the 50s.

As both teams tapered off today after a week of intense preparations, the 49ers remained slight betting favorites to win the title that has eluded them for 25 years and repulse Dallas' fifth championship bid in as many seasons.

Green Bay nipped the Cowboys for the National Football League title in 1966 and 1967 and Cleveland handed them demoralizing setbacks in the 1968 and 1969 divisional playoffs.

This year, the Cowboys haven't had a touchdown scored against them for 21 consecutive quarters.

The 49ers will count on the 35-year-old Brodie, top passer in the NFC, to surmount the Cowboys' defensive might.

Brodie, San Francisco's signal caller for 14 seasons, completed 59 per cent of his passes in regular season play for almost 3,000 yards. Half of his 24 touchdown strikes went to Gene Washington, a slim, longball threat who snared 53 passes in all, averaging 20.8 yards per catch.

Dallas quarterback Craig Morton can't match Brodie's figures and his passing has been hampered in recent weeks by a painfully bruised right elbow. But the Dallas running game, paced by rookie Duane Thomas, is the best in the NFL.

San Francisco was No. 1 in total offence with a per-game average of 321.6 rushing-passing yards. Dallas was third at 317.8.

The Dallas defence, anchored by perennial all-pro tackle Bob Lilly, was the conference's fourth best statistically, four pegs above the 49ers.

Colts Revive Old Rivalry

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Colts, spurned by their new American Football Conference colleagues all season, meet Oakland Raiders Sunday in a conference championship game that contains the lingering bitterness of the old AFL-NFL rivalry.

Coach Don McCafferty of the Colts, whose team moved from the old NFL to join 10 former AFL teams in the American Conference this season, has quietly tried to squelch thoughts that the clash of former rivals contains the ingredients inherent in previous AFL-NFL combat.

But John Madden, the young coach of the Raiders, has proudly waved the AFL banner and insisted:

"This will be just like the American Football League against the National Football League."

Centre Bill Curry of the Colts all but agrees:

"We came into a new league this season and nobody wanted to see us win the championship. And they still don't."

McCafferty, meanwhile, has tried to tone down that aspect of a game—to be televised by NBC at 2 p.m. EST—which will send the survivor into the Super Bowl Jan. 17 against the winner of the National Conference title game between Dallas and San Francisco.

"AFL—NFL, it doesn't mean a thing," McCafferty said. "The only thing we'll be thinking about Sunday is beating another team—nothing else."

Neither club is a stranger to post-season competition, both having moved all the way to the Super Bowl previously before losing. The Raiders lost to Green Bay in the second Super Bowl and the Colts bowed to New York Jets in the third Super Bowl.

Stylish Colts

Quarterback Earl Morall of the Baltimore Colts, who still has a somewhat outmoded crew cut hairdo, laughs as he views the pink jump suit and handbag worn by teammate Roy Jefferson. Jefferson, a wide receiver who has caught 45 passes this season, has several mod outfits that wow the Colts and the postgame crowds.

Nebraska Coach Defies Vatican To Pick Irish

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nebraska outslugged Louisiana State in the Orange Bowl Friday night to pass the corpses of previously top-ranked Texas and Ohio State, and coach Bob Devaney said:

"I don't see how the Pope could vote Notre Dame No. 1."

Cornhusker quarterback Jerry Tagge stretched across the LSU goal to give Nebraska a 17-12 victory before a record crowd of 80,699 at Miami in the last of four college football bowl games on New Year's Day.

Nebraska fans yelled, "We're No. 1," knowing top-ranked Texas had fallen to the Irish 24-11 in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas and No. 2 Ohio State was bumped off by Stanford in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., 27-17.

Nebraska had been No. 3 in the national rankings.

Losing LSU coach Chorlie McClendon agreed that Nedraska should be handed the national championship.

"Nebraska is similar to the Irish," said McClendon, "but the Cornhuskers will wind up No. 1—so they must be better."

Elsewhere in New Year's Day bowl action, fourth-ranked Tennessee walloped Air Force 34-13 in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans.

A new-fangled defence and some old-fashioned opportunism carried Notre Dame to its victory over Texas in the Cotton Bowl, ending the Longhorns' 30-game winning streak.

Notre Dame showed Texas a mirror image on defence of the Longhorns' powerful wishbone offence and the innovation paid off with Notre Dame's All-American quarterback Joe Theisman passing for one touchdown and running for two others.

Texas, which had not lost since the opening game of the 1968 season and had beaten Notre Dame 21-17 in the Cotton Bowl a year ago, fumbled nine times, losing five of them to the fired-up Irish, who went into the game ranked No. 6 in the U.S.

Theismann completed nine of 16 passes for 176 yards, including a 26-yard touchdown pitch to Tom Gatewood. His scoring runs came from three and 15 yards out.

Quarterback Jim Plunkett, winner of the Heisman Trophy as U.S. college football's most outstanding player this season, moved underdog Stanford to a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns that beat Ohio State in the Rose Bowl and jolted the national championship hopes of the Buckeyes.

Ohio had overcome a 10-0 Stanford lead to overtake the Indians and lead 14-10 at the half.

The margin was still 17-13 in the fourth quarter when Plunkett put together an eight-play, 80-yard touchdown march that put Stanford in front.

The Buckeyes went to the air and Jack Schultz's interception set up an insurance score for Stanford, making its first Rose Bowl appearance since 1952.

In the Orange Bowl, LSU slammed 75 yards to score on the third quarter's final play and take a 12-10 lead over the favored Big Eight champions, as Buddy Lee hit Al Coffee for the touchdown.

Tagge ignited Nebraska's go-ahead drive with a 16-yard keeper as the Midwesterners smelled a chance at the top ranking.

He fired passes for six yards to Dan Schneiss, nine yards to Johnny Rodgers and 17 to Jeff Kinney.

Kinney's clutch catch put the ball at the LSU five and three plays later Tagge—belted at the one-yard line—stretched his arms to push the ball into the end zone with 8:50 remaining in the game.

Tennessee, reputed to be a ground team, went to the air and used the passing of Bobby Scott to whip the Air Force in the Sugar Bowl.

Scott completed 22 of 40 passes for 288 yards and one touchdown and was named the game's most valuable player.

In Thursday night's Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston, Oklahoma tied Alabama 24-24 on Bruce Derr's 42-yard field goal in the final minute.

Mississippi plays Auburn in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., today.

Cavaliers Back in Losing Groove

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Guess what Cleveland Cavaliers lost a game.

The weak National Basketball Association expansion club recently put together a two-game winning streak, their only back-to-back victories.

Now they're back in the old groove, losing to Baltimore Bullets 127-105 Friday night for their second straight setback.

Earl Monroe and Jack Marin scored 22 points apiece as the Bullets racked up 30 points or more in each quarter and handed the tattered Cavaliers their 40th loss in 45 games.

Elsewhere in the NBA, San Diego Rockets beat Los Angeles Lakers 117-106 and Seattle Supersonics edged Portland Trail Blazers 121-118.

Baltimore took over at the start with a 3-2 lead and was never threatened. The Bullets had a 65-51 advantage at halftime and built their lead to 27 points in the second half.

Elvin Hayes pumped in 40 points to lead the Rockets to their first triumph over the Lakers in 13 games. Jerry West of Los Angeles led all scorers with 41 points.

Seattle saw its 10-point lead at the start of the fourth period wiped out by a Portland surge before Lee Winfield's free throw with five seconds remaining locked up the Sonics' victory.

Player-Coach Lenny Wilkens' 24 points and 23 by Pete Cross paced Seattle while Geoff Petrie of the Trail Blazers took scoring honors with 40 points.

In Thursday action Nate Thurmond and Jeff Mullins scored 34 points each as San Francisco Warriors grabbed an early lead, held off several Boston rallies and finally pulled away for a 144-106 rout of the Celtics.

In the only other NBA game, Pete Maravich scored 32 points to lead Atlanta Hawks out of a losing streak to a 119-85 victory over Cleveland Cavaliers.

At Boston, Mullins hit three straight baskets midway in the first period as the Warriors spurted to a 20-11 lead, and the Celtics could never catch up.

Encore Easy For Bev Boys

MONTREAL (CP) — Ken Sully of Burnaby, B.C., and Beverly Boys of Pickering, Ont., won the men's and women's one-metre diving events Friday in the first day of competition of the three-day Canadian Winter diving championships.

Both victories were repeats for the two divers, who won the same events at the summer championships in August.

Miss Boys, Canada's women athlete of 1970, totalled 380.22 points in the event, placing well above Nancy Robertson of Oshawa, Ont., who finished second. Elizabeth Carruthers of Edmonton and Kathy Rollo of Saskatoon finished third and fourth.

Miss Rollo was in second place but was edged out by the other two girls on their final dives.

In the men's division, Sully finished ahead of Ron Friesen of Saskatoon, 446.79 points to 437.76. Skip Phoenix of London, Ont., was well back in third spot with 369.21 points, followed by David Pope and Don Dion, both of Montreal.

Miss Boys won all three women's events—one, three and 10 metres—in the summer claimed the one-metre and three-metre crowns in the men's competition. Voitek Mejsak of Montreal is the men's tower diving champion.

Orillia Late Losers

BARRIE (CP) — Defenceman Jim Thompson scored with six seconds left in overtime play to give Barrie Flyers a 5-4 victory over Orillia Terriers before 2,400 fans in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A play Friday night.

For Thompson, it was his second goal of the night. He put Barrie ahead 2-0 midway through the second period after Corby Adams had scored the lone Flyers' goal in the first period.

The game broke wide open in the third when six goals were scored.

Dave Nicholishon, George Westfall, John Chasczewski and Gary Milroy scored for Orillia. Adams and Jim McCloskey replied for Barrie.

Barrie outshot Orillia 36-31.

'Ike' Rejoins Fold

ORILLIA (CP) — Ike Hildebrand has returned to coach Orillia Terriers in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

Hildebrand, who was Terriers' coach last year when they were defeated in the Allan Cup final in Spokane, Wash., said he did not return at the start of this season for business reasons.

A former National Hockey League player with New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks, Hildebrand succeeds Joe Kane who recently retired for the second time.

Sport Briefs

GLASGOW (CP) — Aberdeen moved three points clear at the top of the Scottish League First Division when it beat Dundee 3-0 in the traditional New Year's Day soccer program. Aberdeen, favorites to displace Celtic as Scottish champions, won its 13th successive match and has not conceded a goal in the last 10 games. Aberdeen is three points ahead of Celtic, whose game against Clyde was postponed because of snow. The shock result of the day was the 3-1 defeat of once-mighty Rangers, a confidence-sapping result in view of its meeting with Celtic Saturday. Rangers lost to Falkirk and the teams meet again in the third round of the Scottish Cup on Jan. 23.

Garrett Going Again

St. Catharines Black Hawks moved into third place in the tight Ontario Hockey Association Junior A race Friday with a 6-1 win over last-place Niagara Falls Flyers. The Black Hawks have 41 points, six points behind first-place Peterborough Petes, two behind Ottawa 67s and one ahead of Montreal Junior Canadiens. The Petes increased their lead over Ottawa Friday with a 5-1 victory over Kitchener Rangers. In the only other game ninth-place Oshawa Generals clipped fifth-place Toronto Marlboros 7-6. The pennant race is tighter than it first appears. Ottawa and St. Catharines each have three games in hand on the Petes and Montreal has four. Meanwhile Kitchener and Oshawa are still in the running with London Knights and Hamilton Red Wings for the sixth and final playoff berth. Peterborough goalie John Garrett played the key role at Kitchener as the Rangers blasted 50 shots at him. His team-mates scored on five of their 18 attempts. Tom Thomson scored twice, Randy Spencer, Ken Richardson and Rick Plumb once each. The only Kitchener goal went to Tom Cassidy.

Our Girls Worry World

TORONTO (CP) — Judy Crawford, a member of Canada's National ski team, says the women's team this year is the strongest ever. Miss Crawford, 19, said in an interview Thursday that European skiers are "beginning to worry about what we're doing." Miss Crawford, generally recognized as Canada's best downhill racer, said French girls continue to dominate teh sport but they are starting to look over their shoulders at the Canadians. She said the main reason has been plenty of preparation this year. "Everybody is stronger because of the amount of training we've been able to get in." she said. "In all, we had three months of preparation in Europe, plus Betsy Clifford, Laurie Kreiner and I skied last summer in Portillio, Chile." The Canadian girls are the youngest in world competition. Miss Clifford, Canada's top skier, is 17, the same as Miss Kreiner. Diane Culver of Montreal is 18, as is Diane Pratte of Rouyn, Que.

Shack Still Entertaining...

Bruins Too Busy to Applaud

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eddie Shack appears to be dispelling any fears his fans might have had over how the frolicking forward would get along with Punch Imlach when the two met at Buffalo.

The Entertainer, as he was known in his days with Toronto Maple Leafs, used to frustrate coach Imlach with his failure to take National Hockey League games seriously. So, when Imlach, now coach of Buffalo Sabres, acquired Shack from Los Angeles this season, eyebrows were raised.

But Shack revealed in a recent interview that he now is working harder than ever and enjoying the game more. He demonstrated the point Friday by scoring two goals and assisting on another to spark a comeback by the Sabres against Boston Bruins.

But the rally fizzled in the face of the powerful Boston scoring machine and the Sabres succumbed by a score of 9-4 in the only game played Friday.

Johnny McKenzie and Ken Hodge each scored twice in the first period and Dallas Smith and Derek Sanderson each added another goal early in the second to give Boston a 6-1 lead.

But Shack, who had assisted on Gil Perreault's first-period marker, scored twice and Gerry Meehan added another early in the final period to pull the Sabres back.

Buffalo goalie Joe Daley couldn't hold out against Boston's 40-20 shots-on-goal advantage and allowed two more goals by Fred Stanfield and one by Don Marcotte.

Daley, however, did manage to keep league scoring leaders Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr at bay. Esposito managed only one assist and Orr two. Veteran left-winger Johnny Bucyk collected five assists.

The win allowed the Bruins to widen their East Division lead to three points over New York Rangers, who could close the gap again tonight with a win over the Penguins at Pittsburgh.

The play of the two Boston right wingers, Hodge and McKenzie, Friday pointed out a threat to the all-star status of veteran Gordie Howe of the Red Wings.

With less than four weeks to the All-Star game in Boston, Howe is not among the top ten scorers and could be overlooked for the star right wing spot which he has held on first- or second-team choices for the last 21 seasons in a row.

Hodge, meanwhile, is the third highest scorer in the league and McKenzie fifth.

"It really is pretty hard to go by our two guys when you are talking about all-star right wings" Bruins coach Tom Johnson said after the victory in Buffalo

Thursday night was a big night for Sault St. Marie, Ont., natives.

Tony Esposito, Chico Maki, Jerry Korab and Louis Nanne all have two things in common.

They all played in the only two games Thursday night and they're all natives of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Maki scored two goals and Korab one as Chicago Black Hawks dumped Detroit Red Wings 8-3 in Front of the goaltending of Esposito. Nanne scored the only goal for Minnesota as North Stars fell 4-1 to Pittsburgh Penguins.

At Detroit, Maki, the 31-year-old right winger and veteran of 10 years with the Hawks, pumped in his 13th and 14th goals this season to give Chicago a 3-0 lead before 10 minutes had elapsed in the game.

Korab assisted on Chicago's first goal by Jim Pappin and one of Maki's before the husky rookie defenceman tallied for the third time in just 12 NHL games.

The Hull brothers from Point Anne, Ont. (Bobby and Dennis) and Lou Angotti rounded out Chicago's scoring.

Dennis knocked in his 15th and 16th this season while Bobby hit the 20-goal mark for the 12th consecutive season on a

Dennis knocked in his 15th and 16th this season while Bobby hit the 20-goal mark for the 12th consecutive season on a long screened slap shot during a third-period power play.

Mike Libett, Wayne Connelly and Tom Webster replied for the Wings, who have lost seven of their last eight games.

Campbell Seeks Walton Deal

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, spent the better part of the last day of 1970 discussing what will be his "No. 1 priority" in 1971.

Campbell spent close to five hours Thursday closeted with personal guarantors of notes held by the Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh against the Penguins

The NHL was forced to take over the running of the franchise from its former owners Dec. 1 when an approximate $5.5 million due the bank remained unpaid.

"That's my No. 1 priority for 1971 and we hope to have the Pittsburgh problem resolved before the end of the season," Campbell said in an interview.

Campbell said priority will be given to bidders interested in keeping the franchise in Pittsburgh. It has been reported that some of the more interesting offers have come from groups with an eye to moving the club to another city.

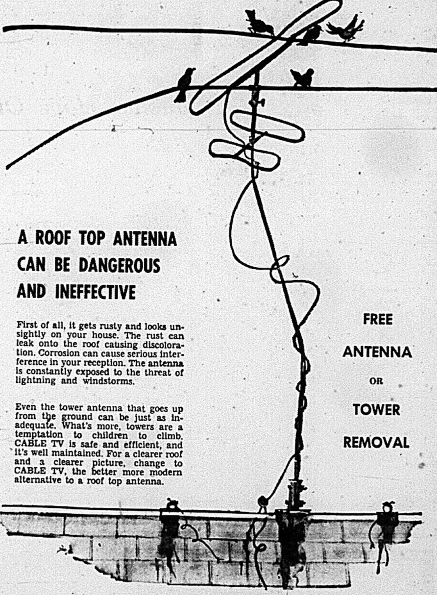
CLARENCE CAMPBELL

In another vein, the NHL president said he is attempting to encourage a trade between Toronto Maple Leafs and several other clubs to solve centre Mike Walton's problems.

Walton was suspended by the Leafs Dec 11 but Campbell had him reinstated on the strength of a report received from the player's personal psychiatrist.

As a result of his lifted suspension Walton loses no salary, Campbell said, as the reinstatement was retroactive to the date of suspension.

"Walton's personal psychiatrist says rehabilitation is unlikely in the circumstances of his current employment," Campbell said, explaining his interest in a possible trade.



A ROOF TOP ANTENNA
CAN BE DANGEROUS AND INEFFECTIVE

First of all, it gets rusty and looks unsightly on your house. The rust can leak onto the roof causing discoloration. Corrosion can cause serious interference in your reception. The antenna is constantly exposed to the threat of lightning and windstorms.

Even the tower antenna that goes up from the ground can be just as inadequate. What's more, towers are a temptation to children to climb. CABLE TV is safe and efficient, and it's well maintained. For a clearer roof and a clearer picture, change to CABLE TV, the better more modern alternative to a roof top antenna.

Long Hair Still Sport Topic

NEW YORK (CP) — The sports world seethes with controversy over a man's right to choose the length of his hair or the mode of his casual attire.

Earsell Mackbee, Minnesota Vikings' veteran cornerback was cut last month by coach Bud Grant of the National Football League club.

Mackbee insists the reason was not an old knee injury, which he says has healed, but the fact that he showed up for a couple of games in a red lace jumpsuit, fake fur maxi-vest with purple lining and slouch hat.

Grant, the former Winipeg Blue Bombers mentor who is known as one of the more liberal pro coaches in such matters, made no specific mention of Macbee's wild getup. But he did say that NFL rules require players on the sidelines to be identifiable with jacket or cape.

The pros leave it up to the individual clubs and standards vary.

New York Jets allow Joe Namath, their ailing quarterback, to wear a mop of black hair thick enough to hide his ears and an off-field wardrobe of frilly shirts, bell bottoms, Buffalo Bill jackets, mink and lace that would shame a peacock.

But Hank Stram, coach of the champion Kansas City Chiefs' levies automatic $500 fines for mustaches, goatees and overlong sideburns.

Hair styles have changed in the Canadian Football League since Grant left it three years ago.

Toronto Argonauts appear content to live with the flowing locks of Mel Profit and Bobby Taylor, provided their vision is unobstructed when somebody throws them a pass. And Calgary Stampeders permit halfback Rudy Linterman to elude his barber as long as he does his running in the direction of the enemy goal line.

Football is only one of the sports affected by the modern flair for Prince Valiant hair bobs, mutton-chop sideburns, striped trousers, frilly cuffs and beads.

Only two years ago, coach Punch Imlach forced Toronto Maple Leafs, on pain of suspension, to trim their sideburns to mid-ear.

Today, Derek Sanderson of Boston Bruins operates behind the facial camouflage of a Skye terrier and the National Hockey League has few rookies with crew cuts.

Baseball has turned up with modish dandies like Joe Pepitone and Ken (The Hawk) Harrelson and a cause celebre in the minors that provoked comment on the editorial pages.

Hank McGraw, brother of New York Mets' Tug McGraw, spurned an order by his manager at Eugene, Ore., a farm club of Philadelphia Phillies, to crop his flowing locks. He was suspended.

Civil rights groups and the Major League Players Association rallied to McGraw's defence and the embarrassed Phillies shipped the unshorn player to Hawaii.

Oshawa Here and There

Fairways Need Some Mufflers

The Belleville Fairways will have more on their minds than a chance to close ground on the final playoff spot in the Eastern Ontario Junior B League when they meet Oshawa in back-to-back games this weekend.

In their last meeting the Crushmen administered a 9-1 shellacking to the fifth place Fairways, the worst loss suffered by Belleville this year, with the exception of a 15-1 drubbing at the hands of the Ontario Games champion Peterborough Lions.

DANNY LUPENETTE

Belleville's biggest problem will be muffling high scoring forwards Steve West, Jim Robson and John Grant. Both West and Robson rely heavily on their blazing shots while the lanky Grant is a first-rate puck handler.

Fairway scorling leader Danny Lupenette is still shaking off the effects of a hip injury but was reported to be skating well in the team's Tuesday night practice.

Coach Floyd Crawford plans only one change from the line-up that won a 7-4 decision in Kingston and a 4-2 match against Trenton in their last two outings, with winger Tom Yohn reurning to a spot with Brian O'Coin and Dave Ferguson after seeing tournament action with the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets

The team hopes to have the services of left winger Dennis McCormack for both games before he returns to McMaster University. McCormack has given the team's third line a big boost in their last two games.

Belleville currently trails the fourth-place Cobourg Cougars by one point, with the Fairways holding three games in hand.

Coaches Have Own Opinions Why Mo-Hawks Enjoy Edge

Kingston coach Danny McLeod has his own reasons why he thinks Belleville Mo-Hawks are having such a field day with his Aces so far this senior hockey season.

McLeod says Mo-Hawk "old smoothies" like Dave Jones and Doug Senior can set the game's pace, almost mesmerizing the younger, less-experienced Aces and forcing them to commit mistakes by pressing.

Jones, who also happens to coach Belleville, has another version of why the Mo-Hawks enjoy a 4-of-5 success skein against their arch - rivals as they head into Kingston for their sixth meeting, a 7 p.m. Sunday game.

"You have to watch their wingers on that wide ice surface," Jones has said. "If our forwards can stick with their checks, it makes the defence's work a lot easier — and we'll get our share of breaks."

Going strictly by the record, Jones' reasoning would seem to be right.

In their five meetings to date, the Mo-Hawks have only yielded 10 goals, while scoring 23, an unusually strong defensive showing.

But the club needs some more of the same from goalie Steve Rexe Sunday night when they try to record their third win this season on Kingston ice.

The Aces will be minus winger Rod Graham in Sunday's game. Graham, who leads Kingston goal - getters with 15, tore some left knee ligaments after taking a check from Barrie defenceman Jim McClosky last weekend.

Graham, who had just returned from a one-game layoff over an eye injury, is now sporting a hip-to-ankle cast for at least three weeks, and probably will not be on skates much before the end of the regular schedule.

The Mo-Hawks are three points behind the fourth place Aces but enjoy one game in hand. They must also keep their eyes on Oakville, three points behind Belleville in the eight team Senior A standings.

Next home action for the Mo-Hawks comes Friday night in a 9 p.m. Memorial Arena match against third place Barrie Flyers.

Our Man at Oak Hills Takes His Skiing Lumps

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Al Raine should be sued for malpractice, misrepresentation and failure to communicate.

The head coach of Canada's National Ski team may feel that he can make any "Greene" skier into an international star, but he has a lot to learn in the field of passing on his wisdom to beginners.

After reading "Skiing with Al Raine" lesson number 4 for beginners, I decided to put Raine's seemingly sane and sensible theories to practical use, even without the benefit of lessons 1, 2, and 3.

"Sure come on out and we'll fix you up with the equipment that you need," enthused Oak Hills Ski Club owner Gord McGaughey when I approached him on the subject of beginning my rise to fame and fortune at his Stirling-area establishment.

While failing to rival St. Moritz, the Oak Hills club has earned acclaim from Quinte area ski enthusiasts and the club's five slopes promised to provide a thorough test of the Raine method.

It was comforting to know that there would be two ski patrol members with a background of ambulance training just in case Al and I made a slight slip.

I arrived at the Oak Hills Club on a sunny December afternoon and spent some time admiring the technique of the skiers of all ages and sizes skimming across the snowy surface.

"Al Raine aficionados," I thought confidently to myself. I had even gone so far as to bring along lesson number 5 for Intermediates — the Hop Stem Christie — just in case I really advanced quickly.

The Oak Hills owner helped me sort through an ominous assortment of laced boots, buckled boots, safety bindings and ski poles.

We settled on a pair of buckled boots because as McGaughey explains "the old saying is that while others are lacing you'll be racing." Oh yeah?

I clomped outside in my buckled boots feeling like the guest of honor at a Mafia pool party (in cement overshoes) to meet head instructor Gord Row who would be on hand in case there were a few minor points that Raine had missed.

There were.

Since lesson number 4 began, "As you slide down the hill. . ." there were some obstacles to overcome first, such as getting UP the hill.

"It generally takes about eight lessons to learn to parallel ski so I don't know how far we can get in just one, but we'll give it a try," smiled the instructor. Of course HE did not know about Al Raine being on my side.

After going through a few of the basics like turning, snowplowing and herring-boning, I began to feel a little less like Jean Claude Killy and a great deal more like King Kong auditioning for the June Taylor dancers.

"You're doing fine, just fine," encouraged Gord. "Let's try a trip down the hill now."

The ride up the tow was great, no stops, no turns, — I started to perfect my technique for the return trip.

Trouble began as I let go of the tow rope and proceeded to herring-bone my way into a pair of 10-year-olds getting ready to make the trip down.

I followed their path along the ski trail, which appeared to be a pretty unimposing hill from the bottom, but now looked like Mount Everest.

Al Raine instructs, "As you begin to slide down the slopes you will have to find the best position for you to keep your balance".

Flat on your back is an excellent position to maintain balance, as I soon found out, but my Oak Hills ski mentor disapproved entirely of the technique and penalized me 15 yards for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"To do this," continues the gospel according to Raine, "your weight cannot be too far forward or too far backward. It is important to keep the knees forward by bending at the ankles."

Gord Row kept interjecting on Raine's snow white advice with complicated matters like bending your knees and rolling your skis into the hill.

"Keep your weight a little more forward and that won't happen," said Gord, as my skis ran an X-pattern for the umpteenth time.

I did.

"Well, at least you got your weight forward," he noted, trying hard not to laugh as I recovered from a perfectly executed belly-landing.

Deciding to abandon the technical approach for the theoretical, I returned to good old lesson number 4 for beginners.

"Whether you are snowplowing or straight running, you should always face the direction in which you are travelling." Right, Al.

Unfortunately, while I was well-versed in the necessity of facing the direction I was travelling, I had been issued illiterate skis: Ever try a herringbone going DOWN the hill?

With the help of Al Raine and Providence, although not necessarily in that order, I finally made it to the bottom in a not-quite-record time of one hour.

"Don't be discouraged," offered the Oak Hills chief instructor. "I've been skiing for 20 years so you aren't likely to learn it all in one lesson."

One thing I did learn from the experience, however, was that if you're thinking of taking up skiing, stay out of the "Raine."

Ski Report

Skiing reported good at Oak Hills Ski Club, with three rope tows operating Saturday and Sunday, 9:30 a.m. — 4:30 p.m. Base: 12" packed, with powder on way.

Singapore Talks to Be Decisive

LONDON (AP) — Secretary-General Arnold Smith thinks he has found ways of heading off the threatened breakdown of the Commonwealth over Britain's controversial plan for limited arms sales to South Africa.

In an interview before setting off today on an official mission to India, the veteran Canadian career diplomat said:

"Given time and genuine all-around willingness by the parties concerned, this sensitive political problem, involving the explosive question of race relations, can be settled.

"The big issue facing certain heads of government at Singapore this month is whether they rate cohesion and viability of the Commonwealth above their public stances on the sale of arms."

Smith declined to identify the countries, but it was clear he was referring mainly to Britain, Zambia, Uganda and Tanzania.

The British, who helped evolve the Commonwealth from the old empire, are at the centre of the storm.

Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative government has publicly proclaimed its intention to cancel a 5½-year-old British ban on the sale of arms to South Africa's white-supremacist regime. It is prepared to supply some limited weapons, such as frigates, reconnaissance aircraft and surface-to-air missiles, as a means of safeguarding the Cape of Good Hope sea lanes used by giant tankers carrying Persian Gulf oil to Europe.

The Zambians, Ugandans and Tanzanians, South Africa's northern neighbors, have said publicly any such action would compel them to quit the 31-country association, which embraces 800 million multi-racial people. Other countries, including Nigeria and India, would have to seriously consider following their example.

Prime Minister Trudeau has informed Heath of Canada's concern over the effect on the future of the Commonwealth of arms sales to South Africa.

The starting point for Smith's quiet, behind-the-scenes search for a compromise has been his view that there should be a study in depth of Britain's proclaimed fears about the security of the Indian Ocean and the South Atlantic shipping routes.

"There may be no visible danger in the region today," he said, "but that does not eliminate fears of future perils."

Accordingly, special importance is being attached to three ideas that will be considered by the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference opening in Singapore Jan. 14:

—That there should be a Commonwealth examination by defence ministers of the over-all problem of Indian Ocean security. This would pose difficulties. Most member countries are non-aligned and would find it awkward to participate in such a group project.

—That Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Malaysia and Singapore should be delegated to watch over Indian Ocean security in the general interest. These five countries already are banding together into a military alliance to ensure the security of Malaysia and Singapore.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Love Is Love In Whatever Form

Some areas of discussion are certain to breed controversy: one's reputation for having a good sense of humor; politics; one's philosophy of life. Among the many differences of opinion among women is the question of breastfeeding. Should the mother who bottle - feeds her youngsters feel guilty Here is a frank letter from a mother who feels guiltless.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am writing in regard to the controversy over breastfeeding. What hogwash! Breastfeeding does not guarantee a child will receive loving care. It is just a point of getting off the ground.

Child - raising is a long and winding road. Each person should do his own thing — whatever it is. Whatever comes naturally.

Love is love, whatever form it takes. I don't believe in this "mother's responsibility" jazz about breastfeeding. I meet too many self-righteous women who seem to feel: "I nursed my child. I'm wonderful. I gave."

Mothers' responsibilities are never-ending. Remember that the first year is the easiest. I have four children from 3 to 13 years of age. I am loving and caring for them now as I did the day each was born. Breastfeeding was not one of the "gifts" I gave my children.

Meantime I suggest to mothers that you get together and raise them with wisdom, insight, tears, love and whatever turns you on — but don't gloat over breastfeeding a child. I have yet to hear a grown adult say, "Boy, am I glad my mom breastfed me." -- Mrs. G.

For Miss O.: It is true that in many young women who have recently begun to have their menstual periods, they may be irregular the first few months. However, in your case, I suggest you see your family doctor, rather than experiment with medicines advised by your friends. Especially, in view of your fear that you may be pregnant. Only you know whether or not it is a possibility.

Depend upon your doctor to give you the real reason for "being 10 days late." There may be no definite indication why you should be concerned. Meanwhile, don't listen to the advice of young friends who mean well, but may get you into needless complications.

For Mr. T.: I wish we had some secret formula I might divulge which would guarantee that a person would never be subject to a stroke. All we can do is deal in generalaties: mention some of the contributing factors — which may or may not be present in a given case.

For example, we know that atherosclerosis is important. It blocks the normal flow of blood in the brain arteries. So we advise early that people try to keep normal weight; cut down, if necessary, on saturated fats; try to live in lessened daily tension; treat gout or diabetes if present.

However, for last I leave the early and persistent care of high blood pressure. Although high blood pressure is not always a cause of stroke, it can be a factor if it has been present for years and left untreated.

We have drugs to keep the pressure down, and by keeping it at safe levels for years, such treatment often can eliminate excessive pressures on arteries throughout the body including those in the brain. Prevention begins many years before a stroke is likely to occur.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 3

Your birthday today: Return to nature is the theme for your coming year; to see the simplest, most primitive course, to harmonize with the greater environment. Psychic talents manifest themselves; at times a sudden impulse leads you to abrupt acts which change your whole situation — usually for should be a satisfying, happy year of constructive striving. Today's natives are rather quiet people until given high authority; then they reveal ability to wield power.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Do your share in your community's weekend customs. Inquire about friends and neighbors. Your home could use minor changes; plan what you want to do.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Pick up and go, taking with you a dependent or perhaps an old friend. On the way, conversation brings enlightenment on something that has puzzled you.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your latest impulse should be the mainspring in today's doings. Friends may be upset over a community situation — don't take sides, unless you're sure you've heard both sides.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Put off confrontations, delicate negotiations for a few days if you can. Sidestep serious business, large purchases. Let others come to you on your terms.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Younger people outscheme you today; either be prepared to pick up the bill or be unavailable. Don't fret or cause dissension. A change of scene for the evening is helpful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): A commitment you overhear relates to somebody else, not you — leap to no conclusions. Keep busy, paying little heed to appeals for sympathy, or casual promises.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Community interests require your attention and perhaps your service. Make a good showing, in any case. Cultivate social connections, people you don't often see.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Something you had planned to do turns out to be unfeasible. There is still a great deal to do, many places to go, so make another try before it is late.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): This pleasant Sunday promises you a deep and perhaps shocking insight into your nature and the thoughts of somebody involved with you. Act at once to settle matters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your neighborhood offers much to do and see today. Bring your friends along, make new contacts, explore the possibilities. Find time for meditation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): A surprise is in the morning's news, if you are alert. For the evening it is your turn to offer something surprising. Set goals, and help make plans to fulfill them.

PISCES (Feb. 19—Mar. 20): Wear your favorite outfit, do well whatever you are specially qualified for, tell your tallest tales, all in high good humor. The evening is for social gatherings.

For January 4

Your birthday today: Most of your coming year will have a surprise element. Your approach to this recurrent phenomenon should involve developing special skills shared by few others, using your latent intuitive talents. Once you learn the difference between wishful thinking and genuine anticipation, you are free of many petty hindrances. Today's natives combine idealistic vision with physical skills, are sometimes very inquisitive.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This is no time to pin anybody to a precise commitment. A partial deal, improvised at the moment, is preferable. Expect discrepancy in plans already made; seek expedients.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Get routines out of the way early so you are better able to cope with sudden complications later in the day. If there is a choice, select outdoors to anything indoors.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Success now depends on your serenity and tact in choppy conditions, progress in fits and starts, people failing to meet schedules or being out of sorts. Defer decisions.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): People and things arriving from distances are either ahead or behind schedule. Financial moves turn up unplanned effects. Dispose of outdated possessions; wait a few days before replacing.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Think twice before accepting addtional responsibilities. Let people drift away from unfeasible arrangements—they may break away later if you don't let them out gracefully now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your interest in quite a range of activities falters, perhaps from distractions with more fundamental problems. Realize this is a passing phase.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Conditions yield now only to determined pressure — just be sure that you are not misunderstood by associates. Encourage your friends to reconsider. Prayer swiftly brings results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Take a conservative course; avoid needling others, don't let them stir you up. Things are happening beyond your immediate view — patience! Thoughtful planning now later proves effective.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Dissatisfaction with your situation challenges you to do something constructive about it. Career opportunities are brief must be taken or passed up quickly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Review your finances, but concentrate on getting on peacefully with those around you. Moves made before they understand them could be misinterpreted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Today is a time of preparation, trouble - shooting rather than direct action. Routine is preferable, if you can stay in it. Evening brightens up with much to think about.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): People believe what they want to believe. Tell a clear, simple story consistently. Don't be dismayed at finding some ideas abruptly scuttled; go along with the changes.

25,000 Britons to Begin University on Television

LONDON (CP) — Some 25,000 Britons will begin university courses on television this weekend aimed at bachelor of arts degrees.

They are the inaugural class in Open University, which Sunday morning offers its first 1½ hours of television teaching. There will be three 30-minute programs in freshman-year science, social science and mathematics. The first arts program will come Wednesday.

No diplomas or other academic qualifications are required for entry. Students who successfuly complete the three-year course will receive bachelor of arts degrees from the Open University—so named because it is open to all.

It is especially planned to give dropouts a second chance. More than three-quarters of all British children leave school by the age of 16. University education remains the privilege of a relative few.

The idea was conceived by the former Labor government as the fastest, most effective way to bring higher education to more people. It has the support of the Conservative government elected last June.

Anyone can watch courses on the BBC. Credit toward degrees wil go only to those who pay tuition of £50 ($125) a year. These students will receive assignments by mail, study at home and take final examinations at regional centres.

A "campus" was built at Bletchley, 50 miles north of London, to handle administrative work. Officials estimate a conventional university costs £35 million to build. Open University cost £4.1 milion to set up. It will have a budget University cost £4.1 million to

Applications for the first class, limited to 25,000, were opened last January. The waiting list totaled 13,000 when applications closed in August. Later one out of five dropped out. These 5,000 places were filled from the waiting list.

Two More Making Bids for Leadership

Simard Won't Sign Note

MONTREAL (CP) — A confession which police say was given to them by Francis Simard, who subsequently refused to sign it, says Simard and brothers Paul and Jacques Rose murdered Pierre Laporte Oct. 17.

The statement said the three strangled the Quebec labor minister with the chain that carried his religious medal.

It said Mr. Laporte had tried to escape through a window the night of Oct. 16 from the Armstrong Street house where he was being held in nearby St. Hubert.

"He was crying, he wanted us to take him to the hospital" the statement said.

The statement, read at a resumed inquest into the Laporte death, added that the three of them decided about 5:30 or 6 p.m. Oct. 16 to kill Mr. Laporte.

It said that the Chenier ceil of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, which kidnapped Mr. Laporte Oct. 10, was composed of the two Rose brothers, Simard and Bernard Lortie.

The statement said that the kidnapping was made without any of the four being under the influence of tranquillizers, drugs or alcohol.

The Rose brothers and Simard were captured one week ago today in an underground hideout at St. Luc, 20 miles from Montreal, while Lortie was captured in a west-end Montrel apartment Nov. 6.

Corporal Jacques Gabouri of the Quebec Provincial Police, who arrested Simard Dec. 28, said he obtained the confession from Simard in the presence of QPP Constable Marcel Vigneault.

Cpl. Gabouri said that Simard was told of his rights and made a six-page confession willingly.

The statement was read after the Rose brothers and Simard appeared briefly at the inquest but refused to testify, instead shouting separatist and other slogans.

'I still can't get out of the habit of writing 1970 on my cheques!'

Bert Lawrence, McKeough in Race

TORONTO (CP) — Two more cabinet ministers have announced they will contest the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party bringing to three the number of candidates seeking to replace Premier John Robarts.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dacy McKeough, 37, youngest member of Premier Robarts's cabinet, announced his candidacy Sunday. Bert Lawrence, 47, minister of financial and commercial affairs, announced his entry into the race at a news conference today in Ottawa.

These two join Education Minister William Davis, 41, who announced two weeks ago that he will seek the leadership at the party's three-day convention Febe 10-12 at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Mr. McKeough said his campaign will be based on a pledge to increase efforts to keep control of Canada's economy in Canadian hands.

Mr. Lawrence said he also is concerned about foreign control of the economy, but his principal aim will be "modernization" of the province's governmental structure.

Mr. Lawrence said his candidacy has the support of French-speaking elements of the provincial cabinet and caucus. These include Fern Guindon, minister without portfolio who represents Stormont, and other members from eastern Ontario ridings.

Mr. Lawrence, appointed to the cabinet only 10 months ago, said he wanted the party to adopt a more "understanding approach," putting less emphasis on production and more on services. This, he said, would make the government "more humane and more responsive."

He said he is "on his way" to garnering the support of 250 of about 800 party delegates he will need to win the leadership.

Mr. Lawrence represents the Carleton East riding located in Ottawa.

In addition to his concern about foreign control of the economy, Mr. McKeough also indicated a concern about strengthening local government.

He said he would start a series of trips across the province this week to drum up support for his candidacy.

Mr. McKeough said he had been convinced by "50 or 60 persons" that he could win the leadership.

"They (the supporters) like my style," he said. "They like my ideas, and I think there will be enough delegates who think that way to elect me."

Draft Dodgers Said 'Shoved' Across Border

TORONTO (CP) — A former FBI agent said Sunday the RCMP and Vancouver police have been taking United States draft dodgers in Canada back across the border at Blaine, Wash. "for a long time,"

William Turner, interviewed on the CBC television program Weekend, described the action by the FBI and Canadian police forces as a "very cozy arrangement."

He said FBI agents are permitted 72 hours to enter Canada to try to convince draft dodgers and deserters to return home.

Mr. Turner said he had visited Vancouver on a number of occasions for this reason. Often, when he was unable to find the person he was seeking, Canadian police would later track down the person "and shover him across the border."

Two Canadians Die

Soccer Fans Stampede, Killing 66 at Glasgow

GLASGOW (CP) — A stampede of soccer fans killed 66 persons including two Canadians and left 145 injured Saturday at a game between the long-time Scottish rivals, Rangers and Celtic.

The tragedy, called Britain's worst sporting disaster, was followed by demands for an overhaul of safety measures at British soccer stadiums. A government investigation was scheduled.

The Canadian victims at Ibrox Park were David McPherson, 30, of Edmonton and his eight-year-old son, Nigel.

McPherson, a welder and centre-half for Edmonton Scottish in the Inter-City Soccer League, took his wife Stella and two sons to Britain for a Christmas visit to his wife's parents near Liverpool. They went to Glasgow to visit his parents. His wife and a one-year-old son did not go to the game.

Flags flew at half mast in Glasgow today.

In the disaster at the end of the annual match between the Glasgow rivals, the Rangers and Celtics, hundreds of fans stumbled and fell down a concrete stairway outside the park, crushing those at the bottom of the pile

Most of the 66 victims were suffocated beneath a tangled mound of humanity when crowd-control barriers collapsed. Others died before reaching hospital.

Witnesses said the tragedy occurred when Rangers fans among 80 000 at the game began leaving in the closing seconds.

Thirteen People Die In French Explosion

AUCH (Reuter) — Thirteen persons were killed today when an explosion in this southwestern French town caused part of a four-storey apartment building to collapse, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman said several persons were still missing and 12 were taken to hospital with injuries.

He said the explosion, which caused the entire back half of the building to collapse, was probably due to build-up of gasoline vapor under the floor of a garage which occupied the ground floor.

The force of the explosion smashed the concrete floor of the garage, bringing down all the apartments in the rear of the building.

An eight-year-old girl was trapped between large slabs of concrete from the garage floor for three hours, and police said it was a miracle she was brought out alive.

Her mother, injured in the explosion and unaware that her daughter was safe, cried as she was taken away by ambulance: "My four children are still in there."

A retired army officer awoke at dawn today to see one half of his fourth-floor apartment slip down out of sight.

"The floor cracked right by my bed, and I was left looking over a precipice to the rubble four floors down.

"It is a miracle I'm still alive."

Peace Talks To Resume

JERUSALEM (CP) — Peace negotiators from Israel and Egypt were flying today to rejoin mediator Gunnar V. Jarring at the United Nations.

Protest at Ottawa

Young protesters hold up a chain and placards as they demonstrate in front of the Russian embassy in Ottawa Sunday. About 4,000 people showed up on Parliament Hill and then went on to the Embassy to deliver a petition asking restrictions on Russian Jews to be eased. (CP Photo)

Jews Denounce Soviet Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — Busloads of Montreal and Toronto Jews packed Parliament Hill Sunday to demonstrate 4,000 strong against repression in the Soviet Union.

Originally directed against the Leningrad trials of 11 people convicted of planning to hijack a Soviet airliner, the demonstration turned out as a mass protest against restrictions on Jewish life in the Soviet Union.

The death setences imposed on two of the Leningrad prisoners have been commuted to 15 year terms in labor camp but for one placard carrier at the demonstration "Commutation is no Concession to the Innocent."

Other signs demanded "Let my people go" and "Freedom Now for Soviet Jews."

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the protesters they had staged an "impressive demonstration" that would not go unheeded internationally.

"It will not be possible for anyone to point a finger at you and say you did not stand up for the principles in which you believe," he said.

The demonstrators then went by bus to the Soviet embassy to deliver a petition signed by thousands of Canadian Jews and sympathizers. A single youth was detained briefly by police for causing a disturbance but was released without a charge.

The protest was organized by a wide variety of Jewish groups including the Canadian Jewish Congress. Placards also advertised the presence of the Association of Jewish War Veterans and the Jewish Defence League.

Bringing the demonstrators to the national capital were 65 buses from Montreal and seven from Toronto. Close to 400 autos also arrived, organizers said.

Quinte MPP Begins Ontario Tour

Potter: New PC Leader Must Be 'Flexible, Imaginative'

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Dr. Richard Potter is on his way across Ontario — cautioning fellow Conservatives against prematurely deciding who should be their party's new leader.

The Quinte MPP today launched a crash tour of the province, appealing to Tories to weigh well the qualities of leadership contenders so the party may not be found wanting in the crush of contemporary social problems.

In the next four days he will tell Conservatives that their new leader must be both "flexible and imaginative" to meet the challenges of modern government.

He is appealing to party members to approach their choice with a "deep sense of responsibility" and to reserve an open mind until the party's leadership convention in mid-February.

With him he is taking a formula of broad guidelines which he suggests, could be the criteria on which a sucessor to Premier Robarts can be chosen.

Dr. Potter laid down the formula for the first time Saturday during a Kingston press conference, which served as a curtain-raiser for his swing through the province.

Elements in the Potter prescription for the most powerful political post in the province say a new leader must:

—Utilize untapped resources among the government's backbenchers and permit them a more active role.

—Make standing committees "truly effective" rather than a "convenient device to occupy spare time."

— Take a "realistic view" of the "staggering" costs of education and government assistance programs which are looming as a "greater burden than our economy can support."

— Be prepared to state that the continued expansion of government must be stopped before it "destroys entirely our tradition of private initiative." The cost of such growth is "too high in terms of money as well as liberty."

— Give priority to unemployment problems. Chronic welfare recipients must be rehabilitated and those in legitimate need of assistance be "sufficiently assisted."

— Insist that legislators, not civil servants "or others," have the final say in all matters of public policy.

— Extend private industry principles to government administration, instituting continuous reviews of department staffs. Only in this way "can empire-building be discouraged."

As Dr. Potter opened his tour with a press conference at Queen's Park today, three candidates already had confirmed their intentions of seeking the leadership. Education Minister William Davis, the first to commit himself to the race, now has been joined by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence.

In Kingston, Dr. Potter refrained from identifying his formula with any potential candidate. Neither, he stressed, was he himself a leadership candidate.

"I make this appeal honestly, and without selfish interest since I am not a candidate for the party leadership," he said.

His tour, he said, was being made "solely in the interest of the Conservative party and the residents of our province. Each one of us must decide for himself what we should expect from our new leader and premier."

Dr. Potter recalled that Premier Robarts, in calling a leadership convention, had said that modern government policies and actions must be continually reviewed, revised and rethought.

Mr. Robarts thus had called on Conservatives to choose a leader who will form a "new and progressive" government in which Ontario citizens "may continue to place their confidence."

"I know this can be accomplished," said Dr. Potter, "but only by delegates who will approach the leadership convention with an open mind and without previous commitment to any of the candidates — and generally with a deep sense of responsibility."

"I appeal to all delegates . . not to pledge their support prematurely. Each candidate must be carefully scrutinized and his policies and abilities assessed before any attempt at a decision is made."

Dr. Potter noted the reputation he had gained as an outspoken politician since his election to Queen's Park in late 1967.

"At times I've been called a maverick and a rebel," he said, while attempting to promote what he considered "progressive changes."

He did not believe he fell in either category and, in fact, many of his suggestions already have been implemented by the government.

But, during that time, he also had felt some present methods of dealing with government were "extremely antiquated."

Among a new leader's qualities must be the ability to institute necessary up-dating, changes, he indicated.

Not all Conservatives might agree with his proposals nor with his ultimate choice for leader, admitted Dr. Potter.

But he appealed to party members to "at least reserve judgments and not support any candidate until you are completely convinced that his views are acceptable to you . . ."

Delegates must also be convinced that their choice has the "ability, strength and personal stature" required in "the future premier of Ontario."

From Toronto, Dr. Potter today goes to Hamilton, Kitchener and London.

Tuesday he will be in Windsor and Thunder Bay; Wednesday at Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury and Thursday in Ottawa before returning home.

CMHC Gives $250,000 Loan For City-Township Sewer

Belleville will benefit from a $250,000 loan granted by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

The loan is believed to be for the first stage of the Belleville-Thurlow trunk sewer running up the Moira River from Front St. to College St.

The OWRC will build the sewer and recover costs on the basis of use. The sewer will leave the riverbed at College St. and continue north along Cannifton Road to Adam St. and eventually under Highway 401 into Thurlow township. It will serve north-east Belleville and parts of the township

Although no official confirmation of the project to which the loan is to be applied has yet been received by Murray Wilson, project development officer with OWRC in Toronto, he said this morning he believes the money is for the Belleville-Thurlow sewer.

Wilbur Purcell, city engineer, said easements for the sewer are now being obtained and tenders are expected to be called in a month's time.

Total cost of the trunk sewer is expected to be about $1 million.

CMHC gave loans totalling $1.2 million to Ontario municipalities. In addition to the Belleville project OWRC got three loans for sewage work in Deseronto ($200,000), Tillsonburgh ($150,000), and South Peel County ($500,000).

A bonspiel will be held in the Prince Edward Curling Club Jan. 29-30.

Should Run Farm Like A Business

Farm records, safety and pollution are three major items of concern for the modern day farmer.

In a year-end news letter to county farmers, Hastings Agricultural Representative Douglas Tipper points out that farming is a business and as such has to gear its operation in the same way as other comparable businesses in the economy.

Mr. Tripper says keeping of proper farm records is one of the first requirements of the modern farmer.

One of the easiest ways to set up a farm record system is through "Canfarm" a national monthly mail-in record system. Through the system a continuous up-to-date analysis of the farm business operation and more meaningful farm management decisions can be made.

Canfarm also provides income tax information and features current inventory control with summaries providing the information requested by many bank managers.

Stressing the importance of farm safety, Mr. Tipper says one of the simplest things a farmer can do in the farm business is to wear some kind of safety hat or helmet.

The problem of pollution is one of concern to the farmer.

Mr. Tipper notes that much has been done in the past year with respect to pollution as it concerns the farmer.

One such move was to set up a suggested code of practice on the location of new farm buildings.

There are three main categories of pollution — water, air and soil, all of which are of concern to the farmer.

There's Always A Sense of Urgency at the Start

Ready with snowmobiles raring to go, sportsmen wait for starter's flag to launch Picton race. Event not only drew a record number of snowmobilers, but proved popular with the public as crowded grandstand, sharing in expectancy of starting moment — amply shows.

Snowmobile Races: New Peak at Picton

PICTON (Staff) — Snowmobilers high on speed jammed Picton fairgrounds yesterday afternoon competing in a race meet co-sponsored by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and the Prince Edward Snowmobile Racing Committee.

More than 1,300 spectators packed the grandstand and lined the track to watch drivers match their machines in nine race divisions. Chairman for yesterday's race program Archie Kingma, said drivers described track conditions as "among the best in eastern Ontario" following a similar meet two weeks ago, and obviously passed the word.

He said entries jumped from 86, in last month's meet, to 122 recorded in yesterday's races. Drivers trailered their machines from Belleville, Stirling, Kingston, Sydenham and all parts of Prince Edward County. One contestant travelled from Collingwood on Georgian Bay, to line up on yesterday's starting line.

Snow machines roared over the half-mile fairgrounds track at speeds up to and over 60 mph as drivers jockeyed for position, working to hold their snowmobiles on the turns. Although several drivers, took spills during the three-hour meet only one contestant was injured. An entrant in the powder puff derby, Sandra McIloyle, Bewdley, was treated at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for a leg cut requiring several stitches. A driver in another race division struck a chain link fence surrounding the track but escaped injury. Race officials quickly filled the gap opened by his machine with a high bank of snow.

A freak mishap occurred during one of he final races of the day, when a driverless machine spun off the track, crossed to a parking area near the County Centre and crashed into the bumper of a station wagon. The driver of the snowmobile lost control of his machine when it upset on a turn. He uprighted the snowmobile, which was still running, but before he could swing aboard, the machine jerked away on its collision course.

Crowd control during the race meet was provided yesterday by snow fencing and track police. At an earlier meet this winter spectators annoyed race officials by ignoring warnings to stay off the track and to keep out of the pit area. The majority of yesterday's snowmobile race fans stood on the grandstand while others lined the fence circling the track.

The ladies Powder Puff Derby, a feature event of the program was won by Marian Smith, Kingston.

Trophies were presented to all first place winners in the County Centre after the race meet. Each class winner earned a cash prize of $30, while prizes of $20, $10 and $5 were awarded to runners up.

Fire Loss Is $30,000

A space - heater exploding has been blamed for a $30,000 fire at a construction site at the Glen Miller bridge near Trenton Sunday.

A Sidney Township Fire Department, spokesman said the fire broke out in one of two cabin trailers when a space heater exploded and spread to several storage, acetylene and propane tanks just outside the trailor.

Firemen fought the blaze from two a.m. until four a.m., stopping its spread to a second cabin trailor, used as an office by Cooper-Ellis Ltd. Construction Company.

The office trailer was only scorched in the blaze but the storage trailer was destroyed.

CN Engine Jumps Tracks

BROCKVILLE — A switch engine driven by Canadian National Railways engineer Ernest Diggs of Belleville, jumped the track and hit a watchtower at a Brockville crossing Sunday, leaving one person injured.

Watchman Louis Philip Desmarais, 62, was dragged from a burning gatehouse by fellow workmen. At hospital he was treated for second - degree burns.

Flames erupted from an overturned oil stove after the building was knocked over by the derailed locomotive.

A caboose was being switched to a freight train at the time of the accident. When the watchtower tipped, Mr. Desmarais fell to the ground in the burning wooden structure.

thinking their team had lost 0-1.

But Rangers scored a goal to tie the game and fans halfway down the exit stairway turned around and tried to get back into the stadium.

The crowd barriers broke as they pushed back in and hundreds fell forward in a heap of bodies.

Graphic and horrifying accounts of the disaster continued to dominate the national press today.

"People were falling all over the place," said Clive Mitchell, who had gone to the match with his son John, 21. "I passed out, and when I came to a policeman was holding me. I had been buried under a pile of bodies.

"I saw my son lying next to me, lifeless. Then I passed out again."

The Daily Mail, under the headline "This need not have happened." joined other newspapers in accusing British soccer clubs of ignoring an official government report on crowd safety published two years ago.

"This tragedy is due solely to the complacency and inertia of the authorities. Nothing else," said The Mail.

Most football stands are hopelessly ill-designed, with precipitious steps and bottleneck exits."

The Daily Sketch commented: "Most clubs spend more on buying one star player than they spend in a whole season on building stronger crash barriers and improving their grounds.

"By comparison with the best all-seat stadiums on the Continent, Britain's grounds are cut-price cattle pens where human safety is an optional extra."

Eldon Griffiths, Britain's minister for sport, scheduled talks in London with advisers including Sir John Lang, whose 1969 recommendations for safety improvements have not been fully carried out by the 92 British major league clubs.

Gordon Campbell, secretary of state for Scotland, was reporting to Prime Minister Edward Heath and his cabinet after a visit to Glasgow. Authorities in Scotland were preparing their own judicial inquiry.

A committee headed by Lang had recommended various steps to control soccer crowds, including division of standing room into sections with separate exits, equipment to control the flow of fans in and out of the grounds, replacement of standing room by seats and inspections by local government safety experts.

The Football Association introduced a code of safety measures at the start of the soccer season English clubs complied with the rules, but Scottish teams are still considering them.

The manager of the Rangers, William Waddell, said Glasgow city engineers and police had inspected and approved the stairway at Ibrox Park, which he described as among the safest stadiums in Britain.

"No legislation could cover what happened at Ibrox," said Secretary Denis Follows of the Football Association. "I think it was a sort of act of God."

Two Enter Race

Chatham and at the University of Western Ontario, he was first elected to the legislature in 1963 and re-elected in 1967. Prior to that, he was a Chatham alderman, the sixth member of his family to hold public office in that city, a record dating back to 1847.

Mr. Robarts appointed him minister without portfolio Nov. 24, 1966, ending Mr. McKeough's brief career as a vociferous but eloquent heckler in the government back benches. He became minister of municipal affairs Nov. 23, 1967.

Two of his tasks as municipal affairs minister—creation of regional governments and a province-wide property reassessment program—were no political bed of roses, he told reporters Sunday. But he defended both projects as necessary, particularly reassessment which he said has to be part of "meaningful tax reform." Reassessment caused a major uproar in some areas where taxes were increased by as much as 300 per cent

Speaking about his platform, he said economic nationalism can be achieved by building a pro-Canadian bias into such agencies as the Ontario Development Corp., so that Canadian companies get preferential loans.

"It may mean greater risk, but let's do it."

But he said unemployment must be tackled first so that the province can "move on to a new concept of prosperity."

At 92, She Wins Snowmobile

With a snowmobile already in the family, Mrs. Mary File, 92 year old Deseronto woman, didn't feel she had any use for a new machine which she won in a pre-Christmas draw.

So the snowmobile — minus its accompanying trailer — was sold.

Actually the Deseronto nonagenerian didn't even know she had a ticket on the snowmobile.

One of her great grandchildren put her name on the draw ticket and delivery of the machine came as a considerable surprise.

Mrs. File lives with her daughter and the family already possesses a snowmobile.

As Others See Us

A group of Italian university students who visited Canada recently offered some interesting comparisons between this country, their own, and the United States.

While she thought Canada was "Americanized," Maria Fiorella Rossi, 20, a University of Rome literature student, saw a significant difference between the two countries. "Between Windsor and Detroit,". she said, "you can see the difference. In Canada, I saw it in one hour. I was more relaxed here."

The students were in Hamilton at the time of this interview, and as a university city (McMaster) its people found the observations of Franco Gariboldi, 24, a University of Milan economics student, interesting.

Mr. Gariboldi found a large gap in the quality of universities between Canada and Italy. "In Canada there is more equipment, more money, more buildings, and more student centres. In Italy we are very short of these things." The student said he also thought university teaching was probably superior in Canada but he believed pre-university training was better in Italy.

"Our pre-university education is better," he pointed out, "not because of the curriculum, but because of the inculcation of a developed sense of criticism — by a sense of perspective. I find a lot of Canadian students passive," he added.

There is a lot of truth in this. Students on this continent, unless they have travelled widely, are prisoners of the North American environment; they do not have the perspective that students in Britain and Europe can gain from their relative proximity and exposure to many cultures. The passivity shows in the faces of the students, on such occasions as the CBC's Under Attack programs when university students question leading personalities in various spheres of professional endeavor. There are the few who are ready and willing to get up and say their peice, but the same cannot be said for the majority of students in such a gathering.

Exposure, however, to such visits as this — a cultural exchange sponsored by the Confederation of Italian Clubs of the Universities of Ontario — is of mutual benefit. Clearly, our universities are well-equipped and they have been mushrooming in a manner uncommon to the European scene, including Britain. This is one advantage of our affluent society, provided we do not overreach ourselves — inflation being the threat it is. But let us ensure that the universities fulfill their main function of educating our youth for the tasks of tomorrow, rather than posing the threat of political subversion for which they are increasingly under fire today.

Marzipan Anyone?

Marzipan has never been one of our favorite candies, but we have vivid memories of a pleasant coffee shop in Lubeck where it was available along with other sweetmeats.

Lubeck is home of the world's largest manufacturer of marzipan and it is interesting to learn from German Features that like many other aspects of Germany's highly-developed economy the production process is automated.

Much of this firm's production, in the peak season 20 tons a day, goes to 43 countries. A specialty are the so-called "black bread" marzipan blocks coated with chocolate which acount for one-third of sales. One hundred million were consumed in 1970, and to keep pace with demand the firm uses an automatic assembly line which produces and packs 10,500 blocks in 15 minutes.

But automated or not, the receipe for the crushed-almond sweet, like the whisky of Scotland, has remained secret for generations. And looking at that daily output, we recall Dr. Peter Steincrohn's recent column about "pill-poppers" in which he noted that between 20 and 30 tons of aspirin are consumed daily in the United States.

So, marzipan anyone? For some at least it might be better medicine than aspirin.

From Germany too comes word of another technical coup. Long a leader in the manufacture of fine porcelain, automation has now been introduced in this sphere too. A china-making firm in Weiden has just installed what it claims is the world's first automatic machine for mixing the classic, clay mass which goes into fine china. A white powder goes into the machinery, water is added and a button pressed. From the other end comes a "plastic" mass which can be formed into cups and saucers.

Gone are the centuries-old procedures carried out largely by hand and one wonders what is the reaction of leading overseas firms like Wedgewood of England, Belleek in Northern Ireland and Crown Lynn in New Zealand.

Quebec Eases Path of Immigrants to Province

Montreal Le Devoir—The Quebec national assembly gave first reading recently to Bill 64 which, if accepted, will appreciably change the conditions under which immigrants wishing to settle here may take up various professions.

First, Canadian citizenship will no longer be a prerequisite to study or practise in 19 professions listed in the legislation. The candidate must only apply for citizenship with the shortest legal delay, and must elect to take up residence in Quebec.

However, the candidate must show that he has a working knowledge of French.

Removing the obligation that one must be a Canadian citizen to practise medicine, optometry, agronomy, architecture, nursing or other forms of social work, should be received with great satisfaction. . . . It will persuade a greater number of specialized immigrants to establish themselves in Quebec. . . .

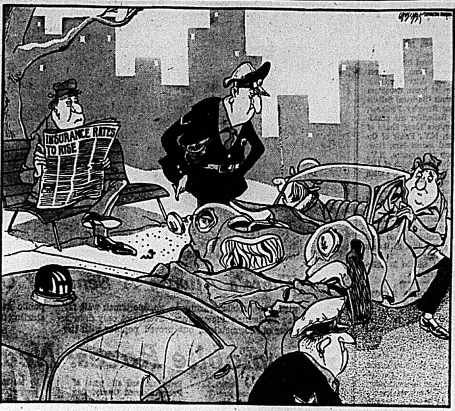
With Bill 64 . . . professionals from other countries won't be subject to humiliations and our population can benefit from their talents without delay. We also will be well protected against charlatans, for professional groups will retain the authority to refuse a licence to those who cannot prove their competence. . . .

We support the idea of making a knowledge of French a prerequisite to the exercise of a profession, at least most of them. . . . But, given that we are not yet ready to adopt an over-all language policy . . . we must proceed with prudence in this area.

For example . . . it is going too far to insist on a working knowledge of French in all cases. We need not go so far in occupations that don't require direct contacts with the public

Furthermore, why don't we create two kinds of licences, one temporary and the other permanent For a temporary licence, we could satisfy ourselves with requiring a minimum knowledge of French, on the condition that the candidate will perfect his use of the language within a reasonable time A working knowledge of French could be demanded if the applicant wants a permanent licence. . . .

All things considered, the government would do well not to rush in passing this legislation, since there could be profound repercussions. It would be in order to refer Bill 64 to a committee where interested groups could air their views.



"Elmer became so agitated while berating careless drivers who cause our insurance rates to increase that he forgot to look where he was going!"

The Working Woman in Russia

Regina Leader - Post

Although women outnumber men in Russia by 19 million, it is still the men who run things, from the Kremlin down.

Not one of the 11 members of the Communist Party's all-powerful Politiburo, which makes all the ultimate decisions, is a woman. There are no women on the party Secretariat, which conducts the day-to-day operations of the party. The USSR Council of Ministers, which implements the party's decisions, has only one woman member.

About a third of the deputies in the Supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament, are women. But the Supreme Soviet is merely a rubber-stamp body which never fails to give unanimous assent to Politburo decisions.

For a Russian woman, holding a job is not just a right but an obligation under law. It is often also an absolute economic necessity.

Nearly half the workers in Soviet industry are women — but nine out of every 10 plant managers are men. Three of every four school teachers in the Soviet Union are women, but three of every four high school principals are men. Almost 90 per cent of all Russian medical personnel are women, but nearly half of all chief physicians and heads of hospitals are men.

Furthermore, the constitutionally "liberated" Russia woman has little choice of employment. She is often forced to exercise her "equality" by taking on hard, heavy work few Canadian or American women would care to tackle — digging ditches or sweeping streets while a male supervisor looks on.

In Russia, four of every 10 crane operators are women. So are one of every three cement makers, and four of every 10 laborers in the machine-making and metal-working industries. Nine of every 10 streetcar conductors are women.

However, and this might please the liberation lasses, Russian women are not treated as sex objects. Perhaps this is because cosmetics and such things are hard to come by, and frowned upon by the state.

Manitoba's Walter Weir Steps Down

Winnipeg Free Press

In politics, as elsewhere, nothing succeeds like success; and, conversely, nothing fails like failure. Walter Weir failed at the polls in June 1969 and this weekend he paid the penalty. Admittedly he did so voluntarily in deciding to remove himself from the leadership of the Conservative party in Manitoba; but to have done otherwise would have left the Conservatives badly divided. It is no secret that there has been dissatisfaction within the party over Mr. Weir's leadership; and while he might well, as he said on Friday, have stood again and won on the first ballot, he would not have been leading a united party.

Quebec's Language Hassle

Want to Have Your Cake And Eat It? Then English Is the One and Only Route

Letter to The Montreal Gazette

In her letter with the heading, "Is Cosmopolitan Montreal To Be Lost?" Mrs. Jane Donaldson invites people to air their voices of protest against unilingualism in Quebec. She deserves support for her point of view. The French language is in dire need of being saved from extinction on the North American continent. Ways and means have to be found to help Canadians of French descent to keep their linguistic heritage. As a francophile, I am sympathetic to the struggle of the Quebec government in trying to promote the use of French. But . . . let the same government be reasonable.

Isolation by a language barrier from the rest of North America is plainly impossible. It would result in lower standards of living, still higher unemployment, and in a continuous situation of being a ridiculously small minority of strangers. The nationality of a Canadian is Canadian, not French, English, Ukranian, German or Pakistani Canadian.

Canada has been selected as a home country by hundreds of thousands. It is the native country of millions. As the second largest country in the world it can easily accommodate all of us if we are willing to accept the right priorities: full employment, adequate housing, freedom and prosperity.

Secondary issues like linguistic rights should be seen in the right perspective. For a relatively small group of well - educated persons the French language means "culture" which, in their opinion, is lacking in at least North American English. For another group, still relatively small, the French language sustains their inherited identity, which they fear to lose if they leave "la belle province", or if Quebec doesn't manage to keep French alive. Then, for the third group, the majority, the French language means that they don't have to learn English. Competition for jobs would be less harsh. Earning a living would be less demanding. One would always know more about one's counterpart because everyone in Quebec would have been living here for a couple of generations.

In the '70s there is no place for avoiding challenges. All three groups have to realize that English is the only language on the North American continent for people who want to have their cake and eat it too.

An Idea For Next Christmas!

German Features

BOCHUM — Ever wonder what to do with the kiddies while you push through crowded stores at Christmas time? The West Germany city of Bochum came up with a nerve-saving idea: a street car transformed into a rolling kindergarten for children of harried Christmas shoppers.

The car stops at nine different stations in the city. Parents hand over their kids for a maximum of four hours. During this time the children get a street car tour of the city.

They are under care of a trained supervisor and can play games or paint pictures if they get tired of looking out the window.

Does Canada's New Year Honors List Betray Some Class Distinction?

Brockville Recorder and Times

What amounts to Canada's "New Year's Honors List" was announced recently and it has drawn criticism from several sources. Mainly the complaints tend to cite our Canadian honors as a demeaning two-class system. Some newspapers feel the honors should be done away with. We'd have to agree, if they are to be handed out as they have been in the past.

The latest list of Canadians honored by Order of Canada citations seems to be divided into two distinct classes, upper and lower. This, we're sure, was not the intention of the decorations brought into being by former Prime Minister Pearson and his parliamentary assistant, John R. Matheson, former MP for Leeds.

The class distinction seems apparent in the latest list of recipients. Or are we reading something into the government's benevolence we shouldn't? For instance among those receiving the Companions of the Order of Canada is Hon. Jack W. Pickersgill, Canada's transport commissioner but also a veteran Liberal cabinet minister and politician. He is now ensconced in a government post, created when he was minister of transport. Why would he particularly be cited for Canada's highest honor?

Among those receiving the Order of Canada's Medal, is Harry Jerome, one of Canada's outstanding athletes. Why, we wonder, does a politican rate higher than an athlete who has brought as much if not more honor to his country?

It seems to us that the committee that picks and chooses Canadians for these special honors, should be given another set of ground rules. As it now seems to stand, the honors could become a matter of great controversy rather than the symbol of service to Canada that they were intended.

Confusion Over Energy Pact

The Globe and Mail

If there is any satisfaction — outside the oil industry — in the oil agreement negotiated at the Canadian - United States ministerial meeting it is at least equalled by exasperation. The Canadian Government has been so secretive about its dealings over oil — and other energy resources — that it is impossible for Canadians to know whether a sound bargain has been made or Canada has been taken.

Consider even the circumstances of the meeting. Recently External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said that no decisions would be made at it, that it was "purely for exploring points of view". Yet on Tuesday these "explorers" were announcing a firm decision for Canada next year to supply and the United States to accept all the oil that Canada can deliver, agreement to take reciprocal security precautions against a cut-off to Eastern Canada of off-shore oil and the intention to proceed to free trade in oil and petroleum products. A bag of agreements which Energy, Mines and Resources Minister J. J. Greene described as a "major breakthrough" for Canada and "the first overt indication" of a commitment by the United States to open markets for Canadian oil.

What's more, the word is going about that the deal has actually been made secretly in Washington two weeks ago.

Or consider what the conferees had to say about a continental energy policy. Mr. Sharp denied that there had been any discussion of such a thing. U.S. Secretary of the Interior Walter Hickel said, "We are still trying to work out how we can have a continental energy policy." And the joint communique said that the two countries had agreed to continue talks "for an increasing trade in crude oil, petroleum products and other fuels between the United States and Canada."

Maybe no outright lies have been told, but somebody is certainly tops at obfuscation.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Purchase of the Montrose Dairy milk delivery business in Belleville and Trenton by the Roblin Dairy has been announced by Ray Roblin, official of the latter dairy.

Installation night of the Kiwanis Club is always one of the social highlights of the New Year and the affair at Albert College was probably the best ever held by that organization. The meeting was graced by the presence of Mel Osborne, Lieutenant Governor of the district. Taylor Franklin completed his year of office and Everett S. Fairman took over the reins of office in a ceremony conducted by the Lieutenant Governor.

Prominent Housfield, N.Y. farmer and former waterworks engineer who supervised the installation of Belleville water system many years ago, Levi Livermore, died at his home Dec. 27 at the age of 91. Besides installing equipment here, he also worked at his profession in Kingston. The continuing usefulness of the water system during all these years bespeaks the quality of the materials used in this work, and the efficiency of the workmanship.

The 66th anniversary of the organization of Christ Church parish was celebrated on Sunday. The church originally was constructed on Moira St. across from the Cooper flour mill. The building later was destroyed by fire, following which the present church at the corner of Coleman and Catherine Streets was built

January 4, 1921

In the civic elections yesterday, Ald Charles Hanna was elected mayor over W.C. Mikel, KC., by a majority of 534; the vote was 1367 for Hanna and 824 for Mikel. The following were elected aldermen in the order given: George F. Ostrom, S J. Fisher, R. D. Adams, R. Wensley, W. A. Woodley, G. H. French, G. A. Bennett, J. Ballinger and S. H. Treverton.

Snowmobile Hazards

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Operating a snowmobile on a city street is an invitation to disaster anytime. But equally hazardous is the use of snowmobiles on railroad embankments — an offence for which stiff fines are now being meted out, incidentally, as the result of several fatal accidents involving snowmobilers who couldn't hear approaching trains over the roar of their engines — or the travelled portions of highways or rural roads or in farm fields where the carefree, and not over-observant, driver is likely to encounter a half-buried fence with grim repercussions.

Regulations banning snowmobile use within city limits are certainly needed; there is a group in any sport which has to be regulated because it won't protect its own neck. But plain common sense would avert many a needless snowmobile tragedy; simple precautions like scouting an area in advance before tearing about with throttle wide open and flying snow obscuring hazards which may exist . . . or stopping before crossing highways.

Rail Service Under Fire

Windsor Star

Ride the train and relax, say the railroads.

Ride the train and curse, say the passengers.

Herewith the unhappy saga of one Windsor passenger who took the train to Montreal with two children during the pre-Christmas rush.

Reservations were booked 10 days in advance — two adjoining bedrooms on the CNR's crack overnight train between Toronto and Montreal. Arriving at the train, the passenger found only one bedroom available, and the adjoining room piled high with the baggage of other passengers. Worse, there was no heat, and at one point in the trip to Montreal the outside temperature was 15 degrees below zero.

Passenger reaction, considerably understated: unfavorable.

And yet the CNR continues to stress service, in all forms of advertising and in public pronouncements — everywhere but where service counts the most, in actual performance.

Flush Toilet Mistake?

'Very Symbol of Civilization' Assailed

NEW YORK (AP) — The flush toilet is "the very symbol of modern civilization," says a United States government official, but it may be a technological mistake because it wastes the diminishing supply of fresh water

And the official asks in the latest issue of Environmental Science, a journal published by the American Chemical Society:

"Can modern technology devise a better method of sewage disposal than using scarce and expensive drinking water to transport human waste from the bathroom to the river or the treatment plant?"

The writer is Harold H. Leich, chief of the policy development division of the U.S. civil service commission's bureau of policies and standards.

"Present approaches seem at a dead end," Mr. Leich says. "More sewers for more people, more dollars for more treatment plants, more elaborate techniques of primary, secondary and now tertiary treatment —and still the effluent damages water quality. Is it possible that the very symbol of modern civilization, the flush toilet, was a tragic mistake?"

Mr. Leich notes that the first annual report of President Nixon's council on environmental quality says that waste loads from U.S. municipal systems are expected to almost quadruple in the next 50 years and offers an alternative to the flush toilet: a dry method of sewage disposal.

A dry method, he says, would catch the sewage in a "bio-degradable" plastic container and eliminate any offensive sight or odor with a dry powder chemical that promotes decomposition of the waste.

Canisters would be tightly sealed and placed outside the building for twice-a-week collection by a special truck. The final stage would be a trip to the country where the canisters would be plowed into the ground to decompose.

First Evidence Of Crucifixion Is Discovered

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli scholars have discovered the bones of a man crucified about 2,000 years ago, and claimed Sunday it was the first time hard evidence of a crucifixion has been found.

A 12-inch iron nail was found jammed into the ankle of the victim, said anthropologist Nico Haas.

Paleographer Yosef Naveh said the name Yechochannan was found on the victim's stone ossuary, or coffin, indicating he was Jewish.

Four other ossuaries were found with that of Yehochanan in a cave in northeast Jerusalem, but no cause of death could be established for these others.

"It appeared to be a family tomb," said Dr. Naveh. "The word shalom was inscribed on some of the ossuaries."

Shalom, the Hebrew word for peace, is used as a greeting and as a farewell.

Gandhi's Foes Unite

NEW DELHI (AP) — Three major Indian political parties buried their ideological differences Sunday night and formed an alliance to oppose Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party in the coming parliamentary elections.

The parties said they were agreed on the single objective of "defeating the present government, which is taking the country in an authoritarian and antidemocratic direction."

Ottawa Worried

Rhodesian Issue Seen Peril to Commonwealth

OTTAWA (CP) — The Rhodesian issue is still as potentially dangerous to survival of the Commonwealth as the projected British shipment of armaments to South Africa, sources here say.

It is therefore with some foreboding about the future of the Commonweath that Prime Minister Trudeau departs Tuesday for that organization's heads-of-government conference in Singapore Jan. 14-22.

On his way to and return from Singapore, Mr. Trudeau will visit five other Asian countries—Pakistan, India, Indonesia, Ceylon and Iran. He returns here Jan. 29.

Both the Rhodesian and arms issues are on the agenda of the conference at which representatives of 850 million people will express opinions privately.

At the Commonwealth conference two years ago in London, the heads of government of 28 states agreed unanimously that whatever the time needed to reverse it, the seizure of power by the small white minority in Rhodesia could be neither recognized nor tolerated.

Rhodesia unilaterally declared its independence from Britain in 1965 with some 230,000 whites controlling four million blacks. Since the London conference, Rhodesia has declared itself a republic and has initiated apartheid (racial apartness) policies similar to some of the those in South Africa.

The apprehension here is that Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain will take the position that Rhodesia is independent and that Britain can do nothing about it now or in the future.

Such a stand could lead to withdrawal of some African members from the Commonwealth and eventual breakup of the organization, informants here say.

And so could the arms issue, they add.

Sources say that if Britain goes ahead with the arms shipments, Zambia and Tanzania will quit the Commonwealth and will eventually be followed by other members.

The big problem is not considered the arms themselves but the racial overtones: British support for a white minority.

Mr. Trudeau, informants add, does not dispute Britain's authority or interests in the arms deal.

His point is that Mr. Heath should look at the consequences.

Mr. Trudeau does not consider a compromise possible on the arms issue in the sense that shipment of just a few armaments to South Africa might be okay.

He therefore has been looking for some accommodation between Britain and the African members of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Trudeau told the Commons Dec. 15: " . . . We hope that some accommodation can be reached within the framework of the Commonwealth which would permit each country to have, of course, jurisdiction over its own internal affairs but to make sure that its decisions were compatible, insofar as possible, with the maintenance and subsistence of the Commonwealth."

Mr. Trudeau said in the Commons Dec. 17 that he has "pleaded" with Mr. Heath for time to study a possible accommodation at Singapore.

Mr. Trudeau apparently does not think an African walkout would help matters.

He told the Commons after the 1969 Commonwealth meeting:

"Organizations can be broken apart by impatient members but the act of disintegration contributes nothing to the easing of the original tensions."

Fifty Thousand Britons Oppose Supply of Arms

LONDON (AP) — About 50,000 Britons have signed a petition opposing British arms sales to South Africa, the Anti-Apartheid Movement announced Sunday.

The movement's secretary, Abdul Minty, is flying to Singapore this week with the petition. He plans to hand it to Singapore's prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew, chairman of the Commonwealth summit meeting opening there Jan. 14.

The London Sunday Times says in an editorial that "nothing substantial seems to have changed in recent weeks and months over the issue of resumed supplies of British arms to South Africa."

With the conference of Commonwealth leaders due to open in Singapore Jan 14, Prime Minister Edward Heath "still maintains that British interests, which Britain alone can assess and act upon, require such a resumption," says the newspaper.

It finds that "constant reiteration about British interests" is insufficient to allay doubs in Britain about Heath's standpoint.

The prime minister should seek to reconcile the interests of this country and those of other Commonwealth nations.

Meanwhile The Sunday Telegraph reports that Heath has decided to defer a final decision on the arms issue until after the Singapore meeting.

After Early Progress, 91st Congress Stumbled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 91st Congress, its early accomplishments largely overshadowed by frustrations of the post - election session, has passed into history, only 19 days before a new House of Representatives and Senate take over.

Procrastination in the earlier months and refusal to gear its horse - and - buggy machinery to the space age created a session - end impasse which long hours and long talk could not overcome.

Adjournment came Saturday afternoon after the Senate agreed to a House-passed resolution shifting the debate over the supersonic transport plane to the 92nd Congress.

During the two - year session, the annual salary of congressmen rose to $42,500 from $30,000.

Swept under the rug in the hasty adjournment cleanup were such major proposals as welfare reform, a far-reaching foreign trade bill, increases in social security benefits and payments, and proposed constitutional amendments dealing with women's rights and presidential election reform.

The 92nd Congress convening Jan. 21 with more than 50 new faces may revive some or all of them. But they must run the entire legislative gauntlet because all legislation not passed died with the 91st.

The 91st Congress enacted many landmark laws, including laws to:

—Ban cigarette advertising from radio and television, effective Jan. 2.

—Curb drug abuses, including authority for narcotics agents to search private homes without knocking on the door.

—Eventually eliminate air-polluting emissions from automobiles and to penalize industries and shippers who foul the oceans and rivers with industrial discharges.

—Curb organized crime and help local law enforcement officials fight crime on the streets.

—Extend for three years established farm programs and limit, for the first time, subsidy payments to $55,000 a crop to producers of wheat, cotton and feed grains.

—Extend for five years a civil rights law designed to protect voting rights of Negroes and, for the first time, lower to 18 years the age of eligibility to vote in elections for federal office.

—Block nationwide rail strikes on two occasions and give rail workers a 13.5-percent wage increase. A separate measure cleared the track for guaranteed loans for railways in financial difficulties, mainly the giant Penn Central system.

—Create an independent federal agency operated by a nine-member board of governors to run the post office department and fix postal rates.

—Make family - planning services available to anyone requesting them.

MR. AND MRS. HAROLD N. FLOYSVIK

Floysvik – Howe

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the setting for the wedding ceremony on Saturday, Dec. 26, 1970, when Patricia Mary Howe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Patrick Howe, Belleville became the bride of Harold Nils Floysvik, son of Mrs. Olaf Floysvik, Toronto and the late Mr. Floysvik. Rev. Father Kenneth Stitt officiated and the organist was Miss Dorothy Grant who also accompanied the soloist Robert Burke.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of peau de soie with the bodice featuring a U neckline and above the elbow sleeves. The upper portion of the gown was enhanced with an overlay of Guipure lace as was the sheath skirt trimmed with a double border of the same lace. A matching peau de soie sleeveless coat swept into a flowing train which was also trimmed with matching lace. An illusion shoulder length veil with scalloped edge was caught to a velvet rose headdress. She carried a cascade bouquet of red carnations and holly.

Mrs. Sheldon Klimitz as matron of honor wore a red velvet empire styled floor-length gown featuring a scooped neckline and leg o' mutton sleeves with long fitted cuffs. Her headdress was a red velvet bow trimmed with pearls and she carried a white muff crested with a single poinsettia. Miss June Howe, sister of the bride and Mrs Lou Howe, sister-in-law of the bride were dressed identically to the matron of honor, but in green velvet. The flower girl Miss Tracy Shannon, cousin of the bride was dressed identically to the bridesmaidss and she too carried a white muff crested with single poinsettia.

Terry Iles attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were Michael Howe, Paul Howe, Bernard Howe, Robert and William Howe, all brothers of the bride. Ring-bearer was Todd Howe, nephew of the bride.

A reception was held in the Knights of Columbus Hall where the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a full length green moss crepe gown with jewel trim and a corsage of yellow 'mums. Assisting, the mother of the bridegroom wore a full-length gold brocade gown with a corsage of yellow 'mums.

For the wedding trip to Quebec, the bride chose a green wool coat and dress ensemble with matching beret and a white orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Floysvik will reside at 2667A Eglinton Ave., W. Apt. 3, Toronto 337.

PERSONALS

Previous to her recent marriage, Mrs. Harold N. Floysvik (nee Patricia M. Howe) was honored at a linen shower given by Mrs. Sheldon Klimitz and at a kitchen shower given by Mrs. Lou Howe with co-hostess Miss June Howe. She was also honored at a presentation given by the staff of St. Jerome's School in Downsview.

Grandmother: "We do enjoy having the children and grandchildren come for the weekend, but now that Tom is retired, it is hard on our budget. The youngsters have such big appetites that our grocery bill is more than double when they're here."

Mother: "I fixed a big pot of stew to take to Grandmother's house. We'll have it for dinner tonight and then tomorrow, we'll take Grandmother and Grandfather out to dinner. It will be a treat for all of us."

No matter how much retired couples may enjoy your company, your visits may be a problem because the extra meals are a strain on their carefully budgeted resources. Provide some of the food when visiting grandparents or other elderly relatives to save not only the expense, but the drain on their energy as well.

Few of Today's Revolutions Only Amount to Revelations

Relax, enjoy the revolution!

There's enough talk of revolution these days to unsettle the most settled folk. Enough talk of confrontation and dissenion to unnerve the most iron-nerved. Not all of it, however, is the kind that calls for barricades of rival groups to slug it out on Main Street.

In some cases it amounts to no more than a revelation here and there, from this and that government agency, regarding lack of nutrition in our cherished breakfast cereals or the powerlessness of our favorite toothpaste to prevent cavities — revolutionary enough when stacked up against the gospel according to Madison Avenue!

On the other hand, it can be absorbing when it comes in the context of new ways to present the otherwise conventional and bring it into line with the lifestyle of the '70's.

Take fur, for example. Little more than forty years ago furs were beaten with bamboo sticks whenever cleaning time came around. There was no other way and it was better than nothing. On the whole though, the beating technique did little to remove deep seated dust and grime. Nowadays dust and dirt is removed and lustre revived by rotation in drums containing sawdust and mild solutions that not only clean the furs deep down, but also soften the skins and help keep them supple, at the same time cleansing the lining.

To protect furs against dryness and wet, a plastic finish is sprayed on that is similar to hairspray. In the case of sheared furs, electricity is used to correct matting and condition the fur to its proper sleek straightness.

With this kind of treatment furs last twice as long and stay as beautiful as the day they were bought for however long they are worn.

To keep fur in top condition it should be stored during the summer months and cleaned and "glazed" once a year, however infrequent the wearing may be.

Furs and fur fashions feature prominently in fashion news at all times but rarely is the lining of fashion garments discussed. Understandable perhaps, yet the lining of a fur coat in which the average Canadian woman is destined to spend the better part of six months of the year, is really a very important item.

The lining is one thing you shouldn't stint on when buying a fur coat. It takes a lot of the stress and strain of daily wear, literally helping to keep your coat in good shape. The "revolution" in synthetic textiles has made an immense variety of fascinating fabrics available for lining furs. Most of them with superior wearing qualities.

Advances in printing and dyeing techniques have broadened today's spectrum of color and types of linings. When the area of supply was as limited as the choice, black, brown and grey in solid colors, were standard. Now you can range happily through all the colors of the rainbow and a wild and wonderful selection of prints.

Of course, a coat off the rack comes complete with lining but you can still check the quality with your furrier.

A distinctly revolutionary trend in presentation and dyeing techniques has given us furs in a galaxy of bright colors including such improbable shades as crimson, kelly green and bright yellow. For the techniques that make fur dyeing possible the fur trade is indebted to the beauty parlor! It was there that the special methods necessary for the dyeing of natural hair were first developed.

A fur which comes by its wide assortment of colors and tones naturally and without any sort of help from the dyers vat, is ranched mink. Few wild, fur bearing animals respond to scientific breeding techniques and most outstanding of those that do, is mink. Ranched mink accounts for almost two-thirds of pelts of all kinds taken in Canada each year and is popular in both domestic and export markets for its beauty and — despite a delicate appearance — its remarkable durability.

It is, in fact, one of the most hardwearing of all furs. A system of cross breeding among different color strains produces mutations of those colors and, frequently, entirely different shades from the originals. Canada Mink Breeders' Association members have a list of fourteen shades among those regularly produced. These vary from a natural dark, through white to grey, blue, lavender and pink, to mention just a few. The shades are, of course, all soft and — in the main — pale.

The mink produced by CMB is graded in a variety of different categories, the best of which are described as Canada Majestic Mink — an internationally famous label. Each grade of mink has its own price level, which is a happy thought since it puts Canada's finest within reach " . . . even of thee and me!"

Ann Landers

Remembering Names Sometimes Difficult

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That was a terrible letter from the woman who called her mother senile just because she couldn't remember the names of her children.

ANN LANDERS

Our own dear mother lived to be 88. There were 11 children in our family. We were all born before Mother was 32 She could never remember any of our names so she used to call us by our birthdays. I was "January 3." Everyone called me "Jan" for short. (They still do.) The two youngest in our family were twins. Mom called Harold, "Boy, February 9" and Burdette, "Girl, February 9." My oldest brother is called "Ape" by everyone. (His birthday was April 8th.) The only confusion was with my sisters June and Marie. When Mom would holler "June 1" she was calling Marie, but sometimes June (whose birthday was in December) would answer. Outside of that mixup there was no trouble.

Some people thought this was very strange. We never did. It seemed perfectly natural to us. So please print my letter and remind your readers that every mother has her own little oddities and this doesn't mean she is nuts — JANUARY 3.

DEAR JAN: Thanks for letting us know how it was in your family. My mother called us by our names. Sometimes she'd call three names before she hit the right one — but she always made it eventually.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a freshman at a Midwestern University and I live in a dorm. I hope you'll answer in the paper because if a letter from Ann Landers showed up for me I'd die.

The problem is simple. I can't get a girl. I've had a few blind dates but when I ask a chick on my own I strike out.

I'm not the ugliest guy in the world and I can't figure out why I'm poison ivy. I see real jerks scoring left and right. One kid in this dorm who is a case of arrested development actually gets phone calls from dames. I'm a fairly good conversationalist and I really dig a solid rap session. Can you suggest something? I like chicks as well as the next guy but they don't like me. What's the word? — THE LONER.

DEAR LONER: You say you like chicks as well as the next guy — but who is the next guy, and how well does he like girls? Does he like them well enough to try a second or third time after he's been turned down? And what kind of chicks do you chase? The campus beauty who has twelve other cats running after her? You might hit pay dirt by calling that quiet, not-so-gorgeous gal who doesn't seem to have much going for her. You could solve your problem and hers, too.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What's wrong with telephoning a boy? My mother thinks it is terrible. The guy I go with is a freshman at Northwestern University. He enjoys a nap in the afternoon after his 2:00 class. He has asked me to phone him every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 4:40 to wake him up.

My mother says it is not nice for girls to call boys. I think she is living in another century. What do you think? — DING-A-LING.

DEAR DING: I think you ought to buy your boyfriend an alarm clock for Christmas.

Successful Living

Daughter-in-Law Is Unsure of Herself

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We got our son from infancy and he's been always like our own son.

His new wife resents him kissing me goodbye if they go on any long trip. Isn't mother love different from wife love — Pushed Aside.

Dear Pushed: Foolishly, the young bride sees in you a rival Certainly mother love is different from wife love, but it may take a while for this wife to discover that it is legitimate for a mother to kiss her son. Perhaps when her own son grows up!

Could you withdraw from your son a little until more confidence has grown between you and this uncertain young woman See! if you can start loving her — really loving her — a little, and showing it.

• • •

Dear Doris: If it is in your scope I would be interested in a list of low cholesterol foods or diets.

My family are all tall and thin but me and yet cholesterol levels are up a little higher than they should be and mine is quite high. — Forty.

Dear Forty: Sometimes I think just about everything is within the scope of a social worker — everything that has to do with successful living, that is.

The main source of cholesterol is animal fat. This means butter, cream, cheese and the fat part of the meat. So to cut down on cholesterol you would avoid these things, carefully trim the fat off your meat, drink skim milk, and substitute vegetable fats as in salad oils and margarine, where you need to.

The dietitians tell us that there is cholesterol in eggs, and that especially as we grow older we should have not more than one egg every other day — just twice a week, preferably. Aging arteries tend to store cholesterol to their detriment.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am 15, male and I was born with strictly limited vision. I will never be able to get a driver's permit.

My main concern is dating. I am an organist and the only type of entertainment that would be of any interest to me would be concerts, opera, recitals, movies. Going by taxi would be a pain in the wallet and our bus service is most inconvenient.

I definitely would not care for the idea of being chauffeured by my parents, and I'd feel like two cents having a girl friend at the wheel. What do I do — Near Sighted

Dear Near Sighted: If a man in a wheel chair and a fellow who is a deaf mute, can court the girls, so can you. I know of plenty of handicaps who have made good marriages.

Believe it or not, there are young ladies who enjoy dating because they like the personality of the person they are with. I know girls who are happy to drive their escorts, and plenty of parents who would rather drive a boy and girl to a concert than trust a teen-ager with the family car.

Once you get enough self-respect and confidence you won't feel like two cents any more. But you do have to offer good company to your girl. Work on that.

Homemade Bread Is Superior to Store Bread

By MARY MOORE

In the supermarket I watched a customer stashing six loaves of oatmeal bread in her buggy. It made me want to make oatmeal bread too. There is nothing that makes me feel more like a good baker than to bake my own bread. Remember girls, that you can save money making your own and the flavor is so superior to store bread that there is no comparison. Toasted, the bread I am giving you today is superb.

OATMEAL BREAD

(2 loaves; no sifting of flour; freezes well)

1 pkge. granular yeast
1 tsp. sugar (first amount)
½ cup lukewarm water
2 cups scalded milk
3 tbsps. shortening
2 tbsps. sugar (second amount)
2 tsps. salt
1 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
1 cup unsifted whole wheat flour
4 cups unsifted instant flour — divided

In large mixing bowl soak yeast with sugar (first amount) in lukewarm water 10 min. Add shortening, salt and sugar (second amount) to scalded milk which has been removed from heat. Also stir in the rolled oats and whole wheat flour until blended and cooled to lukewarm. Add to risen yeast liquid. Beat 3 cups of the instant flour in as well as you can. Cover and let rise at room temperature about 2½-hrs. or until at least doubled in size.

Stir down dough. It is quite soft. Sprinkle kneading board with remaining 1 cup flour and turn dough out on it. Pick up some of the flour and sprinkle over top then knead all of this flour into dough. I kneaded it 75 times.

Cut dough into halves and shape into 2 loaves and put in buttered standard loaf pans and let rise until 1½" above rims of pans at centre under lamp or in warmish place. Mine took 2½-hrs. Bake at dead centre of oven at 375 deg. Fahr. 35 min. or until when tapped it sounds hollow and has a rich golden crust. Cool on racks. If desired freezerwrap and freeze one loaf but serve one as soon as possible fresh from the oven.

Not This Time

This breakaway by Belleville Mo-Hawk centre Bill Armour was one of the Belleville scoring chances Kingston goalie Mike Lovett managed to stop. The Mo-Hawks beat the Aces 4-1 in Kingston Sunday night to move within a point of their fourth-place senior hockey rivals. It was the fifth time the Mo-Hawks have beaten Kingston in six meetings this season.

Aces Starting to Believe Mo-Hawks Have Their Number

By MAURICE SWITZER

Sports Editor

KINGSTON — Whoever has been telling Kingston Aces they can't beat Belleville Mo-Hawks has had a good audience

The Aces appeared to be telling their 2,113 spectators the same thing Sunday night when they dropped a 4-1 home ice decision to the Mo-Hawks, their fifth loss to their prime senior hockey rivals in six meetings this season.

Their third win on Kingston ice this season meant several things to the fifth-place Mo-Hawks.

They evened their season's record at 12-12, moved to within one point of the fourth place Aces (with one game in hand), and stayed three points ahead of Oakville in the eight - team Senior A standings.

The Mo-Hawk formula of close - checking and waiting for openings again frustrated the Aces, who made enough mistakes to make watchers wonder how they had beaten such top - rung clubs as Orillia.

It took barely four minutes for the Aces to make their first miscue. Defenceman Pete Ford decided he wanted to stickhandle his way through the Belleville side while his team was shorthanded. He made it as far as Greg Marchen, who threw the puck up to Ray Johnston.

Johnston out - raced a puffing Ford up the left side and skipped a soft one between goalie Mike Lovett's pads.

The most glaring Kingston error of the night came only two minutes later with Johnston and John Mercer sitting out simultaneous minors.

Lovett and two of his mates simply left the puck in the slot. Ralph Plane almost tripped over his skates in his eagerness to slap it into a gaping Kingston net.

The 2-0 lead held up until the opening minutes of the second period, when Charlie Convery fooled Steve Rexe with a 35-footer along the ice just after Ralph Plane returned from a hooking minor.

Rexe, who has now allowed only 11 Kingston goals in six games, was a deciding factor in helping the Mo-Hawks hold their reduced lead. Greg Marchen provided some breathing room with a power-play goal at 12:42 to put the Mo-Hawks up 3-1.

The main excitement of the middle period was generated by a Pete Ford — Ralph Plane swinging match. Ford started the duel by retaliating for a Mo-Hawk check he thought was thrown by Plane.

Plane was innocent, and a few well-placed jabs to Ford's face convinced the Kingston player to drop the charges.

Plane and ex-Ace Doug Senior were constant targets of Kingston attacks as the Aces seemed bent on intimidating the team that has frustrated them so consistently.

A slapshot by Bill Armour from just inside the Kingston blueline eluded Lovett and took the steam out of the Aces at 13:15 of the final period.

The score could have easily been 7-1. Doug Senior missed on two breakaway attempts, and Bill Armour one.

But the Mo-Hawks, most of whom have not been on skates since a Dec. 22 home win over Kingston, were happy to settle for the two points by any margin.

They played without the services of defence regular Lou Kazowski, sidelined by the flu, and replaced capably by playing - coach Dave Jones.

Next home action for the Mo-Hawks is a 9 p.m. Friday game with third-place Barrie Flyers.

Fairways Stick to Formula In Sunday Tie with Oshawa

By ERIC EMERSON

Staff Sportswriter

Belleville Fairways proved that there's more than a little truth to the saying than "an oak tree is just a little nut who stuck with it" in a pair of Eastern Ontario Junior B contests with Oshawa this weekend.

Saturday night the Fairways abandoned the close checking formula that they had used in the first period as Oshawa wiped out a 2-1 Belleville lead and went on to record a lop-sided 12-3 win.

The Sunday game in Belleville was a different story however with the home team staying on top of the Crushmen throughout most of the contest and coming up with a 3-3 tie.

"We were coming back tonight and that made the big difference", noted Belleville coach Floyd Crawford. "In Saturday's game we stayed right on top of them for the first period, but we just abandoned the close checking."

Goalie Ron Jury got the Fairways off on the right foot Sunday night, stopping league leading scorer Steve West three times in succession early in the first period.

Danny Lupenette opened the scoring for Belleville with a power play goal at 7.47 of the first frame. Team captain John Mulvihill set up Lupenette, whose 20-foot slap shot beat goalie Dennis Higgins high to his stick side.

Right winger Doug James made it 2-0 just over a minute later firing a low screened shot into the bottom corner after collecting Dave Ferguson's centering pass.

The Belleville B's missed two gilt-edged scoring chances near the end of the first period when Danny Lupenette fired the puck wide of the net on a breakaway attempt and Brian O'Coin's ten-footer on a power-play attack went over the net.

A middle frame lapse proved costly to Belleville as the Crushmen took advantage of the loose checking to score a pair of goals.

"We had a bit of a let down in the second period," admitted Crawford, "the wingers weren't coming back quite as well and we were stick checking in our own end instead of taking out the man."

Steve West helped set up the first Crushman goal sizzling a power play drive from the blue line. Centre John Grant lifted the puck over Ron Jury who had made the initial save.

West knotted the score at 12:08 of the second period, picking up a loose puck in the Belleville end and catching the right hand corner with his low shot.

Rod Palmer closed out the second - period scoring with a goal at 16:18. Higgins stopped Joe Clarke on a breakaway attempt and Palmer was unable to lift the rebound over the prostrate Oshawa goalie, who had lost his stick in the scramble. The Belleville winger then caught the corner from a scramble in front of the net to give his team a 3-2 lead.

Alan Bathe pulled the Crushmen even in the third period, splitting the Belleville defence and beating Jury on his stick side.

Both goalies came up with key saves in the final minutes as Higgins foiled Lupenette on a breakaway attempt and Jury halted clear cut scoring chances by Bathe and Dave Tessier.

Higgins came up with a total of 31 saves while Jury was called upon to make 29 stops.

Tim Yohn and Danny Lupenette got Belleville off to an early lead in Saturday's contest but the Fairways were unable to contain Oshawa on their home ice as the second place Crushmen wracked up a 12-3 victory.

Don Hudgin paced the winners with a four goal performance, while Scott Willson added three more and Larry Hopkins chipped in a pair. Single goals went to Steve West, Alan Bathe and Jim Robson.

The Imperials earned the trophy last week at Orillia by winning three of the five games they contested. Also in the picture are team captain Tim Yohn and sponsor Blake Kerr.

Novices Bow Out Early

Belleville's novice entries suffered similar fates in OMHA tournament action over the weekend.

Towers Food City Novice "A"s lost both of their games in the Brockville Tournament Saturday. The Belleville Novices were blanked 3-0 by Orillia and stopped 6-1 by Cornwall. Gary McInroy was the lone Towers marksman.

Mulroney's Novice Minors suffered the same fate in Saturday's Marmora Novice Tourney dropping their opener 5-1 to Peterborough and being edged 5-4 by Stirling in the second game.

Tim Soule counted the only goal in Mulroney's opening loss to Peterborough. In the second contest it was Wayne Deighton with a pair of goals and Billy Rowe and Kevin Meacher with singles.

Rollins peewees won a 5-2 exhibition match against Napanee Sunday getting two goals each from Mike Bennett and Bobby Crawford and a single tally from Peter Coates.

The Kinsmen Bantams took a pair of tight decisions stopping Napanee 3-2 Saturday and edging Gananoque 1-0 in a Sunday bout.

Steve Kirby scored with one second remaining in the game to pull out the win over Napanee. Bruce Sutherland got Belleville's other two goals.

Goalie Jeff Merrill earned the shutout and Peter Crawford got the game's only goal in the victory over Gananoque.

The Blake Kerr Imperials dropped a 6-4 league decision to the Trenton Lions midgets Sunday, despite leading 3-2 after two periods.

Mark Coates had a pair of goals for the losers with single scores coming from Brian Cousins and Rob Foster.

Cowboys, Colts Win Respective Tickets to Miami

Dallas Coach Doubter Just Six Weeks Ago

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Coach Tom Landry of Dallas Cowboys really admits he thought six weeks ago his team's chances of reaching the big money of the National Football League Super Bowl were zero.

Yet these same Cowboys now prepare to battle Baltimore Colts in the premier football show at Miami Jan. 17.

"Baltimore's offence will provide much the same challenge as did the '49ers," reasoned Landry after his team beat San Francisco 17-10 Sunday in Kezar Stadium to capture the championship of the National Football Conference.

Going back less than two months, Dallas had just lost to St. Louis 38-0 and early in the season had fallen to Minnesota 54-13.

And there was that history of the Cowboys losing big games —title battles to Green Bay in 1966 and 1967 and failing to get past the first playoff rounds the next two years.

History didn't repeat when they battled the '49ers. With a tremendous running game powered by rookie Duane Thomas and Walt Garrison, Dallas beat favored San Francisco.

Thomas, a 220-pound rookie from West Texas State, scored the touchdown that broke a 3-3 tie in the second half and Garrison scored the one that made the final difference on a five-yard pass from quarterback Craig Morton.

First-half scoring came on a 16-yard field goal Bruce Gossett of the '49ers and a 21-yarder by Dallas's Mike Clark.

"Lee Roy Jordan's interception was the real key play," Landry said. "But the key to the game was our ability to run the football."

On Jordan's interception, quarterback John Brodie had been dropped at his 14 for a seven-yard loss by Dave Edwards. He next threw a low one that Jordan caught at his shoetops at the 17 and returned to the 13, setting up Thomas's run for the game's first touchdown with four minutes gone in the second half.

"I was trying to throw it into the ground," Brodie admitted.

"The guy made a great play."

Thomas, who gained 143 yards rushing during the game, credited his offensive line for the Dallas touchdown on the ensuing play.

"I misread the blocks and started to go outside before I realized I was supposed to go inside tackle and when I corrected, the hole was still there," Thomas declared. "That shows just how great our line really is."

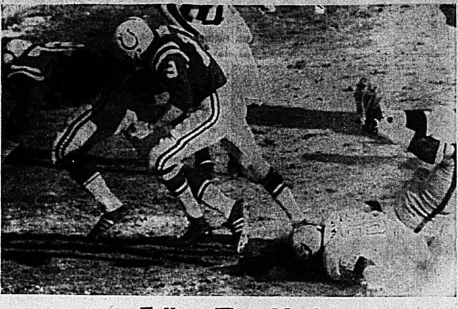
Garrison scored on the first play after the '49ers' Mel Phillips was charged with interference at the five on a pass intended for Bob Hayes—a 24-yard penalty on a pass which obviously was far over the intended receiver.

San Francisco had its moments, even though trailing 17-3 after an interception by Mel Renfro at the Cowboy 20 and return to the 38 started Dallas toward its second touchdown.

The '49ers took the ensuing kickoff and marched 73 yards in eight plays with Brodie hitting Dick Witcher on a 26-yard touchdown pass.

On the ground, the Cowboys gained 229 yards to 61 for San Francisco. In the air, it was San Francisco 246 to 90 for Dallas.

"We have won with the running game in past weeks, and we didn't change our plan for this one," Landry concluded.



Follow That Man!

Baltimore quarterback Johnny Unitas follows the blocking of Bob Vogel (72) as he runs for a first down to Oakland's 10-yard line during first quarter. Oakland defender Carleton Oats slides headfirst on the ground. Colts won berth in Super Bowl by downing Raiders 27-17.

Baltimore's Own Fans Had Written Them Off

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Colts, doubted by their followers and outcasts in the American Football Conference, are on their way to the Super Bowl.

Forcing the breaks, which coach Don McCafferty said would make the difference, the Colts polished off Oakland Raiders 27-17 Sunday to win the AFC title and debunk charges they had yet to prove themselves.

Now it's on to Miami for a Jan. 17 Super Bowl date against Dallas Cowboys, who defeated San Francisco '49ers 17-10 for the National Conference championship, and a shot at another $15,000 prize.

The Colts will collect a minimum $8,500 for whipping the favored Raiders, but there was more than money at stake.

"Maybe this will wipe out our game against Kansas City which millions of people saw on television," said Dick Bielski, coach of Baltimore's receivers.

Even Baltimore fans were willing to write off the Colts after they were manhandled 44-24 by the Chiefs in the second game of the season.

Nothing the Colts did later changed the early season opinions. Even when they won the Eastern Division with an 11-2-1 record, the Colts were accused of having faced patsy opposition.

In addition, as one of three former National Football League teams switched to the AFC with 10 onetime American League teams, the Colts were considered outsiders.

But the Raiders were the last of the old AFL teams left, and the Super Bowl will match two longtime NFL rivals.

A 68-yard touchdown pass from 37-year-old John Unitas to Ray Perkins, after Oakland had pulled to within 20-17 early in the fourth quarter, sent the Raiders down to defeat.

Perkins, bothered by a broken toe and suffering from a fever which limited his practice during the week to 20 minutes, broke free as the Colts used four wide receivers in a play pattern tried for the first time this year.

George Blanda, Oakland's 43-year-old wonder whose last-minute heroics during the regular season brought the Raiders to the title game, rallied them again after starting quarterback Daryle Lamonica was hurt in the second quarter.

But the Colts moved ahead to stay on rookie Jim O'Brien's second field goal, and then made it 20-10 when rookie Norm Bulaich scored his second touchdown.

Baltimore's rugged defence, which blanked the Cincinnati Bengals 17-0 in the playoff opener, dumped Oakland quarterbacks five times for 48 yards in losses and picked off three interceptions.

In addition, Sam Havrilak recovered a fumbled punt by George Atkinson to set up a second-quarter TD which put the Colts ahead 10-0.

Bulaich, Baltimore's No. 1 draft pick who blossomed late after overcoming injuries and an early tendency to fumble, gained 71 yards on 22 carries. Unitas completed just 11 of 30 passes for 245 yards, but lost only eight yards behind the line and wasn't intercepted.

The Colts, who lost to the New York Jets in their only previous Super Bowl appearance, sent the AFC's leading passer to the bench when end Bubba Smith smacked down Lamonica and injured his groin.

Blanda completed 17 of 32 passes for 271 yards, including a 38-yarder to Fred Biletnikoff in the third quarter which tied it 10-10 and a 15-yarder to Warren Wells to pull Oakland to within 20-17. Both scoring drives went 80 yards.

This Book Had Sad Ending

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Eddie, the neighborhood bookie, is unhappy and broke because of the upsets in the United States college football bowls.

Eddie—that's not his real name—guaranteed half his life savings that Texas would beat Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl and that Ohio State would mop up Stanford in the Rose Bowl.

"You're damned right I thought I had a cinch bet," Eddie reflected glumly over a cocktail. "Who would figure that Texas wouldn't be able to run against Notre Dame?"

"The whole college football season was ruined by those two bowl games," Eddie said.

"All year long, Texas runs over people. So suddenly they fall to pieces against Notre Dame, which looked terrible against Southern Cal in its final game of the year. Next year this kid is gonna close up shop and spend Christmas and New Year's at home with the wife where I belong."

"What really upsets me is this guy that works down town," Eddie said "Well, I jokingly sent him a Christmas card saying, 'My new house is great. Thank you for making the down payment,' because he had blown about $5,000 on crazy bets all year.

"So what does he do? He throws $500 on Notre Dame. Now he gets all his money back, my car and half my house. "Then he sends me a little card, saying, 'Dear Eddie. My daughters want to thank you for financing them through college'. I could have cried."

Scores Two Birthday Goals

Hawks' Hull Bids to Break Bruin Monopoly

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks, the only player in the National Hockey League to break the 50-goal barrier more than once, has been overshadowed in the last two seasons by the scoring exploits of Boston's Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr.

But with the season nearing its halfway mark, Hull seems to be making a bid to break the Esposito-Orr monopoly in the scoring race.

Esposito, scoring champion in the 1968-69 season, and defenceman Orr, the winner last season, are battling it out again his season for top scoring honors. And they are receiving valuable support from their teammates, including left winger John Bucyk.

Hull, who celebrated his 32nd birthday Sunday, scored two goals in leading Chicago to a 5-3 victory over Buffalo Sabres. He scored a goal and assisted on two others Saturday as the Hawks beat Philadelphia Flyers 3-1.

The three goals give him 23 for the season, and with his 27 assists, he has 50 points, tied for third place in NHL scoring with Bucyk, who has the same figures.

However, Hull is still a long way from scoring-leader Esposito, who went without a goal in his last three games but has a comfortable 72 points on 34 goals and 38 assists, 10 more than Orr with 62 points on 15 goals and 47 assists.

In other games Sunday night, Detroit Red Wings, after a humiliating 13-0 loss to Toronto Maple Leafs Saturday night, snapped a three-game losing streak and edged California Golden Seals 3-2, Boston downed Philadelphia 5-1, New York Rangers kept pace with the first-place Bruins by defeating Montreal Canadiens 6-5 and St Louis Blues scored three goals in the first 13 minutes to coast to 7-3 victory over Los Angeles Kings.

Saturday, the Canadiens beat the Seals 5-3, Los Angeles and Minnesota North Stars tied 3-3 New York defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 3-1 and St. Louis downed Vancouver Canucks by the same score in other games.

Hull scored the winning goal Sunday night against the Sabres at 19:14 of the second period, breaking a 3-3 tie. Then with 47 seconds left in the game he scored into an empty net. Before Hull's goals, Chicago had to come from behind three times on Buffalo goals by Doug Barrie, Paul Andrea and Steve Atkinson.

Detroit's win against the Seals was its second in its last 10 games. Goalie Roy Edwards, back in the lineup after being sidelined since Dec. 6 with a skull fracture, made several fine saves against the Seals although he only had to handle 21 shots. The Wings, on the other hand, bombarded California goalie Gary Smith with 43 shots.

BOBBY HULL

Wayne Connelly's deflection of a Gary Bergman shot at 13:30 of the second period gave Detroit the win. Garry Unger and Bruce MacGregor scored the other Detroit goals while Doug Roberts and Norm Ferguson scored for the Seals, who are last in the West Division.

Bucyk scored three goals, pacing the Bruins over the Flyers, who have lost 11 straight games, tying an all-time club record. His first goal came at 7:05 of the second period and he scored two power-play goals in the third. Earl Heiskala got Philadelphia's goal.

Dave Balon was the opportunist for the Rangers as he scored his second goal of the night with just 55 seconds left to give New York the win over the Canadiens. The winning goal came four minutes after a miscue in front of the Ranger nets had given Mickey Redmond the tying goal for the Canadiens.

New York goalie Ed Giacomin had stopped Redmond's breakaway only to have Ranger defenceman Arnie Brown accidentally put the puck into the Ranger nets, tying the game 5-5.

Frank St. Marseille and Christian Bordeleau led the St. Louis attack, each with a goal and two assists. Seven different players had a part in the scoring against the Kings.

The win left the Blues unbeaten in their last six games but they are still 10 points behind first-place Chicago in the West Division.

Bobby Hull skated through almost the entire Philadelphia team to set up the winning goal Saturday for Chicago, leaving a trail of fallen Flyers in his wake before passing to Bryan Campbell, who set up Chico Maki at 12:30 of the final period. Hull later scored into an empty net with eight seconds remaining.

Toronto's drubbing of the Red Wings was the worst in Detroit history, surpassing the Wings' 11-2 defeat at the hands of the Rangers on Jan. 25, 1942.

Norm Ullman, Paul Henderson, Darryl Sittler and Billy MacMillan each scored twice for Toronto. Ullman had two assists to go with his two goals. Jim Harrison had three assists and a goal for four points while five other Leafs each collected three points.

Detroit rookie goalie Jim Rutherford was replaced by another rookie, Don McLeod, at the end of the first period when the Leafs had scored three goals. The Leafs bombed them with 49 shots, 20 in the third period

Jacques Plante and Bruce Gamble shared the shutout for Toronto, Plante stopping 21 shots in the first two periods. He sat out the third period afer striking his head on the ice in a goal-mouth scramble late in the second. Gamble took over and stopped another 10 shots.

Although the score was lopsided, no NHL records were set in the game. The Red Wings themselves set the record for most consecutive goals in one game when they walloped New York Rangers 15-0 in 1944. And they also hold the NHL record jointly with Leafs for the most scoring points in one game—37. Leafs came close to breaking the record by scoring 35.

Montreal holds the NHL record for most goals scored in an NHL game. The Canadiens established it on March 3, 1920, with a 16-3 walloping of Quebec Bulldogs.

The Seals outshot the Canadiens at Montreal but top goaltending by Phil Myre and goals by Jean Beliveau, Peter Mahovlich, Claude Larose, Jacques Lemaire and Guy Lapointe gave Montreal the win.

At Los Angeles, Bob Pulford helped set up two goals by Doug Robinson and one by Gilles Marotte to gain a tie for the Kings after the North Stars had taken a 3-1 lead. Tommy Williams scored twice for Minnesota.

New York goalie Gilles Villemure, with the Rangers outshot 18-2 in the final period, held off a Pittsburgh rally to preserve the win. The Penguins had taken a 1-0 lead in the first period but the Rangers took over and made it 3-1 by the second.

Bordeleau, Tim Ecclestone and Jim Morrison scored for St. Louis as the Blues handed the Canucks their fourth loss in five games.

The Canucks, who are fifth in the seven-team East Division, Sunday called up five players from Rochester Americans, their American League farm club Scheduled to join the Canucks in Montreal for a game against the Canadiens Wednesday are forwards Ralph Stewart, Garth Rizzuto and Bob Cook and defenceman John Schella and Dave Dunn.

Three players will be sent to Rochester from Vancouver but their names have been withheld. Vancouver also has been without their captain, Orland Kurtenbach, for almost two weeks. He is recovering from knee surgery.

Esposito Hasn't Scored This Year

Phil Esposito leads the National Hockey League's individual scoring race with 34 goals and 38 assists for 72 points but the lanky Bruin has failed to score a goal this year.

Boston Bruins have played two games in the 1971 season and Esposito has been limited to just two assists, including one Sunday night as the powerful Bruins downed Philadelphia Flyers, 5-1.

Second-place Bobby Orr scored a goal and added two assists in the game to give him 62 points on 15 goals and 47 assists.

Team-mate John Bucyk scored three goals in Sunday's win to raise his season total point to 50, 12 behind Orr.

Chicago's Bobby Hull, also with 50 points, scored two goals and added an assist as the Black Hawks defeated Buffalo Sabres 5-3 Sunday.

Boy of 12 Killed By Cougar in B.C.

LYTTON, B.C. (CP) — Lawr[illegible] killed by a cougar Saturday while playing [illegible] two sisters near their home in the Lytton area of the Fraser Canyon, about 100 miles northeast of Vancouver.

The boy's father, prospector John Wells, shot the animal three times as it dragged the boy but Lawrence was dead when his father reached him.

The cougar ran off, wounded, and was found prone in the bush by RCMP officers. An officer fired two more shots into it to make sure it was dead.

A neighbor, Nathalie Cenname, said one of the boy's sisters told her the animal attacked Lawrence as he crawled out of a culvert near railway tracks about five miles east of here.

"They were down on the embankment and the children were going through that culvert," Mrs. Cenname said. "They had the dog with them but it wouldn't go in; it must have sensed something."

She said the boy's parents, alerted by the girls, went down to the embankment. "They couldn't see anything so they crawled into the culvert. They saw the animal drag the youngster away."

"The father shot the animal. He shot high because he hoped the boy was still alive. He shot it three times and he wounded it and the animal ran away then."

RCMP said the cougar apparently made no move to attack the boy's sisters, Bernadette, 10, and Valerie, 7.

Blizzards Drop Foot of Snow On U.S. from Rockies to Lakes

CHICAGO (AP) — Blizzards spread a foot-deep topping of white from the Rockies to the Great Lakes and thousands of motorists who expected to get home Sunday night gave up and sought whatever shelter was available.

Highways were closed in many states including Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Utah. Long lines of cars were stalled in roads or stuck in drifts.

Motels were jammed and makeshift shelters sprang up in diners and service stations.

A number of airports closed or cut operations.

At least six deaths were attributed to the storm, which rode winds up to 50 m.p.h. along a chilly arc that stretched from New Mexico to northwestern Illinois and Minnesota.

Police blamed fierce winds and low visibility caused by driving snow for the crash of a light plane near Eureka, Utah, that killed a Minnesota couple.

A New Mexico woman was killed when her car slid off snow-packed U.S. 64 and into the Rio Grande north of Santa Fe, and in Kansas the body of a motorist was found 100 yards from where his car had stalled in deep snow. He apparently was a heart attack victim, police said.

In Nebraska, a 47-year-old Omaha man died Sunday night after apparently suffering a heart attack while shovelling snow. A truck converted to a snow plow became stuck near Millard and one of two men inside died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The blizzard described by veterans as perhaps the most severe in the Lincoln and Omaha area in 25 years, brought travel, business and industry to a halt. The homecoming welcome for the University of Nebraska's Orange Bowl champions, stranded in Miami, was postponed for at least a day.

Lincoln got 13 inches of snow and Omaha 10. Totals of six inches were measured in Moline, Ill., and Chicago.

Midway Airport in Chicago closed. O'Hare International sent inbound flights elsewhere for a time and Mitchell Field in Milwaukee cut operations.

Schools throughout the Middle West, set to reopen after Christmas vacation, called delays as snow snarled transportation systems.

Travel warnings were posted from Texas to Michigan, where flurries froze to highways coating them with a treacherous glaze.

Seven to eight inches of snow accumulated in the Oklahoma Panhandle. Rain fell from the southern edge of the blizzard belt to the Gulf of Mexico.

At the edge of the snowline, a windstorm overturned three trailer homes and a tornado damaged houses in Arkadelphia, Ark. No injuries were reported. High winds and large hail walloped other areas of Arkansas.

Snow stranded in Concordia, Kan., a high school band en route home from the Orange Bowl.

Snow was so deep in Wisconsin it forced authorities to call off a snowmobile race, although 5,000 fans made the trip to the Milwaukee suburb of Menominee to watch the contest.

At least 250 motorists stranded in hip-deep drifts on Interstate 80 west of Lincoln, Neb., found lodging in a truck stop.

Foggy Windshield May Be Due To Tiny Hole in Heater Core

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"My six-year-old car has gone 64,000 miles, and I do most of my own running repairs. About a month ago, a problem developed for which I cannot find the answer.

"In mid-October, I flushed out the cooling system with a special detergent recommended for this purpose and then installed new antifreeze. Now each time I use the defrosters the windshield fogs up on the inside — forming a greasy film which is hard to remove with a rag.

"Thinking that fumes were seeping into the body from the engine compartment, I did the following: washed down the engine; replaced the rocker-cover gasket to correct an oil leak; cleaned the oil filler breather cap, and installed a new PCV valve. But the problem continues and seems to be getting even worse.

"Right now I cannot afford expensive repair bills. Could you diagnose this problem and tell me how to cure it at a reasonable cost?" — Mr. R. L. B., Scarborough, Ont.

To provide heat to the car's interior, the heater contains a miniature version of the radiator core which is filled with engine coolant at all times. When the engine reaches normal operating temperature, hot coolant is pumped through the core. An electric blower, or the natural force of outside air that circulates through the heater when the car is in motion, draws the heat from the core and forces it into the car and up to the defrosters.

Occasionally, a minute hole in the heater core allows the coolant to seep out, turn into steam, and settle on the windshield. The problem is more critical when ethylene glycol is present in the cooling system. The glycol deposits an oily film on the windshield and much rubbing is needed to clean it from the glass.

The proper way to cure this problem is to remove the heater assembly from the car, dismantle it, and send the core to a radiator shop to be tested and repaired. Sometimes a badly-worn core must be replaced, and even when you do your own work the core alone can run from about $25 and up, depending on the make of the car.

However, there is a short cut that often affords at least a temporary cure until you are ready to do the job properly. Buy a can of top quality stop-leak and pour it into the radiator. With the engine running and up to operating temperature, in a short time this additive will circulate through the heater core hopefully sealing any minute holes in it.

Never race a cold engine excessively until it has run long enough (five to 10 minutes, depending on outside temperature and size of engine) to generate enough heat to open the thermostat. Flooring the gas pedal before the thermostat opens can build up internal pressure in the cooling system and rupture the heater core of even a brand-new vehicle.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Accidents Not Tragic

We say that differences in words are "just semantical" and so we fail to understand the important distinctions between words that we use interchangeably. But if we use the wrong word, it is hard to think properly.

For a few days last November, the newspapers were filled with the story of "the Marshall University air tragedy" that killed 75 persons returning from a football game to Huntington, W. Va.

If I said it was not a "tragedy" but a "catastrophe," you would retort that I am just quibbling about words, or that I am being shallow and unfeeling. I think I can show that you would be wrong on both counts.

An airplane crash is a catastrophe (literally, from the Greek, an "overturning"), like a sudden flood, a fire, a falling girder. Such accidents are a part of the natural order and of the human condition; they result from the contingency of things, and are sad or shocking or pitiful — but they are not tragic.

There was, however, a tragic element in the Marshall university air crash; and we can recognize it only if we comprehend the difference between the two words. The tragedy lay in the community's frantic effort to have a winning football team, coupled with its indifference to an unsafe airport.

The school's, and the city's, hunger for football fame, prompted the formation of a booster organization, the Big Green Club, made up of wealthy local and business professional men, who collected funds to help pay for the college's athletic program.

Two years ago, the athletic department's budget began to bloom, a new coach was hired, players were recruited from other states, and the college's president resigned under pressure from the sports buffs. Vigorous lobbying attempts were made in the state legislature to obtain $1 million for the building of an athletic field and facilities.

Meanwhile, the president of the Tri-State Airport Board, confessed the day after the crash: "I've been sleeping with this pssibility for the last eight years." He blamed a lack of funds for the airport failure to have either radar or a warning light system—which would cost about $1 million exactly the price of the proposed athletic field.

In the classic Greek conception of tragedy, hubris, or false pride, is followed by hamartia, or sin, and this in turn is followed by nemesis, the fate that catches up with human pride and folly. When having a victorious football team means more to the citizens than having a safe airport, then community hubris is riding for a terrible fall. The players paid with their lives for this sin, but only if we understand the true nature of their "tragedy" will they not have died in vain.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 5

Your birthday today: Your enterprises now have to be diversified — you get more things to do, more power and, if you demand it, more income. What happens this year is like a bridge to the future; it's thus an excellent time for all sorts of preparations, study of new disciplines. Emotional developments come clear and strong. Today's natives are usually very astute at all types of reckoning, accounting, economics.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Let others do the talking — they probably want to have things go your way. Changes of existing contracts come easier now — ask for what you really need.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You will like much of what comes to pass today. Old hopes are encouraged. Your group finds a streak of luck going. Entertainment fits tonight's mood.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): An old friend's advice turns out to be right. Ask a good price for anything you sell or accomplish. Recent contacts stimulate sparkling ideas. Get busy while it's all fresh.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Begin early, get the attention of the most important people and make known your ideas of what should be done next. Take a change of pace tonight, find a lively party.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You share a generous mood with nearly everybody. Arrange working capital, increase your savings, ask for a raise where feasible. Friends offer encouragement — be gracious, and thank them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Review your financial situation, earnings, savings, budgets, make changes, request improvements. Gather friends and loved ones for a social event.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your partner has better luck asking for things than you do today. People are surprisingly helpful, and you wonder why you didn't ask before — it's just that now is the time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Reach out, do something beyond your normal routine. You may be able to set up a good deal for yourself. Lump-sum payments are better than promises of installments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Get discussion going on how to improve your earnings. Moderately speculative ventures show great promise. Compare notes with friends, perhaps find something to get into.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Pay your own way. A passing triumph in the life of somebody near you is to be celebrated. There are unusually good bargains in items you've been seeking, but check the sources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): This is career promotion day. Present your work, ask for improvements. The stimulus of being in strange places would help. The evening is for social fun.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Arise full of good humor and enthusiasm. Ask an intelligent question, get a dependable answer. Confirm your beliefs with actions. Your skills at selling are near their peak — use them.

Glasgow Soccer Tragedy Results in 66 Dead

LONDON (CP) — Part of a massive Scottish soccer crowd crashed through a barrier at the end of a sensational Rangers-Celtic game at Ibrox Park Glasgow, Saturday, and 66 died in the resulting pileup.

Dozens more were injured in the tragedy after 80,000 fans had seen the traditional Scottish First-Division rivals exchange scores in the final 90 seconds and finish in a 1-1 tie. It was the worst-ever accident at a British soccer match.

The game had appeared to be headed for a scoreless tie until Jimmy Johnstone put Celtic ahead with 90 seconds to go. Celtic supporters, largely Roman Catholic, thought their team finally had beaten the hoodoo of not having won a New Year's game at Ibrox Park in 50 years.

But Rangers, whose followers are largely Protestant, hit back almost immediately, Colin Stein scoring the equalizer.

Then utter tragedy struck as the huge crowd sought to leave, with bodies piling on top of each other with the collapse of a barrier to the street.

The weather played a heavy hand in Saturday's British soccer schedule, with 17 games postponed, including 10 in English Cup third-round play.

In the Scottish First Division, where four games were wiped out by snow and icy grounds, Aberdeen moved into a four-point lead over Celtic by beating St. Johnstone 1-0. It was Aberdeen's 14th consecutive victory.

Rangers are tied for third with St. Johnstone, 12 points behind Aberdeen.

Down near the bottom of the division, Kilmarnock and Ayr played a 1-1 draw in a match marred by crowd trouble. Two fans were carried away by police.

Chelsea, the English Football cup defender, received a fright from Crystal Palace before finally achieving a 2-2 tie before a London crowd of 42,000. Tommy Baldwin scored the tying goal late in the game. The London rivals will replay the game next Wednesday.

Upsets were scare in other third-round cup play. But York City of Division IV trimmed Bolton of the second division 2-0 and Scunthorpe United, also in Division IV, forced a scoreless draw on the grounds of West Bromwich Albion of Division I.

Swansea City, 6-1 winner over non-league Rhyl, and Wolverhampton Wanderers, 5-1 conquerors of Norwich City, were the top scorers.

Manchester United, back under the management of Sir Matt Busby after the midweek dismissal of Wilf McGuiness, showed no obvious improvement in a scoreless tie with second division Middlesbrough. Middlesbrough will be favored to win the replay next Tuesday and gain revenge for a sixth-round defeat by United last season.

Jimmy Husband, back in action after missing 11 games through injury, scored both goals as league-champion Everton won 2-0 over Blackburn, six times cup winner but now languishing at the bottom of the second division.

Blackpool's Tony Green, only recently returned to first-team duty after a year's absence, sored twice in a 4-0 thrashing of West Ham.

Wolverhampton, one of the favorites to win the trophy, produced a four-goal second-half blitz, with Jimmy McCalliog and Bobby Gould each scoring twice, to beat Norwich 5-11

First-division Nottingham Forest was held to a 1-1 draw by second-division Luton Town. The match was held up for 14 minutes during the first half when Forest fullback John Winfield ran into the netting and brought the goal crashing down.

Tottenham Hotspur moved smoothly to a 4-1 triumph over Sheffield Wednesday, but Manchester City needed a late goal from Colin Bell to beat non-league Wigan Athletic 1-0.

Best comeback of the day was by third-division Torquay, which reovered from three goals down to beat fourth-division Lincoln City 4-3.

Second-division Millwall looked set for an upset victory over first-division Stoke City when Derek Possee netted after only 30 seconds. But stoke won 2-1 on goals by John Ritchie and Jimmy Greenhoff.

Saturday's cup round, which brought the first- and second-division teams into competition for the first time, left only two non-league survivors. Barnett and Yeovil were among the teams whose games were portioned and they must await mid-week settlements of their bids for glory.

Junior A Trio Knotted Near Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Three teams completed the weekend in a solid knot near the the top of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings.

Ottawa 67s, St. Catharines Black Hawks and Montreal Junior Canadiens are locked in second place with 43 points each. They are six points behind first-place Peterborough Petes but each has played three games fewer than the Petes.

Montreal beat Ottawa 8-5 Sunday and tied London Knights 2-2 Saturday for a three-point gain. St. Catharines walloped Hamilton Red Wings 13-2 Sunday.

The wings also took a drubbing Saturday when Peterborough Petes shut them out 6-0.

In other games Sunday, Toronto Marlboros whipped Niagara Falls Flyers 12-7 and Oshawa Generals slid by Kitchener Rangers 5-3.

The action left Toronto in fifth-place, with 32 points, London sixth, Kitchener seventh, Hamilton and Oshawa tied for eighth and Niagara Falls in the cellar.

Play resumes Tuesday with four games scheduled. St. Catharines at London, Toronto at Ottawa, Kitchener at Niagara Falls and Montreal at Hamilton.

The Montreal win over Ottawa snapped the 67s' 14-game winning streak and was the club's first on-the-road loss since Oct. 9.

Richard Martinand Camille Lapierre each scored twice for the Junior Habs, and singles went to Ian Turnbull, Hartland Monahan, Jocelyn Guevremont and Scott Garland.

Single goals went to Ottawa's Denis Potvin, Ron Bobbette, Blake Dunlop, Wayne Merrick and Peter Gaw.

In London, Saturday, Montreal had a 2-1 edge on goals by Turnbull and Jean Tetreault, when the Knights' John Raynak tied the game with four minutes left in the third period. Terry West got the other London goal.

The Hamilton losses were both under coach Steve Durbano, who was to be replaced today by former National Hockey League star Billy Harris.

St. Catharines blitzed the Red Wings with 53 shots Sunday and held an 11-1 lead before Hamilton's Stan Friesen counted his, and the team's, second goal.

Centre Bob MacMillan fired four goals for St. Catharines, Jerry Andreatta got three, Brian McKenzie two, Max Hansen, Clyde Simon, Bob Peppler and Pierre Guite one apiece.

At Peterborough, Saturday, the Petes' backup goalie, Paul Elford, shut the Wings out while Paul Harris scored two goals and teammates Ken Richardson, Danny Gioor, Jim Mahon and Doug Gibson collected one each.

Oshawa's late-season attempt to climb up the standings was helped by sparkplug Gary Mahon, a left-winger converted to centre, who put two shots into the Kitchener net. Tom Simpson, Jerry Methe and Larry Thompson completed the Generals' scoring.

Plenty of Senior Action, No Changes in Status Quo

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Despite the fact that all eight teams were in action there were no changes in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A standings over the weekend.

First-place Galt Hornets continued to dominate and emphasised the point with a crushing 18-1 defeat over last-place Woodstock Athletics Saturday while in the night's other game Owen Sound Crescents, lying in seventh position, defeated sixth-place Oakville Oaks 7-4.

Sunday's action was less spectacular and produced no surprises.

Second-place Orillia Terriers defeated third-place Barrie Flyers 4-2, fifth-place Belleville Mo-Hawks continued their mastery over Kingston Aces, in fourth place, with a 4-1 win and Oakville reversed the tables to trounce the Crescents 9-1.

Playing at home the Terriers were set on the road to victory by Doug Kelcher who made three brilliant saves from his defensive position while goal tender Garry McNamara was caught out of the net.

Goal scorers for the Terriers were Kelcher, Connie Mandella, Dave Nicholishen and Claire Alexander.

Ken Thomson and John McMillan replied for the Elyers.

Sunday's away win for the Mo-Hawks was their fifth in six meetings with the Aces

Ray Johnston, Bill Armour, Greg Marchen, and Ralph Plane scored for Belleville while Charlie Convery had the Aces lone goal.

Oakville's home victory avenged the 7-4 defeat they received Saturday at the hands of the Crescents.

Duncan (Beaver) MacDonald led the Oaks with two goals while Ken Knapton, Frank Hincks and Bobby Taylor added the rest.

Dale Watson got the only Owen Sound goal.

On Saturday it was a different story. The Crescent, playing at home, led 6-2 at the end of the second period.

Garry Vaughan, Mayo Pacquette and Dave McComb, the new playing coach, each scored two goals for Owen Sound, while the others went to Mike Caim.

For Oakville, Duncan Beaver MacDonald, Chuck Kelly and Cal Russell each scored twice, while the other goal-getters were Ken Knapton, Frank Hincks and Bobby Taylor.

At Galt on Saturday right winger Bruce Reier scored five goals to run his season's count to 25.

Ron Smith and Fern Belanger collected three goals apiece and Ron Hergott added a pair. John Beechey, Pete Bettiol, Bill Haway, Dave Cressman and Vance Miller added the others.

Marc Pezzin broke up Bob Hurley's shutout bid on a second period breakaway for Woodstock's only goal.

Suns Burn Warriors

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clem Haskins scored 32 points Sunday to lead Phoenix Suns to a 102-81 triumph over San Francisco Warriors in National Basketball Association action.

In the only other game, Boston Celtics dumped Atlanta Hawks 140-128.

Don Chaney had 31 points and 11 assists, personal highs since he began playing as a professional, to lead Boston. Pete Maravich and Lou Hudson each scored 22 for Atlanta.

In Saturday's action, Boston beat Philadelphia '76ers 125-120, Atlanta nipped New York Knickerbockers 112-108, Baltimore Bullets defeated Detroit Pistons 108-99, Milwaukee Bucks dumped Cleveland Cavaliers 118-73. Cincinnati Royals beat Buffalo Braves 115-103, Chicago Bulls wallope Portland Trailblazers 136-113, Phoenix slipped by San Francisco 122-116 and San Diego Rockets nipped Los Angeles Lakers 109-108 in overtime.

S. Africa Unlikely To Stay

LONDON (Reuter) — South Africa, barred from last year's Davis Cup tennis competition, will be included in the draw for the European zone of this year's tournament.

Its entry was confirmed today by Basil Reay, British secretary of the Davis Cup nations.

"Having entered again, South Africa will be included in the draw," Reay said.

He refused to comment on the prospects of South Africa's being allowed to stay in the competition this year. But it was felt in tennis circles that their participation is unlikely, since some European countries will again refuse to play against them; thus disrupting the competition.

A decision on whether South Africa will be permitted to play in the event this year is unlikely to be made before the draw is made in London Jan. 15.

Four to Be Charged As Laporte's Killers

End of Curbs Up to Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — Any request from the Quebec government for repeal of the stringent laws invoked against terrorism in the province will be studied favorably by the federal cabinet, Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday.

But any request for repeal would have to come first from the provincial government, as the principal interested party, he told a news conference after meeting eight influential Quebecers seeking repeal of the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970.

The act replaced regulations under the War Measures Act which were invoked Oct. 16 in the wake of two political kidnappings in Quebec.

Mr. Trudeau described his discussion with the Committee of Eight as very fruitful and sociologist Guy Rocher, head of the committee, said the two-hour talks were "very frank."

On the eve of his departure today on a trip to Asia, the prime minister again defended the invoking of the laws which give police power to arrest without warrant and to hold suspects without bail.

"If we had remained inactive, if we had refused to invoke the War Measures Act and if there had been a death during the course of an uprising, at that moment we would have been blamed," he told reporters.

Besides Prof. Rocher, the committee includes Claude Ryan, editor of Le Devoir, Raymond Laliberte, former president of the 70,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation, Vincent Harvey, editor of the magazine Maintenant, labor leader Jean Gerin-Lajoie, Professor Fermand Dumont of Laval University, Professor Charles Taylor of McGill University and economist Pierre Harvey.

Only Few Of Soldiers On Guard

OTTAWA (CP) — Only a few of the troops called out in Ottawa at the height of the Quebec kidnap emergency two months ago are still on guard duty here, informed sources said Monday.

The remainder have returned to base, mainly at Camp Petawawa, about 100 miles northwest of the capital. The motorized equipment which arrived with the troops also has been withdrawn.

Officials refused to disclose just how many troops remain on special emergency duty.

Their job is to protect VIPs though just what categories could not be ascertained. At one time combat-ready troops were guarding cabinet ministers, diplomats and high public servants.

Troops were called out in Ottawa the night of Oct. 12—a week after the terrorist abduction of British trade envoy James Cross in Montreal and two days after the abduction of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

Mr. Laporte was murdered after a week in captivity. Mr. Cross was released by his captors early last month.

Florida Flu Takes 18 Lives

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A flu outbreak which brought 13,000 cases and 18 deaths in one week has forced health officials to declare an epidemic in this resort city, rapidly filling up with vacationing elderly, the most susceptible to the disease.

Most of the victims "were way up in years where it doesn't take much to tip the balance," Dr. Paul Hughes, Broward County Health Director, said Monday.

Special Guard Planned For Foreign Officials

OTTAWA (CP) — A special security force may soon be created to relieve police forces of the job of protecting foreign officials, embassies and consulates, a government source said Monday.

The source said the proposal has been discussed within the government as a response to security issues raised by the October kidnapping in Montreal of British trade commissioner James Cross and the kidnap-murder of the late Quebec labor minister, Pierre Laporte.

The special force, perhaps 1,000 strong, would be operated as a branch of the RCMP, the source said. It would not be assigned to protect Canadian political figures and would have no responsibilities for criminal investigation.

Hearings On Bail Scheduled

MONTREAL (CP) — Bail applications for lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon, all three detained under terms of the War Measures Act, are scheduled to be heard today.

All three were arrested shortly after the act was invoked Oct. 16, and were charged with taking part in a seditious conspiracy between Jan. 1 1968 and Oct. 16, 1970. They are also charged with being members of an illegal organization, the Front de Liberation du Quebec, or having declared themselves members.

Scheduled to be heard Monday, only Lemieux's application was heard by Superior Court Judge Roger Ouimet. However, Crown prosecutor Gabriel Lapointe was unable to present some texts and it was adjourned until today.

Defence lawyer Michel Proulx asked the Crown prosecutor to say why he thought Lemieux would not show up for his trial if he is given bail.

Mr. Lapointe replied that the actions of Lemieux between the beginning of October and the time of his arrest, notably the numerous news conferences he gave during this period, were part of the reason why bail was being refused.

However, when asked to produce the text of these news conference and say why he thought Lemieux would not show up at his trial, Mr. Lapointe said he did not have them and asked for an adjournment.

Lawyer Lemieux negotiated for the FLQ with the government for release of the kidnap victims during the October crisis.

Crown Makes Announcement

MONTREAL (CP) — Murder charges are to be laid today against four young men found criminally responsible Monday for the kidnap-killing of Pierre Laporte.

Jacques Ducros, special Crown prosecutor in the case, made the announcement after a coroner's inquest found the four responsible for the death of the Quebec labor minister, abducted by terrorists Oct. 10 and strangled a week later.

Named in the coroner's verdict were Paul Rose, 27, a former teacher; his brother Jacques Rose and Francis Simard, both 23 and unemployed laborers, and Bernard Lortie, 19, a student.

In Quebec, no charges are laid in cases of violent death until criminal responsibility has been determined by a coroner's inquest. Mr. Ducros told reporters the arraignments on murder charges would take place this afternoon.

He said the four would likely be arraigned by preferred indictments once a judge has been appointed for the case.

Under a preferred indictment, granted at the request of the provincial attorney-general, defendants can be sent directly to trial following arraignment without the usual preliminary hearing.

Mr. Ducros said the trial might take place during the winter assizes of the Court of Queen's Bench which begin Thursday.

"I can't give an exact date but we're ready for the trial tomorrow."

None of the four was present when the terse verdict was handed down by Judge Jacques Trahan, who acted as coroner.

The verdict was reached after the reading of a statement, attributed by police witnesses to Simard, which said Mr. Laporte was strangled by the Rose brothers and Simard.

Cpl. Jacques Gaboury and Constable Marcel Vigneault of the provincial police testified that Simard made the statement in their presence Dec. 28, hours after he was arrested with the Rose brothers in a tunnel hideout under a farmhouse near St. Luc, 20 miles southeast of Montreal.

Simard made the statement voluntarily, they said, after being warned that it would be written down and might be used in court. He later read the completed six-page statement, but refused to sign it.

It stated among other things that "all three of us—Paul Rose, Jacques Rose and —— strangled Laporte with the chain he was wearing" and that "we knew what we were doing."

"We were all equally responsible."

The statement was read into the record after the three recently-captured suspects refused to testify at the inquest, shouting slogans in support of Quebec separatism and the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Lortie, the fourth suspect, did not appear Monday.

He was picked up Nov. 6 in a police raid on a west-end Montreal apartment and testified the following day, at the opening session of the inquest, that he and the other three kinapped Mr. Laporte and took him to the bungalow in St. Hubert south of Montreai where he was held for a week.

MP Thinks Terrorism To Spread

OSHAWA (CP) — Bombings and terrorism that have occurred in Quebec will spread across Canada, a Liberal MP predicted Monday.

Norman Cafik, member of Parliament for Ontario riding, said the political violence in other provinces may not be of the "FLQ variety" but will be symptomatic of the growing strength of anarchistic groups across the country.

The federal government "reacted properly," he said, to the kidnappings of James Cross and Pierre Laporte, who was later murdered.

"We set a much-needed example to the world on how to deal with blackmail of the state," he told a Rotary Club luncheon.

EGYPT'S PRESIDENT ANWAR SADAT, second from right, waves Monday as he and Vice President Hussein El Shafei, right, proceed toward mass rally in the Nile Delta town of Tanta. During his speech before a wildly cheering crowd, Sadat predicted that Egypt would fight an all-out war against Israel. Negotiations Resume In Pall of Gloom

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Despite gloomy forecasts by many diplomats, UN special envoy Gunnar Jarring today resumes his efforts to bring the Arabs and the Israelis to a peace agreement.

Israel Ambassador Yosef Tekoah was scheduled to meet with Jarring, ending the Israeli boycott which last September stopped the indirect negotiations with Egypt and Jordan before they really got started.

Tekoah arrived in New York Monday with new instructions from the Israeli government.

Egyptian Ambassador Mohammed H. El-Zayyat also returned to New York after consultations with his government. He was expected to see Jarring today or Wednesday.

U N Secretary-General U Thant is expected today to make his most extensive report on the accomplishments of Jarring since the Swedish diplomat began his mission.

Some of the pessimism among diplomatic observers was due to recent hard-line speeches made by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Sadat told a frenzied crowd Monday at Tanta, in the Nile Delta: "There will be no compromise and we will not give up one iota of our land. We will fight. We will fight."

He predicted all-out war with Israel and warned that fighting "will not be restricted to the front line. . . . It will extend to our farms, our factories, in the towns, cities and streets. . . .

"They believe we are eager for peace at any expense. They are wrong. We will not forfeit our right. We will not abandon the struggle to reclaim the usurped rights of Palestinians."

Sadat acknowledged that Soviet soldiers had been brought in to man Egyptian missile sites and said six of them were killed in an Israeli raid on Dahsur, 20 miles south of Cairo.

The Egyptian leader did not give the date of the incident, but an Israeli raid on a missile station at Dahsur was announced last Feb. 17 by a Cairo military spokesman.

Heath to Risk Commonwealth Dissolution

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Heath is prepared to risk collapse of the Commonwealth rather than retreat from his intention to sell arms to South Africa, a high-placed Whitehall source said today.

He said that Heath and his ministers will not make a final move until the prime minister returns from the Jan. 14-22 Singapore conference of Commonwealth leaders.

But though Heath has held prolonged and intensified consultations with Commonwealth leaders individually he has found that no acceptable alternative proposal has been offered which would allow him to ditch the intention of selling arms to South Africa.

Malaysia Flood Toll Heavy

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuter) — Western Malaysia lay under several feet of water today as week-long monsoon rains paralysed the country and left 77,009 persons homeless. The government proclaimed a state of emergency in the area, where the official death toll was put at 29.

Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak ordered that an emergency control centre be set up in the hilltop Parliament House under the minister with special duties, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie.

Razak also met police and armed service chiefs to discuss measures to combat the flooding. In addition, he ordered the establishment of food centres to feed evacuees and appealed to all Malaysians to remain calm and conserve food stocks.

Kuala Lumpur was bathed in brown mud today as the water levels continued to rise and rain went on falling.

Richard Nixon

Prosperity and Peace By 1972 Nixon's Aim

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon, admitting to disappointments during his first two years in office, says "I hope I do better" and achieve both prosperity and peace by 1972.

His greatest accomplishment to date, Nixon told a television audience Monday night, has been the gradual withdrawal of American troops from South Vietnam.

In an hour-long live interview with four broadcast journalists, Nixon also viewed many of his difficulties as resulting from events that occurred before he took office.

"Before we can really get the lift of a driving dream," he said, "we have to get rid of some of the nightmares we inherited. One of the nightmares is a war without end. We are ending that war."

On the international front, Nixon called the Middle East potentially the most dangerous area in the world today and said the Soviet Union will have to co-operate if peace is to be achieved.

He acknowledged that the U.S. and Russia are far apart on the Middle East, but he said he sees a ray of hope that the Soviets will play a peacekeeping role now that Israel has agreed to return to peace talks under UN envoy Gunnar Jarring.

He said the Arabs and Israelis must adopt a live-and-let-live attitude toward each other. He also said the Big Four powers must guarantee the terms of a settlement.

Nixon predicted improved relations with Russia and said that agreement in the strategic arms limitation talks would be reached. But he rejected the idea of a summit meeting with Russia at this time.

In discussing disappointments of the last two years, Nixon placed high on his list the fatal shootings last spring of students at Kent State University and Jackson State College, and the summertime bombing of a University of Wisconsin building in which one person died.

Sitting in a chair before the fireplace in the White House library, Nixon fielded more than two dozen questions from the four broadcasters—Howard K. Smith of ABC, Eric Sevareid of CBS, John Chancellor of NBC and Nancy Dickerson of Public Broadcasting Service, the educational TV network.

The interview produced no hard news.

Council Won't Replace Belleville's City Hall

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A suggestion by consulting engineers that Belleville should consider a new city hall within the next five to 10 years, is not likely to be taken seriously by city council.

But council members will go along with the engineering report that the city hall is in need of increased maintenance and provisions for the needed work will be included in this year's city budget.

The firm of Totten, Sims and Hubicki, was retained by council to appraise the present condition of the nearly 100 - year - old city hall, to estimate floor loading capacity and provide comments and recommendations.

One of the comments was that the old city hall could not be completely improved to meet present day building code or fire code requirements. Since the building is somewhat functionally obsolete it might be prudent to program replacement in the next five to 10 years.

But Mayor J. Russell Scott said replacement cost of the city hall, built in 1872, would be at least three quarters of a million dollars.

"I can't see a new city hall," he said.

Debenture costs of a new building would be considerable and spending of only a fraction of the carrying costs would rehabilitate the old structure to last for another 50 years.

The mayor admitted that in the past the city hadn't nearly spent the four per cent of the building's value which is recommended for normal maintenance.

The report of consulting engineers on the condition of the city hall noted that structural timbers in the first floor and roof trusses were relatively dry with cracks and splits occurring in most members.

Wood columns in the basement have been installed without proper connections to piers, and cracks appear in the piers, thereby reducing the effectiveness of the columns.

Floors were said generally uneven and the main stairs and floor assembly between the basement and first floor do not meet fire separation requirements.

The report said that 60 per cent of the structural system does not meet the live load requirements as stated in the building code.

As result it must be assumed that full design loads have not occurred or that the structural members are functioning under very little or no margin of safety.

Installation of steel beams and columns to strengthen the first floor system is recommended at an estimated cost of $13,000. Also, installation of a fire separation panel between the first floor assembly and basement as well as a tightening up of roof trusses and cracked structural members is recommended.

The report said it would mean a major expenditure to bring the entire city hall up to code requirements.

However, it was said the city hall structure would continue to function if certain requirements and precautions were taken.

Installation of additional plaster partitions should be prohibited and defective structural members should be replaced or re-inforced as soon as they become apparent. Also it was recommended that the number of people admitted to the council chamber should be limited to the approximately 40 seats now provided for the public.

In recent years the old city hall has been extensively renovated to provide office accommodation for a burgeoning city hall staff.

With the exception of the council chambers the entire second floor of the building has been converted to office space for various city departments.

At one time there was a large public auditorium on the second floor extending the full width of the building.

Not so many years ago the city farmer's market was conducted on the first floor of the building. This space also was taken over for office accommodation.

Most of the former market space is now taken up by the city clerk's office and the personnel and purchasing department, while the city treasurer's department more recently has been extended into that part of the building.

Interim Tax Is Unchanged

The 1971 interim tax rate to be paid by Belleville property owners will be the same as last year.

City council at its inaugural meeting yesterday approved an interim tax levy of 24 mills to be paid in two instalments — Feb. 26 and April 30.

Council also passed the customary early January borrowing bylaw authorizing the city to borrow up to $5,833,000 to meet current city expenditures until taxes are collected.

The interim tax rate is struck by council to provide for an early partial collection of taxes and thus reduce the amount of borrowed money required.

Later in the year — in April or May — the year's total tax levy is struck with the final billing payable in three instalments.

While this year's tax levy will not be struck for another three or four months, already preparations are underway to determine the annual budget.

And, what with salary increases and other increased costs, Mayor J. Russell Scott said the city will be lucky if it can hold to last year's tax rate.

Mayor Scott yesterday named aldermen Ben Corke, Arthur Keegan, Donald Soutter, and Paul Russell along with himself as a budget advisory committee to assist city manager J. R. Reynolds in early discussions on current and capital works budget requirements.

City Man Dies After Arrest

Medical officials at the Belleville General Hospital are waiting for the results of an autopsy on the body of a city man who died in hospital after being moved from a cell at the city police station this morning.

Coroner Dr. W. F. Bates said that cause of the death of George Miller, 47, of 71 John Street, who died at two a.m. after being rushed by ambulance to hospital, has not yet been established.

The coroner was unable to say whether the death would result in an inquest.

Mr. Miller was arrested at a city hotel at 9.30 p.m. He was charged with intoxication and taken to a cell, said Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

He was checked in his cell at midnight, when two sergeants were changing shifts, and again at 12.40 a.m. and at 1.15 a.m. On the last occasion a police sergeant became alarmed at Mr. Miller's appearance, said the chief. He then applied mouth-to-mouth rescusitation and an ambulance was called.

Efforts to revive the man failed and he was pronounced dead at hospital by Dr. Bates.

City Hall – Good for Many a Year

Flooded? Must Prove Negligence

City residents whose basements are flooded as result of blocked sanitary sewers must prove negligence by the city before they can collect damages.

This was indicated at city council yesterday following the complaint of a Highland Ave. resident who said that his basement was flooded to a depth of nearly two feet last November as result of a blocked sewer.

Public works employees cleared the sewer and said it had been blocked by paper towels.

Mr. Young said he had been advised by an insurance adjuster that the city's insurance did not cover the damage unless he could prove negligence on the part of the city.

"If the city has no legal responsibility, I suggest that it does have a moral one," Mr. Young said in his letter to council.

Council, however, was told by City Solicitor John C. Miller that the responsibility was solely that of the insurer to investigate, defend any damage action and to settle any claim.

"The city is obliged to assist the insurer, but must not take over the claim or settle it," the solicitor said.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the city received very few complaints regarding settlement of damage claims by its insurance company.

The discussion on the complaint of the Highland Ave. resident brought a query from Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith who asked if the adequacy of sewer systems was checked before developers were given a permit for apartment house construction.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said this was done as far as possible. If there was any question a check might be done to determine if the sewer was adequate for the increased load.

In support of the city engineer's statement, Mayor Scott said in one instance a builder had applied for a permit to build a new apartment building on Victoria Ave.

He said the builder was informed that it would be his responsibility to enlarge the sanitary sewer with result that the project was abandoned.

Salary Hike At City Hall

City hall department heads will get a seven per cent increase in basic salary this year as result of lengthy caucus discussion yesterday by city council.

The increase is part of a 13 per cent hike to be received by department heads over the next two years.

The salary hike for ungraded salary personnel is in addition to the normal salary increments which department heads receive under their schedule.

Caucus deliberations were later ratified in open council with approval of a motion by Alderman Arthur Keegan to accept the recommendation on salary increases proposed by city manager J. R. Reynolds.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the salary increases were in line with pay hikes being received by employees in other sectors of the economy.

He said the increases were necessary if the city was to retain its present qualified senior administration personnel.

"We have to compete (salary wise) with other municipalities," he said.

Prepare for Regional Trends Trenton Mayor Tells Inaugural

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON (Staff) — In his inaugural address here yesterday, Mayor Duncan McDonald gave cautious endorsement to regional approaches for Quinte area development.

"No longer can any city or town live within its boundaries . . . we must join hands with our neighbours in order to provide industrial, commercial and residential development that is so important to the economy of our town and area" he said.

The mayor referred to meetings in the area called by the Ontario Water Resources Commission concerning institution of the regional water board and area sewer program. He stressed that the water board (set up in early December) might be a definite factor in major industry locating in the area.

"It is essential that pollution of our waters be stopped" Mayor McDonald added, expressing the hope that the area sewer board would be instituted in the near future.

Despite the endorsement, the Mayor expressed the determination that Trenton prepare itself for the regional trend.

"Being continually reminded that regional government is not far away and the fact we have been dealing with area planning and area servicing for the past year, we must organize our administration so that we are assured we can efficiently cope with the problems that will accompany these developments" he said.

Approaching regionalism with caution was stressed in definite terms by both Councillor Paul Tripp and former Councillor Bob Patrick in municipal election speeches in December. Mr. Patrick said December 1 that "council must be alert that the town does not become a satellite to any other municipality" as the regional trend develops.

Mayor McDonald emphasized to his audience at the Community Gardens yesterday morning that the 1971-72 council has the essential competence that comes from years of public service.

"The form and responsibilities of local government are changing and the many years of municipal service represented on this platform this morning . . . should be assurance that the town's business will be in experienced hands" he said.

"It is equally important that our employees be well informed and familiar in every aspect so that we recover all possible benefits in the way of grants . . . provided for by the (provincial) government . . ." the mayor added.

He indicated that, while Trenton's participation in regional administration expands, development within the town must continue concurrently.

The mayor emphasized that the town corporation must "provide services to un-serviced areas as fast as possible" and that this should be done "from current funds in order to save on the high interest rate".

Efforts have already been made to complete large capital works projects here out of the town's operating expenditures rather than financing through debentures. Major sewer construction on Dundas East and Bay Street in September 1970 was paid for out of current funds and the mayor wants this fiscal approach to continue.

Two clear-cut aims were expressed by Mayor McDonald in his inaugural address—that services be expanded and new industry be sought.

He expressed the hope that the next two years would see "most of the unserviced areas serviced with storm and sanitary sewers and road reconstruction where possible". He contended that "this is absolutely necessary, if we are to encourage residents to improve their properties".

Additionally, Mayor McDonald called for "an all-out effort to get new industry now that industry locating here will again qualify for government assistance".

For two years Trenton was unofficially exempted from provincial government industrial equalization grants. However, this was restored last October.

Trenton Council Installed

TRENTON (Staff) — In an hour-long ceremony at the Community Gardens here yesterday, the mayor, councillors and Public Utilities commissioners that will administer the town for the next two years were officially installed

Clerk O. W. Larry told the audience of 70 Trentonians gathered for the event that they should respect their municipal government.

"You may not always agree with them but that is democracy" he said.

The clerk explained that the practice of installing new administrations in a public session was a Trenton tradition geared "to involve the people in their government".

Mayor Duncan McDonald, acclaimed to office, was sworn in by Mr. Larry for another two-year term.

New councillors Ted Parker, George Greer, Stan Ketcheson, Paul Tripp, George Brown and Pete Aziz were installed in office by the clerk along with public utilities commissioners D. James MacDonald and Charles Hilton.

Mayor Resumes Duties

Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald embarks on new two-year term of office yesterday. During official proceedings at the Community Gardens, town clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry administered oath to the mayor and placed chai nof office around his neck.

No Formalities at City Hall

With city council in the middle of a three - year term, yesterday's first meeting of the new year lacked all the customary formality of the usual inaugural session.

There was no swearing in of new aldermen and no official presentation of mayor's robes and chain of office.

Actually, with the approval of a long list of appointments to city boards and commissions, there was the semblance of an inaugural session, but strictly speaking it was "business as usual" and even the inaugural address of Mayor J. Russell Scott was saved to just before adjournment.

Despite a big workload, Mayor Scott said he had enjoyed the past year as council head.

"We all worked together for the benefit of the community," he said.

Mayor Scott said that in the past year city hall staff had been upgraded with the appointment of a new solicitor, a deputy clerk and new personnel and purchasing officer.

Looking into the future, Mayor Scott said he was confident of more industrial expansion to provide "more jobs at better pay."

Projects expected to go ahead this year included the new Sidney Street bridge over the CN double tracks as well as sewer work and road construction.

Bill Complaints

PICTON (Staff) — Ratepayers' complaints have prompted town council to forward a letter to the Belle Telephone Company of Canada registering local dissatisfaction with present arrangements for payment of accounts.

It requests an office here where telephone bills can be paid.

Pictonians' protests against the 15 - cent charge collected when telephone accounts are paid in banks here led to calls to councillor Harold McLoughlin. He commented last night that he has recently received "several such calls".

He spoke of the 15 - cent additional payment charge and noted that it is "a great deal to some people." Mr. McLoughlin suggested a motion calling for a local outlet where telephone accounts could be paid directly.

Change Will Face Council Picton's Mayor Predicts

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Mayor Margaret Ackerman opened last night with a prediction that "frustrations, criticisms and change" will confront town councillors this year.

Mayor Ackerman quickly added, however, that she feels confident council will function as a team which will "cope."

She told council that she took pleasure in addressing its members as mayor.

"My only regret is that the office was obtained by acclamation and not be the mandate of the electorate," she added.

Former mayor Harvey McFarland refused to stand for re-election last month after completing 20 years in office.

Mrs. Ackerman observed that the world is passing through a period of "unsettlement" and noted that council must endeavor to understand "this new era," study the changes taking place and use them to advantage.

The first woman mayor of Picton spoke of regional government and stressed the importance of preparations for change in preference to enforced change.

"I hope, through good liason at county council and knowledge and understanding of the problems that this county will have a strong, united voice at the higher levels of government," said Mrs. Ackerman.

Mayor Ackerman observed that two major decisions now face council. Lock up facilities must be available in Picton by the month of June through provisions by council and it must be decided who will bear the costs of transporting prisoners to the regional jail.

She indicated that she also considers the public utilities commission as an area of study in the months ahead.

Mayor Ackerman last night announced that she has submitted her resignation effective March 1, from Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital where she has worked as a head nurse for several years. "I plan to be an active mayor," she asserted. "I will always be a nurse; I won't always be your mayor, but while I am I will be a good one."

Mrs. Ackerman stressed the need for council to face problems and consider all possible solutions in order to be effective. She repeated her hope that Picton will become the hub of Prince Edward County with town residents united in the promotion of local interests and facilities.

The new mayor stated that she plans to attend "as many committee meetings as possible not to interfere but to keep well informed."

The Ontario Scene

Quinte MPP Dr. Richard Potter is off on his personal crusade aimed at rousing both electorate and party organization to the fundamental seriousness of the democratic process.

But how to achieve greater interest and greater participation, increased zeal and more momentum? Remember the meagre turnout in the recent municipal elections, and this despite blanket coverage by the media.

The trouble is that without some degree of urgency in our public affairs, the average voter in this province can muster little more than a yawn over the prospect of still further hustings.

We have this vast land, a federal government in Ottawa and ten provincial governments, and politics are always to the fore, an election here, another one there, and it often seems that no sooner is one election over than there is another one. Five years — often less — is not that long a time.

Dr. Potter's concern is understandable, from a party standpoint, in that the Conservatives must find a new leader to succeed retiring Premier Robarts. This comes at a time when the Liberals and New Democrats are making energetic and not unsuccessful efforts to make a dent in the long-term Conservative monopoly extending over nearly three decades.

The Quinte MPP wants not only the interest of the electorate but a serious approach to the choice of the next premier (Dr. Potter says he is not considering the leadership himself, nor is his tour linked with any potential candidate).

He wants serious assessment of the merits of each candidate's appeal at the convention, but here the party could lose some support if the whole thing is so devoid of traditional compensating tinsel that voters go elsewhere — or keep on yawning.

Politics requires some degree of accompanying hoopla — bands, pretty girls, banners and all the rest of it — if it is not to descend into an all-consuming apathy. We feel there is room for all, provided both politics and hoopla are out in the open, in a spirit of moderation, good taste and good clean fun.

Certainly, there is plenty ahead of any government in Ontario. The province has enjoyed good government, but that is not to say it could not be better, or that there are no matters of grave concern with which both people and government must concern themselves in the days ahead.

Pollution, overpopulation, expansion of industry, unemployment, these are some of the matters confronting us and if the government can keep a grip on them while still continuing to amuse us now and again (as with that engaging, or should we say enraging, advertising campaign — "Is there any place you would rather be?), there is no reason why we should not continue to remain in the van of progress in Canada.

A Hard Lesson

An Edmonton mother learned her lesson the hard way recently. She left her car running and her sleeping baby in the back seat while she went into a shopping centre to get her husband, an employee there. Right away she had committed two grave errors — leaving the engine running, and car and baby unattended. Thieves took the vehicle but abandoned it later and the baby was found safe and sound. The mother's action was careless in the extreme, although she probably did not think of it as such at the time. In any event, all is well that ends well, and the moral for the rest of us is obvious.

And What's He Doing with Our Money?

Trudeau as Superman, Modern Robin Hood and All That

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Established beyond all question is the fact that with his great Public Protector performance in stripping the separatist FLQ of whatever terrorist mystique it might have held for romantics and revolutionaries, Prime Minister Trudeau has become Superhero in the hearts of the vast majority of Canadians.

Far from established and still wide open to question is where this most unusual of Prime Ministers seems to be taking the very people — the big majority, the wage and salary earners, the producers of what the Government's giant federal bureaucracy calls the Gross National Product — who put so much stock in his seemingly near-magic mix of brains and guts.

The man is all grey matter and grit.

But what else is there.

There is no modesty, no faintest suspicion of humility, no hint of appreciation or gratitude for the massive — even overwhelming — support he has been given.

Indeed, there is every sign—loud and clear for all to hear and see — that as he himself would, and on ocasion has put it, he does not give a damn what his ever-growing huge army of supporters thinks about him or what he does.

As he has said, you can "like it or lump it."

And if you turn out later — say just before or during the 1972 election ampaign — not to like it, then, as he shrugs in seeming unconcern, "you will kick me out."..

So what is Superhero doing to the faithful — some of them approaching the worshipful — millions?

Still socking it to them.

In the name, of course, of the poor and the pensioners.

Not that both the poor and especially the pensioners do not need all the help they can get. For they do, needing, as a matter of dire fact, far more than they are likely to get.

So far they have not got much.

But that is not stopping the Prime Minister in his plans to sock it to just about everyone else.

It is all being done in his playing the part of a modern Robin Hood, taking from those who have and giving it to those who have not.

He has stopped short — at least for the time being — in what looked for a couple of years like an approach to a guaranteed annual income to "redistribute" as Finance Minister Benson likes to phrase it, the nation's cash flow.

The wage and salary earners, the producers of the Gross National Product and the providers of the federal tax revenues which make it all possible, were not quite well enough prepared psychologially, he probably suspected, for the heavier load of taxation it would have piled on their already over-burdened backs.

But in a score or more of ways, the Prime Minister and the "reform" group around him — Edgar Benson, Labor Minister Bryce Makasey, Welfare Minister John Munro, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford Regional Economic Development Minister Jean Marchand and Housing Minister Robert Andras — have made no secret of what they have in mind for "sharing the wealth."

For starters, more than a year ago, putting the onus squarely on what he clearly considered the greed of the wage and salary earners, the Prime Minister warned he was tightening the anti-inflation screws. Tight money, high interest; restricted cash flow: the Bank of Canada Squeeze, as the Capital knows it, was on.

Then when the Bank of Canada bore down harder than it initially could have realized, and the bounce went out of the economy, instead of cutting taxes which would have put quick money into the pockets of the fast-spending workers, he pumped priming funds into higher unemployment benefits.

Next comes the news that families over the $10,000 line are losing their baby bonuses to increase the allowances of those below the cutoff.

There seeming to be no end to the socking it process, out comes word that the income tax surcharge of three percent — which, on his honor, Ben Benson promised would be ended within the year — got an extension.

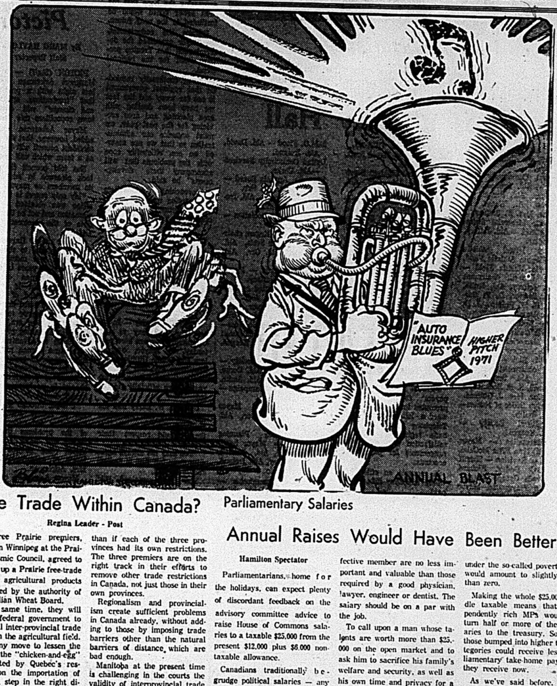
It went from the young of family allowances to the old of pensioners with the year-end tidings of a lid to be nailed at $80 on pensions.

Finally, if the wage and salary earner happens to make his buck in some of the more highly industrialized and prosperous parts of the country, he discovers there is some risk in living where enterprise is penalized for its very energy and drive even while it generates much of the wealth that keeps the less lucky regions operating, in lower gear perhaps, but, importantly, operating.

Rounding out the Robin Hood caper, the Prime Minister and Edgar Benson still have that White Paper on Taxation in reserve to really hit the GNP-producers where they live.

There have to be better ways of spreading prosperity than was practised back in Sherwood Forest.

Every taxpayer who worries about Robin Trudeau and his Merry Men is not necessarily the reincarnation of the Sheriff of Nottingham.



Free Trade Within Canada?

Regina Leader - Post

The three Prairie premiers, meeting in Winnipeg at the Prairie Economic Council, agreed to try to set up a Prairie free-trade area for agricultural products not covered by the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board.

At the same time, they will urge the federal government to remove all inter-provincial trade barriers in the agricultural field.

While any move to lessen the effects of the "chicken-and-egg" war, started by Quebec's restrictions on the importation of eggs, is a step in the right direction, the only solution to the problem is the removal of all interprovincial trade barriers.

Free trade of poultry and poultry products in the Prairies does not remove balkanization, but puts it on a slightly lower scale than if each of the three provinces had its own restrictions. The three premiers are on the right track in their efforts to remove other trade restrictions in Canada, not just those in their own provinces.

Regionalism and provincialism create sufficient problems in Canada already, without adding to those by imposing trade barriers other than the natural barriers of distance, which are bad enough.

Manitoba at the present time is challenging in the courts the validity of interprovincial trade barriers. Regardless of the outcome of this test, the three provinces should press Ottawa with urgency to ensure free trade within Canada. The present situation causes only harm to the goal of national unity.

Wants Work—But Must Support Wife, Family On Only $138 A Month

Editor,

The Intelligencer.

In reply to a letter which appeared in your paper on Dec. 24 1970 titled Pay Scale For Welfare Recipients, in the first place if anybody is working for less than the minimum $1.65 an hour it is his own fault; all he would have to do is invest in a six-cent stamp and write a letter to the Department of Labor and report the company which employs him.

Secondly, if people are on welfare, any extra money that they (the recipients) make is taken out of their "budget" for that month so they make no extra money other than what the welfare office gives them.

It is obvious that the writer of that letter was never out of work at anytime, or if he was, he was not out of work for six or seven months at a time with a wife and family to look after.

Lastly, there are quite a few welfare recipients who would jump at the chance to do some work or would welcome the offer of a steady job.

I would like to see the writer of that letter try to feed a wife and a daughter plus himself, plus pay hydro and gas, on $138 a month, which is what I have to do. Many welfare recipients, and this includes me and my wife, are ashamed to be on welfare, which is why I will ask you not to publish my name in the paper. Please just sign it:

Parliamentary Salaries

Annual Raises Would Have Been Better

Hamilton Spectator

Parliamentarians, home for the holidays, can expect plenty of discordant feedback on the advisory committee advice to raise House of Commons salaries to a taxable $25,000 from the present $12,000 plus $6,000 non-taxable allowance.

Canadians traditionally begrudge political salaries — any sum to any level; it's a national pastime. But before socking it to the refugees from Ottawa, constitutuents might reflect on a couple of points.

Parliamentary pays haven't been raised since the middle of 1963. If the $12,000-plus-$6,000 was fair pay then, it certainly isn't now.

Since that time one of the MPs basic costs — housing — has gone up at a faster pace than their other living costs. Most members maintain two homes — in their constituencies and in the capital.

The pay is for the job; not the man. If constituents feel their member isn't worth his keep (and some aren't worth half of it), that is their fault; not his. They didn't elect someone better.

Members of Parliament duties call for a full-time professional man; professional by any yardstick: Cabinet ministers and their parlaimentary secretaries must be executives as well as professionals. The skills and abilities needed by a useful, effective member are no less important and valuable than those required by a good physician, lawyer, engineer or dentist. The salary should be on a par with the job.

To call upon a man whose talents are worth more than $25,000 on the open market and to ask him to sacrifice his family's welfare and security, as well as his own time and privacy for a much lesser salary, is an insult to the man and to the Canadian public.

Bitter remarks comparing parliamentary pay with pensions, welfare payments and low-pay jobs aren't relevant or fair. Millions of Canadians need more money — not only to survive but to play a full and constructive role in the national economy — but cutting the MPs short isn't going to raise low incomes by a nickel. The increases, divided among all Canadians under the so-called poverty line, would amount to slightly more than zero.

Making the whole $25,000 bundle taxable means that independently rich MPs would return half or more of their salaries to the treasury. Some of those bumped into higher tax categories could receive less parliamentary take-home pay than they receive now.

As we've said before, Parliament should have had the courage and sense to provide itself with annual salary increases, based on the cost of living and in keeping with the national pattern established in industry, commerce, and civil service at all levels. One large lump after seven years, distorts the situation and, naturally, riles many taxpayers.

But, errors in execution and timing aside, the fact remains that in 1971, the pay scales of 1963 can no longer be held as fair or realistic.

The Dour Spirits of 1923

The Guide

When Miss Lottie Jones, teacher, arrived at an Ontario public school to teach, she was offered $75 by the Board of Education of the Middletown School District. In return for this princely sum, Miss Jones agreed to sign a contract demanding that she would:

Not get married;

Not ride in carriage or automobile with any man except her brothers or father;

Not leave town without permission;

Not smoke cigarettes or drink beer, wine or whiskey;

Not dye her hair or dress in bright colors;

Wear at least two petticoats;

Keep the schoolroom clean, scrubbing it with soap and water at least once a week;

Not use face powder, mascara or paint the lips;

Not wear dresses more than two inches above the ankle, and, finally,

Not loiter downtown in ice cream parlors.

If you've guessed that the contract was drawn up and signed in the 1800s you're wrong. The year was 1923.

Ottawa Is Still Worried About High Pay Effects

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal authorities remain concerned about the inflationary danger of pay raises that outstrip advances in productivity, despite a comforting new-year projection by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Economists of the Paris-based OECD, representing 22 industrial countries, said in a report last week that pressure for big pay increases may moderate in 1971.

The OECD report said wage increases in Canada during the 1960s typically lagged by about three years behind advances in output and profits.

That lag persisted after the swift productive growth of 1966, the OECD said. The recent apparent conflict between strong pay increases on one hand and slackening output and profits on the other may be explained by the wage-lag, the report added.

"The same kind of wage lag might be expected to prevent an early cost push in the case of an acceleration of real growth" in 1971.

An official of the finance department said federal economists do not dispute the basic OECD analysis that wages on one side and output and profits on the other rose and fell out of step in the 1960s

They say, however, that pay increases in recent years have pushed ahead of productivity advances and stimulated inflation. Any persistence of widespread pay increases of eight or nine per cent annually would be inflationary.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson warned in his budget speech Dec. 3, "If we do not achieve the restraint of prices and costs that we must have, we shall not shirk from action that may be required on that front."

The reference to costs means pay.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said in a New Year's Day statement that "there is continuing upward pressure from the cost side which has yet to be adequately contained."

The place of pay settlements in inflation is a point of political dispute and a matter for debate among economists.

In one sense, it is a chicken-and-egg argument.

The OECD year-end report suggests in effect that part of the difficulty of the last few years was that wages were chasing earlier increases in output and prices.

In another study of inflation by the OECD economic policy committee, the persistence of inflationary pressures in Canada, even as other economic activity slackened, is attributed to the chasing process.

During the boom of 1965 and 1966, that report says, "the share of wages and salaries dropped quite markedly below trend . . . and this may have some bearing on the persistence of the subsequent wage-price spiral."

Finance department calculations, using different figures and time periods, show a similar trend.

The finance department measures the rate of change in wages and salaries related to output and makes the same calculation for profits and other components of price inflation.

In the five years to the end of 1965, unit pay costs rose an average of two per cent a year while corporate profits rose at an annual rate of almost six per cent. Then in the four years from 1965 to 1969, unit pay costs rose at a rate of 5.8 per cent and profits moved up only marginally on average.

In 1968 alone, output per worker showed an above-average increase and unit pay costs advanced by four per cent, the same rate as prices. Profits rose that year by about 17 per cent. The following year output slowed down; unit wage costs accelerated to a rate of 6.3 per cent; profits per unit of output declined and prices rose by about five per cent.

Final figures are expected to show a similar pattern for 1970.

The Economic Council of Canada commented on the effects of various elements of the economy moving ahead at different speeds at different times in its October report.

That report observes that of course increases in incomes that outstrip advances in real output will cause higher prices.

"But the factors that produce demands for larger increases in money incomes . . . are not always fully recognized.

"One element in this complex matter is the attempt to 'catch up' with previous price increases or to offset anticipated price increases.

"In other words, inflation itself may tend to become a built-in factor tending to sustain, even to augment, further inflation."

Wholesale Index Lower

OTTAWA (CP) — The general wholesale price index moved down in November to 283.8 from 284.5 in October and was less than a point above its 283.0 level in November, 1969, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Monday.

The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, and reflects price changes in a wide range of industries and at various wholesale levels of trade. Changes in wholesale prices are not always reflected in retail prices, and tend to fluctuate more frequently.

Trudeau Leaves Today For Parley at Singapore

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau sets out on a 3½-week Asian trip today, centred on the Commonwealth heads-of-government conference at Singapore Jan. 14-22.

The hotly-disputed question of British arms sales to South Africa is expected to dominate the Singapore meeting, along with the stiff Rhodesia issue.

Mr. Trudeau has called the arms issue one of the greatest threats the multi-racial Commonwealth has faced.

Prime Minister Edward Heath, here earlier this month for private talks with Mr. Trudeau, indicated his government was leaning strongly towards lifting the arms embargo imposed by an earlier British government six years ago.

Some African leaders have indicated that an arms-for-South Africa policy by Britain would force them to leave the Commonwealth.

Mr Trudeau has talked of using the Singapore conference to find an accommodation on the thorny arms question that would preserve the integrity of the community of nations.

However, he and Canadian officials have been vague on what kind of accommodation might be possible.

Canadian sources have referred to the possibility of alternatives to the British plan for equipping South African maritime forces to help guard the vital Cape of Good Hope shipping route against Russia's naval buildup in the Indian Ocean.

Again, however, they have been vague on details. Any Canadian proposals apparently do not include the possibility of a Canadian military contribution to offset the void Britain says would be created if South Africa does not participate in the defence of the sea lanes.

An idea reported being considered at Commonwealth headquarters in London involves designation of Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Malaysia and Singapore to watch over Indian Ocean security.

While lacking the immediacy of the arms issue, the simmering Rhodesia question is regarded here as still potentially dangerous to the survival of the Commonwealth.

Rhodesia unilaterally declared its independence from Britain in 1965. Like South Africa, it has a predominantly black population ruled by a small minority of whites.

At the last Commonwealth prime ministers' conference, two years ago in London, it was unanimously agreed that the seizure of power by Rhodesia's white minority could never be recognized or tolerated.

Rhodesia has been a source of constant friction between Britain and black Africa leaders, many of whom feel Britain is not doing enough to bring down the rebel government of Premier Ian Smith.

U.S. Supreme Court Asked To Settle Pollution Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has been asked to settle a dispute between Vermont and New York state over a giant lump of paper-mill sludge that conservationists say is killing Lake Champlain.

Charging the heap of decaying wood chips and organic material — nearly half the bulk of the Great Pyramid of Egypt — creates a "gross public nuisance," Vermont wants the Supreme Court to force New York state and the International Paper Co. to clean up the 1.5 million cubic yard mess.

There was no indication when the court would rule on the case.

Vermont asked for permission to file a complaint directly with the Supreme Court under the constitution's provision giving the high court jurisdiction in interstate disputes.

Attorney-General James Jeffords of Vermont said he acted because New York state is not moving fast enough nor effectively enough to clean up the lake that forms the 100-mile border of the two states.

New York state has asked the U.S. environmental protection agency to delay action on sludge removal until more tests can be made on the ecological effects of such a project. An agency spokesman said no action has been taken on New York's request.

Spokesmen for International Paper's Ticonderoga, N.Y., processing facility at the southern end of the lake, said engineers feel it would be better to leave the sludge where it is rather than stir it up by dredging.

Company officials also noted a new mill near the old one will use water that will be returned to the lake virtually devoid of pollution.

In asking the Supreme Court order, Jeffords contended:

—New York state intentionally neglected the mess and refused to remove or confine it.

—Effluents harm health and safety, the sludge hurts business and property values, and fishing and recreation are damaged by the spread of material over 300 acres of the shallow lake bottom.

—There is "a continuing trespass and an unlawful alteration of the interstate boundary" because the sludge bed involves underwater land owned by Vermont.

—There is a stench carried on the winds, and some pieces of sludge float to the Vermon shore.

He charged actions by the company and New York state "are wilful, intentional and unreasonable and are in reckless and wanton disregard of the rights" of Vermont and its residents. Compensatory and punitive damages, he said, should be levied in amounts set by the high court.

GNP Expected To Be Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is confident that a resurgence of economic growth later this year will send Canada's gross national product for 1971 over the $90,000 million mark.

The GNP—the total value of all goods and services produced by the country—ran at an annual rate of $84.120 million in the third quarter of last year. It now has probably passed $85.000 million.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said in his Dec. 3 budget speech to the Commons that he expects the gross national product in the second half of 1971 to be running 8.5 per cent over the second half of 1970.

It is estimated that for the year 1971 as a whole, GNP should be up somewhat more than seven per cent from 1970. Final figures for 1970 won't be available officially for another two or three months, but it appears that they will work out to about $83.700 million.

By either measure, the GNP for 1971 will touch $90.000 million or go beyond it, perhaps to $92.000 million if Mr. Benson's projection proves correct. That would put Canada poised to produce $100,000 million in 1972.

These figures are estimates based on current spending power of the dollar and allow for some measure of price inflation to continue.

The authorities who now say that GNP for all of 1971 should grow by a little more than seven per cent estimate that at least half of this will be in what they call real terms—that is, a real increase in the volume of goods and services produced. The balance—3.5 per cent or a little less—will be a measure of the price inflation the government expects in 1971.

Price inflation measured in terms of the gross national product usually runs less than rising retail prices as measured by the consumer price index.

The latter index for December will be issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics next week. The rate of its climb has been easing off, and in November was only 2.3 per cent higher than a year earlier.

In its report on GNP for the third quarter of 1970, DBS said the price-rise factor had flattened out after a sharp increase in the second quarter. Altogether, at the end of September, the price rise in the GNP was only 2.1 per cent.

Western Canada Party Formed in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — The Western Canada Party, which announced its birth Monday, has been established because Western Canada has been "robbed blind" by Eastern Canada, Gerry Beck, provincial vice-president of the new party, said Monday night.

"Change must come before all of Canada is involved in bankruptcy," he said in a telephone interview.

Eastern Canada, he said, takes "our money and nothing is pumped back in."

He said the West has been used primarily as a supplier of resources and that secondary industry has been kept out.

The new party was formed because "many, many westerners" have decided that they must speak out against the inequities of the federal government in favoring the East at the expense of the West, he said.

Services Commence

Nearly two hundred people attended the first in the series of the Week of Prayer Services held Sunday night in the Holloway St. United Church where Rev. J. W. Lamb is the pastor.

The emphasis was on youth. Miss Willi Wyngaarden of Trenton, a nurse-in-training at Kingston General Hospital, sang with her guitar, three songs on prayer. A junior choir of the church also sang.

The speaker was Rev. Charles Staples of Stirling, former Director of youth programs for the Anglican Church of Canada. He referred to the changes in music today which older people in the churches may not appreciate, but which is gaining a wider acceptance.

The alienation and disenchantment of youth today is widespread. Mr. Staples mentioned the song, "Man, you were never my age," as representative of it. Technology is improving but the breakdown in all of life is increasing. Science is making many new discoveries but it doesn't tell us what to do with them.

The speaker pointed out that "our hope is in the reconciling Gospel. God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself. The church must be willing to be humbled. Our Saviour, Jesus Christ, humbled Himself, even unto death, for us."

The services continue as follows: Monday - in the Eastminster United Church with Rev. D. Murphy of St. Columba Presbyterian Church speaking. Tuesday - in the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church with Rev. E. Gritter of the Christian Reformed Church. Wednesday - in the Salvation Army Citadel with Rev. J. Bunner of Westminster United Church. Thursday - in Christ Church, Anglican, with Rev. L. Dean of Tabernacle United Church speaking.

'Have Any Length You Like' Is Advice of Fashion Director

OTTAWA (CP) — It isn't the length of an outfit that counts, it's the price.

And the price should be just a little bit more than you can afford to make you feel deliciously guilty, confident and fascinating to men, says Mme Ginette Spanier, director of the high fashion House of Balmain in Paris.

Speaking recently here, Mme Spanier, wearing a beautifully fitted green suit with a skirt just below the knee, said that during her two weeks in North America, she had been bombarded with questions about "this business of the midi."

She advised the 750 women at the meeting not to let anyone bully them in the matter of fashion. "Have any length you like.

"I think we want to fascinate men, but as they don't notice what we have on, I think it's silly to spend a lot of money to please them. I think we dress for ourselves.

"For a dress to do a great deal for you, it's got to be a little more expensive than you can afford and make you feel a little bit guilty."

A native of England who has lived for years in France, Mme Spanier said she personally finds it "jolly difficult" to draw an exact line between right and wrong.

"And if you're going to bring it to the hemline, I think that's madness. The attractive girls get away with whatever hemline they choose."

She did point out, however, that the dictates of classical high fashion had brought down hemlines to cover the knees six months before.

Mme Spanier started working for Pierre Balmain in 1947 when she went to help a relative select a dress from his collection and was picked out because she was bossy to the saleswoman.

Now she oversees a fashion house which each day shows a collection of 150 outfits except when the collections are being prepared twice a year—the summer one at the end of January and the winter one at the end of July.

"In our firm, 350 women are shut up in the basement. It is always overheated and this always leads to wild hysteria and a great deal of crying," she said matter-of-factly.

She said one has to be invited to see the collection "because of all this piracy business" where people sneak in to see the fashions and make sketches of them so that the clothes may be reproduced without the purchase of an original.

She also sees no lessening of individual buyers. "No woman has identical right and left sides. Woman's confidence is made of gossamer stuff, and as long as there are women rich enough to have both sides fitted, we'll be in business."

Sophia Loren, Marlene Dietrich, Ava Gardner and Carole Baker are a few of those who have sought out Balmain designs for both personal and film wear.

Another customer was sexy film star Brigitte Bardot. Although the pouty blonde "hates our kind of clothes," Mme Spanier said, she wanted something special for presentation to Queen Elizabeth.

But the actress, who likes a generous display of bosom, was upset when Mme Spanier insisted she cover up for royalty.

So a compromise was arranged and Miss Bardot, wearing a dress with a high neckline, demurely made her curtsy to the Queen. Once out of the reception, however, she ripped off a dickey which cleverly covered a low decolletage, and then met the photographers.

Students Design 'The Box' for Handicapped

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — "The Box," a simple but painstakingly-prepared collection of objects whose shapes and textures stimulate the senses, could increase the perceptual abilities of handicapped children.

Designed by students at Sheridan College in Oakville, The Box, of which a few score prototypes exist, may receive federal government support.

A plastics chemist in the department of trade and commerce, A. Y. Renaud, discussed the creation with Stephen Hogdin of Sheridan's school of design and has taken a unit to show his superiors in Ottawa.

The project was conceived in August, 1969, by Mary Francis Haws, editor of Dot, magazine of the Canadian Braille Association. Each Sheridan design student submitted two objects, one both visual and tactile in appeal, the other in a soft material designed to evoke a multitude of images.

By handling objects in different combinations and sequences, many different sensations are experienced. Rubbing them produces sounds.

Four other schools, in West Germany, the United States, Great Britain and France, contributed to the project.

Prototypes have been used in an Ontario Art Gallery travelling exhibit and tested by blind children. Everywhere they have had a successful reception.

Sheila Lamb, designer of the exhibit, and Mrs. Haws say they have received many letters—some in braille—from blind children expressing appreciation.

Various schools for the blind and foreign institutions have received The Box, but mass production awaits a willing manufacturer.

"There aren't enough boxes to go around and the need is great," said Mrs. Haws.

Mr. Hogdin estimated $100,000 is needed to develop the full potential of The Box before beginning mass production. He hoped a manufacturer could be found who would advance the $100,000 and produce the units.

Sighted children with perceptual handicaps receive another dimension of awareness from the box, since the objects together display a rainbow of colors.

A New Kindergarten Program

SASKATOON (CP) — Twenty five-year-olds are taking classes at the University of Saskatchewan this year.

They're attending a unique kindergarten that offers a wide variety of activities rarely found in ordinary kindergartens, said Millicent Marshall, director of the university's Institute of Child Guidance, which runs the new program.

Its aim is to help the child reach his full potential, both physical and mental, and at the same time to examine teaching methods to find the right atmosphere to stimulate learning in this age group.

The 20 were selected to represent an ethnic and occupational cross-section of the community, Prof. Marshall said.

The children get instruction in art, crafts, music, drama, language, literature, mathematics, social studies, swimming and gymnastics. In the classroom, the children are taught to analyse, compare and reason about their experiences; to classify and organize information and develop concepts; to satisfy their curiosity; to see relationships and social implications; to listen and to discriminate.

Research during the last decade has shown the importance of the quality and extent of a child's experiences in the early years, Prof. Marshall said. These contribute markedly to his later personality and intellectual development.

An activities room, complete with trampoline, is available and the children use the university's physical education centre gymnasium three mornings a week and the pool once a week.

This gives the child an opportunity to develop physical skills, satisfy his fundamental desire for movement and teach him to deal effectively with his environment, Prof. Marshall said.

In the spring term, a group of three- and four-year-olds also will be admitted to the centre. Those aged three will come two days a week and those aged four will come three days.

Two instructors assist Prof. Marshall in the teaching and university students from home economics, medicine, psychology, physical education, speech training and other faculties are allowed to observe.

Choosing A Mate Serious Business

By DORIS CLARK

How can we persuade people to go about the selection of their life partner in a more responsible fashion? Choosing a mate in a state of infatuation is like selecting one's profession when one is drunk.

We need to know more about ourselves and what a mature choice ought to be like. We need to give up the notion that marriage in itself will solve all that's wrong.

What's more, when two people fall in love they are likely to agree with everything the loved one says and to soft pedal their own ideas. So the other fellow thinks his every word is tops.

Then comes the rude — sometimes fatal — awakening. What we need is clear-headed young people who will keep the record straight from the beginning. A good time to start, when each has a lively interest in learning the ideas and general scheme of life of the other.

Dear Doris: There is a poem I used to know from grade school days which I would like to read again. My wife died, though still a young woman, and I keep remembering a few lines of this poem. I think it would be a help to me if I could read it.

It deals with an oak which grew for many years unnoticed in a dark forest. At the same time, there was a lily of great beauty which gave joy to all those who say it; then, too soon, it perished.

If anyone can locate this poem, it is you or one of your readers. — Bereft.

Dear Bereft: I am sorry. Death of a loved one is always devastating, but it is almost insupportable when the loved one has gone from us early in life.

I hope we will be able to find your poem for you; inspirational thoughts do help at a time like this. Readers, can you come up with it

Dear Doris: I have this problem. This guy and I broke off about five months ago. I have a crush on other guys today.

But when I think of him and this other girl he's going with. I get jealous. This is a problem because I become hurt. What does this mean — Hurt.

Dear Hurt: It is the dog-in-the-manger syndrome. You don't want him but you don't want anyone else to have him — not uncommon, but not very mature. Better learn to laugh at yourself about it.

Confidential to Penny Stretcher: With such an assortment of debts, incomes and size of family you have to feed, it is beyond me to say whether you could qualify for partial assistance, although it seems likely.

The expert at this kind of assessment is the officer at your regional welfare office. Do not let any self-conscious fear keep you from seeking guidance and help on behalf of those fine children of yours.

Girl Claims Blondes Do Have More Fun

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wish I could get my hands on that girl who said blonds do not have more fun and the public has been brainwashed into believing a lot of nonsense. She is wrong. Blonds do have more fun and I proved it. In the last four years I have been Ash blond, Patinum, Golden-Glow, Dutch-tulip yellow, Honey-Beige and Pineapple Pink. I've also been brunet, a redhead and just about every shade in between that you can think of. I have worn my hair long and loose to my shoulders and the Grecian boy cut (which is the next thing to bald). I've had it layered, curled, straightened, ringleted, stripped and feathered. I have also worn wigs of every conceivable color and style as part of my experiment.

I kept a diary-type record of what happened to me. My hair was the determining factor because it is unquestionably my most outstanding feature.

As a golden blond I had more whistles, phone calls and invitations than at any other time. As a redhead I got nothing but propositions. As a brunet I attracted some attention, but not much. As a brownette I was as good as dead. I am living proof that ads are right. Any comment? I see you are a brunet. — JOY GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: Since I've never been anything but a brunet I have no idea what my life would have been had I been a blond. I bow to your research and experience .

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My younger sister (age 22) is expecting her first child. She is in her third month and very happy about it.

When I asked her who her doctor is she told me she feels fine and sees no point in going to a doctor until she gets ready to deliver.

I know every pregnant woman should go to the doctor for periodic checkups, but I don't know why. When she said, "Why should I spend the money? I didn't have the answer. Please tell me so I can tell her. — UNINFORMED SIS.

DEAR UN: Pregnancy produces chemical changes in all women — even healthy ones. The major changes occur in hormonal composition, blood chemistry, blood pressure, and the kidneys. Every pregnant woman should be checked regularly. Today there are excellent medicatians which can help a pregnant woman stay well and produce a healthy child. The pregnant woman who does not get periodic medical checkups runs a serious risk — not only for herself, but for her unborn baby.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in the letter from the young fellow who liked a certain girl very much but he was scared to death that she might wind up looking exactly like her mother and he couldn't stand the old lady. He then referred to the Hungarian adage, "If you want to see what your sweetheart will look like in 30 years, take a good look at her mother."

That letter shook me up because I am going with a fellow who bears a remarkable resemblance to his father and I can't stand the old man. You advised the guy to buzz off. You said even though this girl might not end up looking like her mother, he'd be expecting her to at any moment. Does the same go for me? — SHOOK COOKIE.

DEAR COOK: Yes. Identification can be a spooky thing, and your imagination may lead to conclusions which have little or no basis in fact. I'm giving you the same advice I gave to the guy who wrote. If you can't stand your boyfriend's father and you see a remarkable resemblance — forget him, doll.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are probably fed up with letters from parents and teen-agers who want to know what you think of long (I mean long) hair on boys. I hope you will answer just one more. Please tell me if long hair on boys can give a person a headache. Thank you. — HIGH I.Q.

DEAR HIGH: Ordinarily not, but in some cases, yes — to the boy's father.

Honey Nut Muffins With Chicken Gumbo

By MARY MOORE

One of the members of our drama group at church who is 17-years-old has written a one-act comedy and we are all eager to produce it.

The director comes to my house for a quick supper before rehearsals begin and the muffins I am about to describe came out of the oven to be served with Chicken Gumbo (see tomorrow).

I predict these muffins will be popular on many a Canadian table this winter and we are making plenty of suplus copies.

HONEY NUT MUFFINS

(Sixteen 2½")

- 1 cup unsifted cake and pastry flour
- 1½ tsps. baking powder
- ½ tsp. baking soda
- ½ tsp. salt
- ¾ cup whole wheat flour (or 1 cup bran)
- 1-3 to ½ cup chopped walnuts
- ¾ cup sour milk or buttermilk (see below)
- 1 egg
- 3 tbsps. honey
- 3 tbsps. melted butter or margarine

NOTE: If you do not have sour or buttermilk measure 1 tbsp. vinegar into a measuring cup and fill cup to ¾ mark with milk before you proceed with making muffins.

Put sieve over large mixing bowl and into it measure flour, baking powder, soda and salt and sift into bowl. Add whole wheat flour (or bran) and nuts. Make well in centre and into it break egg and add sour milk, honey and butter. Stir just enough to mix. Do not overstir muffin batter.

Spoon into greased muffin pans filling two-thirds to ¾ full and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 12-15 min.

Lovely served with Chicken Gumbo, recipe for which I will give you tomorrow.

Honestly now, must we print all those items and prices every week?

"Sure we can fill pages with items such as Kleenex Economy Facial Tissues, Bick's Sweet Mixed Pickles etc. etc. etc.

Of course we stock these items . . . what self-respecting food store doesn't? And of course they're low in price, as all items are at Food City. The point is . . . today's food store offers over 6,000 different items, so advertising a few dozen or even a few hundred each week proves nothing.

Cigarette Smoking Doubles Death Rate for Middle Aged

LONDON (Reuter) — The influential Royal College of Physicians estimated today that 27,500 people between the ages of 35 and 64 die every year in Britain because they smoke cigarettes.

The college also found that 90 per cent of lung cancer deaths are a result of smoking.

In a report Smoking and Health Now, published today, the college said cigarette smokers are twice as likely to die in middle age as non-smokers and that two out of every five heavy smokers die before 65.

The chief causes, the report says, are lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and coronary heart disease. The college forecast 45,000-55,000 people will die from lung cancer each year in the 1980s if British smoking habits continue.

Cigarette smoking now is as big a killer as typhoid, cholera and tuberculosis were for earlier generations, the report said.

The college, founded in 1518, called on the governmentt to ban all cigarette advertising and gift coupon schemes and to print warning notices on cigarette packs as in the United States.

The report proposed the government make taxes lower on less harmful forms of smoking—cigars, pipes and low-nicotine content cigarettes.

Lord Rosenheim, president of the college, in presenting the report said an official inquiry should be made into the economic consequences of present smoking habits in Britain.

Rosenheim said the college will sponsor a new organization called A.S.H.—Action on Smoking and Health—to co-ordinate the activities of all groups engaged in health education.

The report said the equivalent of $12 million was spent on cigarette advertising in Britain in 1968 compared to $250,000 by the health education council on an anti-smoking campaign.

The children of pregnant women smokers, the report said, are born five or eight ounces lighter and the mothers are more likely to have miscarriages or premature births than are non-smokers.

The report urged all doctors and teachers to give up smoking and help teach children in particular about the dangers of smoking. All cigarette machines should be banned in public places.

The college asked employers and unions to bring in wider smoking restrictions at work and asked the government to cut down smoking facilities in places of entertainment and on public transport.

Eight Terrorize Area In South Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eight men posing as customers held up a South Philadelphia furniture store and terrorized employees and customers Monday, killing one man, wounding two others and attempting to set the store on fire.

Ten persons, most of them employees of the Dubrow Furniture Co., were injured from being kicked or pistol-whipped while lying on the floor, bound hand and foot.

Police and witnesses said the gang entered the store in pairs about 3 p.m. After talking with salespeople they drew hand guns and herded about 25 customers and employees into various parts of the large store.

After binding their captives, gang members emptied cash registers and took money from employees and customers. They sprayed gasoline from a five-gallon can on to furniture and around the bound captives and set it ablaze, but the fires caused no substantial damage.

"They seemed to know where everything was," said Frank Rizzo, police commissioner. "I've never seen anything like this in my 27 years in police work."

One employee was killed and another wounded in a freight elevator shortly before the gang members made their escape out a side door, moments before police arrived.

Alton G. Barker, 40, a maintenance man, and Dandis Burney, 52, a salesman were found in the elevator.

Barker died of a chest wound at hospital. His hands had been tied behind his back.

Four Will Be Charged with Murder

But Lortie said he left the bungalow the day before the labor minister was killed.

This was in line with the statement attributed to Simard, which said Lortie left the kidnap hideaway Oct. 16, shortly after Mr. Laporte gashed himself deeply in an attempt to escape by diving through a window.

That was the Friday the federal government invoked wartime style emergency measures to combat Quebec terrorism, resulting in the roundup of hundreds of suspected FLQ members and sympathizers.

"He was crying," the statement said of Mr. Laporte. "He wanted us to take him to hospital."

But the statement said the three decided to kill the labor minister, and indicated that they used the gold chain on which he carried a small religious medal around his neck.

The time of the slaying was not specified. A note signed by the FLQ, received on the night of the slaying, said the "minister of unemployment and assimilation" had been "executed" at 6:18 p.m Oct. 17, exactly a week after his abduction.

The statement read by Cpl. Gaboury began with an account of a trip to Texas by Simard, the Rose brothers and their mother.

On the trip, they heard a radio broadcast on the Oct. 5 kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross, released Dec. 3 after his terrorist abductors were surrounded by police and soldiers and decided to take advantage of a government offer of safe passage to Cuba in return for the envoy's life.

On hearing the news of the abduction, the travellers headed back to Montreal.

The statement quoted Simard as saying that they stopped along the way so he could buy "wooden pistol-grips to modify M-1 rifles."

After they returned to Montreal, Simard bought two regular M-1 rifles, shortened the barrels, removed the rifle butts and mounted the pistol grips.

Cpl. Gaboury then said two modified M-1s introduced earlier at the inquest had been identified by Simard as the weapons used in the Laporte kidnapping.

He said he showed the guns to Simard Dec. 28, and Simard "recognized the work he did to modify the rifles."

Capt. Raymond Bellemare of the provincial police testified later that he found two regular M-1 rifle butts hidden between the ceiling and the roof of the St. Hubert bungalow Dec. 30, after the Rose brothers and Simard were questioned.

Cpl. Gaboury outlined a street-by-street route from the Laporte home in suburban St. Lambert to the hideout in St. Hubert, over which he said he was guided by Simard.

Capt. Bellemare said he was taken over the identical seven-mile route earlier by Lortie.

Simard was the first of the three material witnesses to appear Monday, and set the pattern of conduct on entering the courtroom when he raised his fist and shouted: "Vive le FLQ. Vive le Quebec libre."

After refusing to testify, he turned on his heel and left the room with a similar salvo of slogans.

Next to appear was Jacques Rose who placed his hand on the Bible and said he would tell the truth but "as a prisoner of war."

He smiled when Mr. Ducros put the direct question: "Who killed Pierre Laporte"

"Ah, that," he said. "Yes, I refuse to answer that."

A smiling Paul Rose, still bearded and dishevelled like the others, delivered the third refusal

"FLQ 70 is not dead," he shouted. "Long live FLQ 1971, 1972 and the rest of it."

Asked to place his right hand on the Bible, he turned his back on the judge and said he would address himself only to the courtroom audience.

"We aimed straight and hit hard," he shouted as he was led away.

The statement read by Cpl. Gaboury said Simard and the Rose brothers made up the Chenier cell of the FLQ, which claimed responsibility for the Laporte kidnapping, and Lortie was a "stand-by" member.

None of the four was under the influence of "drugs, tranquilizers or anything else" at the time of the kidnapping "or at any other time," the statement said.

"We knew what we were doing"

The Lineup Begins to Emerge For Ontario PC Leadership

TORONTO (CP) — Three Ontario cabinet ministers are the only declared candidates for the Ontario Progressive Conservative leadership to succeed Premier John Robarts. All want a tougher stand on Canadian control of the economy and resources.

The three are:

—Bert Lawrence, 47, minister of financial and commercial affairs, who made his announcement Monday in his Carleton East riding.

—Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, to be 38 on Jan. 31, who called a news conference Sunday night after "50 or 60" persons whom he did not identify met at his Bay Street office here.

—William Davis, 41, minister of education and university affairs, who announced his candidature Dec. 21, two weeks after Premier Robarts announced he would retire.

Other cabinet ministers considered possible contenders include Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, 42, George Kerr, 46, minister of energy and resources management, and Allan Lawrence, 45, minister of mines and northern affairs, who is expected to announce his bid Wednesday.

Other possibilities are Health Minister Thomas Wells, 40, and James Auld, 49, minister of tourism and information, as well as Leonard Reilly, a former party whip, and Leo Bernier, member for Kenora.

In addition, Toronto lawyer Arthur Maloney, a former member of Parliament for Toronto Parkdale, said in an interview Monday he also is considering running but will make no commitment until he sees how much support he can gather.

Premier Robarts told the closing day of the legislature: "We don't care where the capital comes from as long as it keeps Ontario growing and providing jobs."

WILLIAM DAVIS

BERT LAWRENCE

DARCY McKEOUGH

He had told a New York audience in November:

"Some argue that Canada cannot be an independent country unless free of foreign ownership. I cannot accept this argument."

On this issue Mr. Lawrence said Canadians are concerned about being "simply purchased" by the United States.

If he became premier he would slow down "drastically" Ontario's forgivable loans to large multi-national corporations and would concentrate such loans to industry going into lesser-developed areas of the province.

Forgivable loans do not have to be paid back if a company meets certain requirements in setting up a plant over a set period.

"I would not improve on the basic posture of Mr. Robarts vis-a-vis either the federal government or Quebec," said Mr. Lawrence. "His stance was a monument of statesmanship."

The next provincial election could be the toughest in more than 20 years, with "tremendous battling riding by riding."

The 68-seat Conservative government could be turned into a minority government through the loss of only nine seats to the 27-member Liberal or the 21-member New Democratic parties.

"Those nine seats have got to be held."

Mr. McKeough has said he will stress economic and physical growth in the province, Canadian control of the economy and strengthening of local government. However, Canadian control would have to take second place until the unemployment level falls.

Mr. Davis has listed his priorities as economic nationalism, pollution control and regional development.

All candidates were urged Monday by a PC backbencher to spell out their programs and policy ideas in "cold, specific, not political language."

Mines Minister Next Candidate

TORONTO — Mines Minister Allan Lawrence is expected to be the next Ontario cabinet minister to announce he will stand for leadership of the province's Progressive Conservative party.

Mr. Lawrence, in an interview with a Toronto newspaper, confirmed he would announce his candidacy this week and said he will push for 'speedier and more involved decision-making."

"I shall ask for a re-emphasis of values; new means of decision-making," he said. "By that I mean, I would like to see more involvement in the decision process — involvement outside the civil service."

Bert Lawrence Is Latest Bidder

TORONTO (CP) — Bert Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, told a news conference Monday he is in a position to deal with federal and interprovincial problems more ably than any other potential leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

Earlier, in Ottawa at his Carleton East riding, he had announced he would be a candidate to succeed Premier John Robarts at the party's convention Feb. 10-12 at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Mr. Lawrence said his background in Ottawa and the time he has spent in Quebec give him a "bank of goodwill and understanding that can be called upon to a degree beyond that of any other potential candidate."

He indicated that as premier he would use much the same approach as Premier Robarts.

"I could not improve on the basic posture of Mr. Robarts vis-a-vis either the federal government or Quebec. His stance was a monument of statesmanship."

Mr. Lawrence said he would not change Ontario's basic attitude to federal proposals for tax reform and the alternatives proposed by Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton which he considers sound.

The 47-year-old minister was at a loss only once during the news conference, when asked his attitude toward extension of tax support for Roman Catholic separate schools.

"Perhaps in the next four weeks I will have to take a firm position," he said.

"But on the first day of my campaign, if for no other reason than the sheer instinct of self-preservation, I am not going to face Education Minister William Davis on the grounds where he is best prepared through facts and experience. I will search for a day when I am more properly armed in that field."

Mr. Lawrence said he has been disturbed by remarks over the last year by some government members that economic nationalism and foreign ownership are not an election issue.

Foreign economic domination disturbs Canadians, he said, and that makes it very much an issue.

His priorities would be total Canadian control of the media and transportation, almost total fiscal and financial control and more control than now exists over natural resources.

Potter Calls For Plain Talking

TORONTO (CP) — A Progressive Conservative backbencher demanded Monday that candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party spell out their programs and policy ideas in "cold, specific, not political language."

Dr. Richard Potter, a Belleville general practitioner and member of the legislature for Quinte, said at a news conference delegates to a leadership convention here Feb. 10-12 should not commit themselves to any one candidate until they have heard from them all.

He said the leadership declaration by Education Minister William Davis a week before Christmas left him wondering what Mr. Davis was talking about.

He was equally unimpressed by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough's statement Sunday night announcing his candidacy.

DR. POTTER

Dr. Potter, 55, is touring the province appealing to Conservatives to insist that leadership candidates talk issues and not personalities.

He said his tour is neutral, in that he is not advocating support for any one candidate, and is being conducted "honestly and without selfish interest."

The tour that will take him by plane to all major municipalities in the province will cost him personally about $2,500, he said.

In London Monday night, Dr. Potter told a news conference his party could face problems in the next provincial election unless it is more willing to adapt to change.

He said it might not be necessary to adapt to changing attitudes of the electorate, "but it would be a big help."

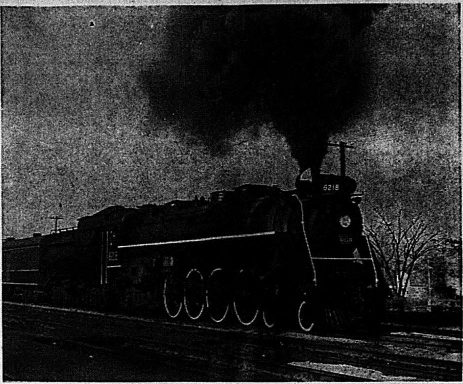
He said he would like to see a streamlining of provincial programs to make them more fair and comprehensive, citing the basic shelter rebate to tennants and rebate to farmers as two such programs.

"We surely can find better things than to tax on one hand and to give back on the other," he said, indicating that it would cost less administratively to simply lower taxes than to first tax then rebate the money.

Dr. Potter said he expects to be in Windsor and Thunder Bay today. Wednesday he would visit Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury, going on to Ottawa Thursday.

Trees - - Post - Christmas Work

A truck-load of Christmas trees discarded by the Belleville citizenry now that Christmas is over, fills this Department of Public Works truck parked while workers gather other trees. The trees will be burned at the city dump after they are all collected. Workers began collection yesterday morning.



End of an Era as Steam Shut Off

Canada's last operating steam locomotive, CNR 6218, which has drawn crowds wherever it stopped, including Belleville, is destined for retirement. Increasing costs and lack of parts form part of the problem. No scrapyard will await this 28-year-old locomotive — here puffing mightily in Belleville in 1967. It becomes an historic relic of a bygone age.

End of A Railroad Romance

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Remember the stories of irate farmers petitioning the owners of new railroads, claiming their cows weren't giving milk any more?

Remember, the feeling of awe when confronted with a smoke-belching gigantic, panting monster at the railroad station?

Or lying awake at night hearing the mournful wail of a distant steam whistle?

Those nostalgic reminiscences belong to an age now dead.

Railroads of today are serviced with sleek-diesel engines; absent is what railroad buffs will uphold as the classic days of steam.

In recent years glimpses of this era came in the form of Canada's last operating steam locomotive, Canadian National Railway's northern-style engine 6218.

A drawer of extensive crowds during excursion runs — in Belleville as elsewhere this iron horse seems now destined for, at worst, a graceless end, at best, a museum.

For CN has predicted an end to runs of the coal-burner.

Although railroad officials wanted to maintain the engine as a "living" example of an almost dead era, operating costs and the antiquity of parts have forced the railroad to face the decision of retiring 6218 this year.

Built by Montreal Locomotive Works Ltd. in 1942, the steamer was rennovated for $40,000. Federal regulations require the periodic renewal of boiler tubes and flues in steam locomotives.

The CNR has taken an official position on the fate of the old passenger-freight hauler which once ran regularly between Montreal and Halifax.

"It is becoming increasingly difficult to secure parts for Engine 6218 in order to keep it in safe operating conditions," says a spokesman.

Dieselization has created maintenance problems.

"It is no longer possible to simply order such things as side rod bushings or piston rings for the engine. These must be carefully fabricated in our railway shops or special castings ordered outside."

"Our difficulties in securing suitable coal for the engine will only increase as time goes on," says the CN official.

Modern fuels have made it un-economic to handle large supplies of coal.

Wherever the old engine stops, fire engines and steam shovels or cranes are needed to replace the long-gone watering tanks and coal shutes.

"During the last few years, there has been a gradual lessening of experienced people in our ranks to run the locomotive, fire the stoker and repair it in our shops," says the spokesman.

A decision was required this year because engine 6218 must have new boiler tubes and flues, a major undertaking.

CN though appreciates "the feelings of many Canadians from all walks of life who sincerely want the engine to remain in service.

"It is, however, expected that Engine 6218 will be retired because it is no longer economically or physically tired because it is no longer possible to retain it in running condition."

Seek Mail Survey

PICTON (Staff) — Town council will sound Post Office authorities on the possibility of a survey to determine if Pictonians are eligible for home mail delivery.

Councillor Harold McLoughlin caused council's decision when he reported that he had received a number of telephone calls from ratepayers who pointed out that many municipalities smaller than Picton enjoy mail delivery services.

Mr. McLoughlin recalled that a survey here a few years ago lacked "very little" of bringing Picton under a postal system including house delivery.

"This would add to our employment," remarked the councillor as he spoke of door-to-door deliveries. From the earlier survey conducted here Councillor McLoughlin observed that 2,200 deliveries were necessary to justify home mail service.

"The last time we were a few hundred short," he said.

Mayor Ackerman moved that the local post office investigate the possibility of another survey and received council's support in her motion.

No Decision On Snowmobile Law

PICTON (Staff) — Town council has reserved its decision on a bylaw proposed by the Picton police commission restricting the operation of snowmobiles in town, after hearing appeals from a local snowmobile organization.

Vincent Gentile, president of the Picton Bay Snow Riders club attended last night's council meeting accompanied by approximately 20 fellow members.

"It's a topic that has been on everyone's mind not just for two weeks but actually for about two years," Mr. Gentile told council referring to snowmobile operation. "We are here in force, and I don't mean just the people here with me tonight. We have about 60 families in our club, with more joining, to enjoy snowmobiling without disrupting our citizens. We, as a club, are striving to do what's right and not to be a menace."

Mr. Gentile reminded council that the first automobile was greeted with some disapproval but eventually gained acceptance as did motorcycles. He suggested that the main cause of accidents with snowmobiles relates directly to "poor management and control".

"We feel we can sit down with council and discuss this matter properly and thoroughly to arrive at bylaws of some sort agreeable to council, snowmobilers and taxpayers." Mr. Gentile emphasized that he does not feel the majority of snowmobilers should be penalized for the irresponsible actions of a minority group.

Mayor Margaret Ackerman replied that a restrictive bylaw prepared last winter failed to get third reading when members of the snowmobile association sent a delegation before council agreeing to police themselves.

Mrs. Ackerman agreed that executive members of the Picton Bay Snow Riders should meet with councillors to reach a mutually satisfactory solution to the operation of snowmobiles in town.

A motion by the Picton Police Commission forwarded to council recommended a bylaw restricting the speed limit of snowmobiles operating in town to "not more than 15 miles per hour." It was also suggested that snowmobiles should be limited in their operations within town limits." The motion was moved by County Judge Wilfred S. Lane and seconded by Jesse Mason, chairman of the police commission.

Mrs Ackerman remarked: "I feel because of the deputation of snowmobilers a com- to discuss this with them." Council carried a motion supporting her opinion.

A spokesman for the Picton police department said yesterday that few calls are received by residents complaining about the operation of snowmobiles in town. He reported a large volume of calls, however, from snowmobile owners seeking information about insurance and the required age for drivers. The spokesman added that snowmobilers are being checked for insurance and underage drivers. A police report for the month of December read in council last night recorded six snowmobiles checked

Management of Flyers, Habs Active Making Trade Feelers

NEW YORK (AP) — Trade rumors are a necessary evil in the life of every professional athlete and there are a flock of them buzzing around the National Hockey League these days.

Keith Allen, general manager of Philadelphia Flyers, showed up in New York Monday and the buzz, buzz, buzz stared again. The Flyers are in the throes of an 11-game winless streak and are looking for help from some place—any place.

"I'm in town for a couple of reasons," said Allen. "One of them is to try and get some of the Rangers' good fortune to rub off on me."

Allen had lunch Monday with Emile Francis, general manager-coach of the New York club. Francis could be ready to do business even though the Rangers are near the top of the NHL's East Division.

The Rangers expect injured left wing Vic Hadfield back within a week, and his return will put them one over the 20-man limit.

"There's always the chance of a deal," said Francis

The Rangers aren't hesitant to trade because their two most-recent deals have paid off handsomely. Centre Pete Stemkowski, acquired from Detroit Red Wings in November, and Ted Irvine, who came from Los Angeles Kings last February, have played important roles in New York's surge.

Allen is looking for scoring help, an old problem for the Philadelphia team. He might be willing to part with either Bernie Parent or Doug Favell, a pair of quality goalies.

"Let's put it this way," said Allen. "We haven't placed either goalie on an untouchable list."

Ron Caron, assistant general manager of Montreal Canadiens, also was in New York Monday but the trade rumors revolving around his club concern the Habs and Detroit. Sunday's loss to New York left Montreal 16 points behind the Rangers in third place in the East Division.

"We're looking two ways," said Caron—"up and down."

"It appears right now that Boston and New York are sailing along but it's still early to say that they'll be the only two. We hope to put it together and get back into it but we're also concerned with Toronto. They've won 10 of 11 and they're really coming on now."

The Red Wings absorbed a 13-0 defeat at Toronto Saturday night and have had defensive problems. Goalie Roy Edwards, out for one month with a fractured skull, returned Sunday and turned in a 3-2 victory over California Golden Seals. But the Wings lack a suitable backup goalie and are shopping.

Rumors of a Toronto Maple Leaf-Boston trade have been circulating for weeks but both clubs are going well right now and might be content to stand still. The one name repeated in those talks is centre Mike Walton, suspended by the Leafs for a couple of weeks last month and reported to be unhappy in Toronto

NHL rules allow trades until the last month of the season, giving the clubs two more months to wheel and perhaps deal.

"There's plenty of time," said Francis, smiling, "plenty of time."

Abel Takes Exception To Harkness Comment

SID ABEL

DETROIT (AP) — It appears a gap is developing between Sid Abel, veteran general manager of Detroit Red Wings, and Ned Harkness, the first-year coach of the National Hockey League team.

The split was more conjecture than anything else until Sunday night at Olympia Stadium when Abel told one sportswriter he intended to talk to owner Bruce Norris about a comment Harkness made in a local newspaper.

"You are the victim of us not doing our homework for the last 10 years," Harness quoted Norris as telling him. The quote came in a question and answer Sunday feature in the Detroit Free Press.

"In that time, we've gone through two expansion drafts," Abel said in a Detroit News story Monday. "I suppose he (Harkness) thinks this league has been sitting around waiting for him to arrive."

"I intend to discuss this matter with Mr. Norris," he added.

Abel, who has been general manager with Detroit since April 26, 1962, has been with the team in one capacity or another for three decades. He started his National Hockey League career with the Wings in 1938-39 and coached the club 11½ seasons—most of them in the dual role of general manager.

Harkness was a highly-successful college hockey coach at Cornell and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute before venturing into the NHL by accepting the Red Wings coaching job in April. Last year Abel was both coach and general manager following the firing of coach Bill Gadsby with the season a couple games old.

Does Big Jump Up Mean Long Fall Down?

DETROIT (CP) — Ned Harkness made the unprecedented jump to the National Hockey League from U.S. college hockey this season but the Detroit Red Wing coach now may be wishing he were back at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

The Red Wings suffered a humiliating 13-0 defeat at the hands of Toronto Maple Lafs Saturday night and are currently in sixth place in the seven-team NHL East Division. They finished third in the East Division last year.

The Red Wings defeated California Seals Sunday night to gain a measure of self respect after Saturday's drubbing but the Red Wing fans in Olympia Stadium did not let up on Harkness, Ottawa native and successful coach while at Cornell.

When Harkness ducked to avoid an errant puck behind the Wings's bench during Sunday night's game, one fan yelled: "That's your best move all season, Ned."

Harkness and the Red Wings, who have won only two of their last 10 games, were booed Sunday night, although the hissing subsided after the Wings went ahead in the second period.

"It wasn' as bad as I thought it would be," Harkness said of the early-game booing. "I wanted to know before the game if a few bricks were missing from the building."

Orr In Act

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto-based promoting groups have submitted a joint bid of $200,000 for the closed-circuit television rights in Toronto and Montreal for the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier world heavyweight championship fight at New York, March 8.

Bobby Orr Enterprises and All Canada Sports, represented by Alan Eagleson and Irv Ungerman, respectively, made the original offer to Jack Kent Cooke by telephone Monday.

They followed their telephone offer with a telegram guaranteeing a down payment of $50,000.

Ungerman, manager of Canadian heavyweight boxing champion George Chuvalo, said if Cooke accepts the offer the Toronto outlet would either be Maple Leaf Gardens or the Canadian National Exhibition coliseum.

Cooke, who has guaranteed the $5 million the two fighters will divide, is associated with Chartwell Enterprises, a California entertainment organization that controls worldwide closed-circuit television rights to the fight.

Now Patterson Meets Bonavena

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd Patterson, twice a former world heavyweight champion, and Oscar Bonavena of Argentina will meet in a scheduled 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden Feb. 12, it was announced Monday. The bout was originally scheduled for Jan. 22, but postponed at Bonavena's request. Harry Markson, director of Madison Square Garden boxing, said each fighter will be guaranteed $60,000 or 25 per cent of the gate.

Hull Nearing Richard Total

MONTREAL (CP)—Left winger Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks, the only National Hockey League player to score more than 50 goals in a regular season—he has done it three times—is threatening to become the second-highest goal scorer in history.

Hull, 32 last Sunday, had a 50-goal season in the 1961-62 season, then went on to score 54 goals in 1965-66, 52 the next season and 58 during the 1968-69 schedule.

He scored four goals in three games last week to boost his season's total to 23 and his career mark to 533, only 11 short of the total recorded by Maurice (Rocket) Richard, the former great right winger with Montreal Canadiens.

Richard had a 50-goal year in 1944-45 over a 50-game schedule and Bernie Geoffrion, Montreal's great right winger, did it in 1960-61 in 70 games.

Richard, who retired at the end of the 1959-60 schedule, scored 544 goals in 978 games. Hull now has played 917 games, which means he has 61 games to score the 12 goals needed to surpass the Rocket's mark.

BOBBY HULL

Hull scored the 500th regular-season goal of his career in his 861st game during last season. He beat Richard by two games to the 500-goal mark, to become the third player in history to reach that total.

Gordie Howe, the Detroit Red Wing right winger now in his 25th season, leads the all-time scoring with 776 goals in 1,648 games. Howe took 1,045 games to score 500 goals and 1,126 for 544 goals.

A fourth player is also closing in on the 500-goal mark. He is captain Jean Beliveau of Montreal, who now has 491 goals in 1,084 regular-season games, the most goals scored by a centre.

Hull also picked up four assists in games last week to increase his point total to 51 and crack Boston Bruins' monopoly at the top of the weekly scoring list.

Imlach's Ailing Sabres Weak-Kneed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An unusual rash of knee injuries has struck National Hockey League clubs, but the person hurting most, Punch Imlach, remains philosophical.

While most clubs bemoaned the loss of one or two players, the Buffalo Sabres' general manager and coach had no fewer than three players out with knee ailments, one with an eye injury, and goalie Roger Crozier had just resumed practice after 10 days in hospital with pancreatitis.

"When you've this many people in and out of the hospital, you wonder when it's going to end, and where," said Imlach Monday. "The only consolation for me is that maybe we're getting all this stuff at once.

"In any event, I hope so, and that we'll be healthy the rest of the season."

Sabres defenceman Al Hamilton was expected out of hospital today or Wednesday where he was undergoing treatment for a knee infection. Centre Billy Inglis and winger Larry Keenan remained sidelined with knee injuries.

Rookie Randy Wyrozub, recovering from a broken collar bone, was struck on the right eye during practice Saturday and extended his absence from the club by another month to six weeks.

Philadelphia Flyers lost Gary Dornhoefer for at least three weeks when the winger underwent surgery for a blood clot on the knee, the same right knee that was operated on six weeks before the Flyers opened training camp.

Toronto veteran George Armstrong was expected to miss at least four Maple Leaf games while recovering from a knee injured Saturday night in Toronto's 13-0 win over Detroit Red Wings.

RON ELLIS

Leafs woes were added to in their game with Detroit when winger Ron Ellis suffered a mild concussion. He's not expected to miss tonight's game with Minnesota North Stars, however, and will probably play with a protective helmet.

Los Angeles Kings were without top scorer and captain, Bob Pulford, for two to three week when the 14-year NHL star pulled knee ligaments in a recent game with St. Louis Blues.

And Detroit's No. 1 line of Gordie Howe, Alex Delvecchio and Frank Mahovlich was hampered by injuries.

Howe, recovering from a rib injury that sidelined him for several weeks early in the season, has had recurring bursitis problems in the elbow and wrist while Mahovlich has been playing with an ingrown toenail.

Sport Briefs

Nebraska is No. 1! The unbeaten Cornhuskers are United States college football's top-ranked team — and mythical national champion — for the 1970 season. Nebraska garnered a whopping 39 first-place votes in the final Associated Press poll of a countrywide panel of sports writers and sportscasters and easily outdistanced runner-up Notre Dame with eight firsts. Nebraska conquered Louisiana State 17-12 in the Orange Bowl. Notre Dame upset defending national champion Texas 24-11 in the Cotton Bowl. Texas finished the regular season in the No. 1 spot but the Cotton Bowl loss by the Longhorns dropped them to third in the final rankings. Tennessee, the Sugar Bowl champion, ranks fourth, followed by Ohio State.

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Falcons have vigorously denied reports that they are attempting to obtain quarterback Joe Kapp from Boston Patriots. "There's nothing to it," Frank Wall, president of the Falcons, said Monday. "We went to Boston, Coach Norm Van Brocklin and I, last week and talked to Billy Sullivan president of the Patriots about trading for their No. 1 draft choice, but Kapp was not mentioned. Kapp is a former quarterback of Minnesota Vikings, where Van Brocklin coached for six seasons before coming to Atlanta in 1968. Kapp went to Boston last year, when he and the Vikings could not agree to terms.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League announced Monday completion of a one-for-one trade with San Francisco Giants. Montreal acquired second baseman Ron Hunt from the Giants in exchange for first baseman Dave McDonald. Hunt, 29, has a lifetime batting average of .272 in eight National League seasons. He broke into the league in 1963 with New York Mets. He was traded to Los Angeles Dodgers where he played in 1967 and the following year he was dealt to the Giants. Last season he played in 117 National League games, batting .271 with six home runs and 41 runs batted in. McDonald, 27, played last season with Winnipeg Whips, the Expos' International League farm team. He appeared in 121 games batting .255 with 23 homers and 64 runs batted in. The Expos acquired him last May from New York Yankees of the American League in exchange for pitcher Gary Waslewski

Name Game Starts in Hamilton

BERNIE FALONEY

HAMILON (C) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats found themselves without a head coach Monday, but plenty of possible replacements were mentioned for departing Joe Restic.

Restic, who still had a year remaining to fulfil his four-year contract with the Eastern Football Conference team, was named head coach of Harvard University at Cambridge.

Ralph Sazio, Hamilton's general manager, is still unaware he's without a coach and won't know until he returns to the city Saturday.

The Sazio family is vacationing in Europe, and has been since negotiations beween Restic and Harvard commenced several days ago.

Club president Ross Fischer said the last time Sazio went on a long-overdue vacation in 1967, the then general manager, Jake Gaudaur, was named CFL commissioner.

Fischer said the Hamilton club can only wish Restic the best in his new venture. He said the 44-year-old Restic, an outstanding player at Villanova before moving into the pro ranks with Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, had kept the Ticats informed of his negotiations with Harvard.

Fischer said Harvard offered Restic a contract "he couldn't turn down." He was believed to be making $20,000 a year with the Tiger-Cats.

Restic, who came to Canada in 1962, was an assistant to Jim Trimble and Sazio before taking over as head coach in February, 1968.

Sazio will have the final say about who replaces Restic.

Candidates for the job include two of Restic's assistants—Carl Schuette and Al Bruno. However, if neither is successful, it is unlikely they'll be back in Hamilton since the new head coach will probably recruit his own assistants.

Both Schuette and Bruno have also been reported considering U.S offers, and one Hamilton source, who asked not to be identified, said both men could follow Restic to Harvard.

Jerry Williams, the former Calgary Stampeder coach, is reported on the outs with the NFL Eagles and might be available as might Ray Malvasi, a Ticat asistant in 1967-68 who may get the axe at Buffalo where the Bills are in the process of shaking up their NFL club.

Bob Ward, who did an excellent job moulding Montreal Alouettes' defensive unit in the 1970 season, has also been mentioned as a candidate.

Others figuring prominently in the guessing game include Bernie Faloney, the former quarterback star with Hamilton, Montreal and Edmonton Eskimos; Jim Champion one-time head coach with British Columbia Lions, and Ralph Goldston, outstanding EFC player with Hamilton and Montreal and an assistant coach at Montreal before being let go by that organization during the changeover last year.

If they never won another game for the duration of this senior hockey season, Belleville Mo-Hawks would be content with the two points they picked up in Kingston Sunday.

"If ever they were going to give us a pasting, that should have been the night," Dave Jones post-morteined. "Our last game was December 22nd, and we only had half a dozen players out for our only practice between then and Sunday."

The Mo-Hawks' playing-coach declined to mention the injury factor. Combined with their lack of ice time, many of the Mo-Hawks were still suffering from such malingering holiday season maladies as swizzle-stick elbow and acute butterball-itis.

"This is ridiculous, playing when most of the guys haven't been on skates for so long," confided normally tight-lipped George Godson on Sunday's bus to Kingston. "We could really get bombed."

Godson wasn't being defeatist, just realistic. The Mo-Hawks best chance at holiday-season ice-time was a pair of games with Woodstock, both cancelled.

The Aces meanwhile had tuned up by splitting a pair of games with third-place Barrie the previous weekend.

On the psychological side of the scale, the Mo-Hawks fully expected to walk into a Kingston buzzsaw. The Aces were bent on avenging the four defeats they had suffered at Belleville hands in the teams' first five meetings of the season.

Those four losses were the main reason the Aces had to content themselves with fourth rung on the eight-team Senior A ladder.

That perch became a trifle wobbly around 9.20 Sunday evening, when the Aces skated off their spacious Memorial Centre ice talking to themselves with a 4-1 loss under their braces. That left the Jones' boys only one point behind with a game in hand.

Even worse was the fact the Aces had lost their third home game to the Mo-Hawks, this time before 2,113 mostly loyal fans. That's as many as have turned out in Belleville to watch the last three Mo-Hawk games.

The Aces managed to outshoot their guests, but continued to be stumped by goalie Steve Rexe and some tenacious Mo-Hawk checking. In the six Belleville-Kingston games, the Mo-Hawks have now outscored the Aces 27-11, and hold an amazing 14-3 goal spread on Kingston ice.

Much of the credit belongs to Rexe, with whom the Aces negotiated when the redhead couldn't come to early-season terms with Mo-Hawk management.

He now sports a 1.83 goals-against average for Kingston games, and has been hotter against the Aces than Ian Paisley on St. Patrick's Day.

The Aces' frustrations with the Mo-Hawks, who upset them out of last year's senior playoff picture, have manifested themselves in the usual way. But the penalties they are incurring for trying to run the Mo-Hawks out of the rink are proving costly to the Aces. Belleville is averaging about two powerplay goals per game against them.

Danny McLeod's charges show particular delight in trying to maim Mo-Hawk captain Ralph Plane, a big factor in their playoff ouster last spring.

Former American Leaguer Peter Ford tried his hand in the second period Sunday. After Plane cracked him about three solid clouts between the ears, Ford stumbled away muttering "That'll teach ya." Fortunately for Ford, he didn't have any teeth in the areas where the Belleville carpenter's fists landed.

They undoubtedly were lost in previous matches where Ford acted as his own promoter.

Plane is big with dentists, himself, but run-ins with such Kingston types as Charlie Convery, Bob Olajos, and Rod Graham in the last few winters haven't required any additions to Ralph's uppers.

Perhaps the reason Plane seems to infuriate Kingston players and spectators so is because he exemplifies the reason for the current Mo-Hawk success over the Aces. Not as fancy a skater or puckhandler as many of the younger Aces, the Belleville captain's honest effort takes up a lot of the slack.

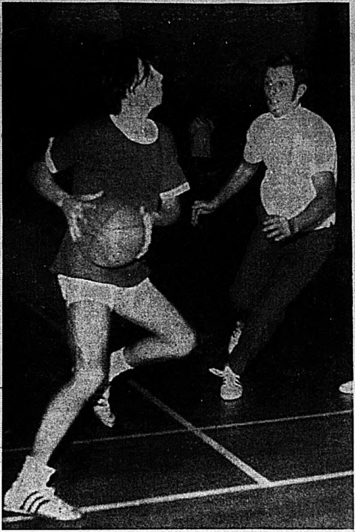
And as long as the Aces are busying themselves trying to put Plane on a stretcher, they're not scoring goals.

Meanwhile, the Mo-Hawks are having a banner year in both offensive and defensive departments. In last winter's entire 40-game regular schedule, the club only managed 131 goals. They have 91 already just past the half-way mark.

And with only 87 goals against, this marks the first time in the club's five-year history they have scored more than they have allowed this late in the season.

No fooling, they're a good fifth-place hockey team. You should come out and see them sometime.

Unless, of course, it interferes with your Christmas shopping.



Keeping Close Tabs

Centennial's Tom Barriage drives for a lay-up as coach Bruce Faulds defends in a Monday night practice for the junior Chargers who sport a perfect 3-0 record and trail Quinte's unbeaten juniors by two points in the Bay of Quinte's western division. League play resumes Thursday after the Christmas break.

Hoopsters Bounce Back From Holiday Recess

The high school basketball season is scheduled to bounce back from the Christmas break Thursday with Picton visiting Moira for a triple-header.

The Bay of Quinte league still has 46 matches remaining in its schedule which runs until March 4.

There are still six teams undefeated in the high school loop, five of them in the western division.

In midget Quinte has maintained an unbeaten record for four games for the only flawless mark in their age group. BCI, leaders in the east sport a 4-1 mark with their only loss coming to Nicholson.

The junior Saints also have won four consecutive games but must contend with Centennial who are unbeaten in three contests.

Nicholson is unbeaten in the east, but trails BCI who have played two more games.

Trenton and Centennial, the only undefeated teams in the senior section, clash in a Friday night contest.

The top two teams in each division earn the right to enter the play-offs after completion of the regular schedule. A tournament between the top 12 clubs in the three age classes then decides who will represent Bay of Quinte at COSSA.

Centennial is the defending Bay of Quinte champion in midget, with Quinte winning last year's junior crown and BCI the senior.

Stinson's Pull Off New Year Upset

Stinson Construction started the year out on the right foot by upsetting the league leading Belvedere Hotelmen Monday night in Quinte Hockey League action.

Jodoin showed the way for the winners coming up with a hat trick to help send the Hotelmen to their second defeat of the year. Ray and Meeks counted the other Stinson scores.

Gerry Jones scored for the loser who drew six penalties, one less than Stinsons'.

DCA Transfer continued to draw a blank in the league standings absorbing a 3-1 loss to Central Taxi for their 11th consecutive setback.

Kevin Allen was top scorer for the winners hitting a pair of goals with Doug Bolte adding the third.

Randy Lambert was the lone DCA scorer.

Merchant Strategy Misfires

Strategy backfired on the Merchants Monday night as they dropped a 6-4 decision to the first-place Mustangs, while in the other half of the Gas House doubleheader Mulroneys came up with a 3-1 win over Marysville.

Trailing 5-4 in the last minutes of play, the second place Merchants pulled goalie Rick Mandoff for an extra attacker. The strategy failed to pay off, however as Mustangs Tom Woodley scored his third goal of the game into the empty net.

Fred McAdam and Don Irvine also managed goals for the winners who built up an early 3-0 lead.

Carl Boomhower was best for the Merchants with a three-goal effort with the other tally going to Don Fish.

Late goals by Larry Fritz and Mike McDermott gave Mulroney's their win over Marysville.

Dave Middleton had opened the scoring for the winners with Paul Embury making the lone reply.

Cougars Sink Hawks Deeper

COBOURG — The Cougars pounced on Trenton for seven goals before the Golden Hawks could get air-borne enough to hold their own in an 8-2 Eastern Ontario Junior B contest last night.

The winners led 2-0 at the end of the first period and 7-1 after 40 minutes of play. Trenton played their best hockey in the final frame earning a 1-1 split in goals for the period.

Mike Hall, returning to action after suffering a broken jaw was the outstanding player for Trenton scoring a goal and handing out some solid checks.

Jeff Howard notched the other Trenton score, while winger Hugh Holmes played an aggressive game.

The loss was the 17th in 18 games for the Hawks, whose only win came against the runaway league - leading Peterborough Lions.

Bubbles May Save Time

MONTREAL (CP) — A recently-invented "bubble machine" that lessens the impact of a solid body striking a water surface promises to aid further development of world-class diving.

The apparatus uses compressed air below the surface of a pool to create a cushion of "bubbles" which lessens the impact of an imperfect dive.

"It takes the fright out of diving and allows the divers to concentrate entirely on form," said Martin Flewwelling, who together with Michael Harvey, developed the apparatus at a Domtar Ltd. research centre.

"It's important to remember that a diver has no protective equipment: The initial impact of a poor entry can cause serious injury," he said.

"The cushion of foam created by the bubble machine all but eliminates the fear of injury--particularly in very young divers."

"It takes about eight years to develop a good diver," he said. "This apparatus should reduce it to five."

International diving champion Beverley Boys officially inaugurated the "bubble machine" Sunday when she dove from the 10-metre tower into the cushion of air bubbles during the close of the Canadian Winter Championships at the suburban Pointe Claire swimming and diving pool.

Domtar has announced it will donate royalties from the invention to the Canadian Amateur Diving Association and the Pointe Claire Diving Club.

At the last meeting of the Senior Citizens' club held in 1970, the past president George Heasman was honored with a birthday cake. The next club meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon, January 7.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Belshaw spent Christmas with their nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bedford in Trenton.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

For the first three or four decades of Communist rule in Russia, traffic accidents were a rare phenomenon, for the reason that there was no traffic — or at least none to speak of. But now things are changing and as the age of the motor car dawns in Soviet cities, the traffic toll is skyrocketing. Last year, for instance, an estimated 30,000 Soviet citizens died in traffic accidents. Though this figure seems small compared with the 56,400 who died on U.S. highways in the same period, the fact is that there are only some 6 million vehicles on the road in Russia (the U.S. has 112 million), which means that the toll taken by traffic in Russia is actually 10 times higher than in the U.S.

At first, these statistics tended to baffle Western experts. Now the Russians themselves have provided the answer. The trouble turns out to be not so much with the Soviet drivers (who must pass much more rigorous examinations to get a licence than their Western counterparts), but with the Russian pedestrian. Soviet pedestrians, the official figures say, are responsible for some two-thirds of the nation's traffic accidents, and one-third of these, in turn, happen because the pedestrian in question is drunk.

By any standard, Soviet pedestrians are a daring lot who regularly play a kind of Rusion roulette all their own. They jaywalk across boulevards 10 lanes wide, stumble drunkenly alng roadways oblivious to onrushing traffic and spring out from between parked cars with the careless abandon of 3-year-olds. One well-travelled resident of Moscow insists he can always spot fellow Russians travelling abroad by their disdain for traffic lights, "don't walk" signs and crosswalks. A recent Soviet editorial went so far as to castigate the nation's pedestrians as "the most undisciplined and cynical in the world."

With some 30 to 40 brands of liquid car waxes now on the market, the motorist may be in the quandary over the merits of these products compared to the older paste waxes. But they needn't worry. The emergency road service department of the Canadian Automobile Association says that all brands of liquid polishes sold today provide sufficient protection to a car's finish, and are fully as adequate as the paste waxes — particularly in light of the improvements auto manufacturers have made in car paint.

The contrasts among car waxes lie instead in the method of application. Without an electric buffer, some require more elbow grease than others.

Paints used on today's cars have a base of acrylic lacquer that provides them with a tougher finish, and also contain chemical compounds that resist body rust. Moreover, cars now receive more coats of paint than in the past, and they are applied with considerably more care.

Still drivers should continue to take reasonable precautions against undue rust and deterioration of car paint. Pride of ownership, of course, also calls for finishes with a fine, glistening sheen. Vinyl tops should be coated with solvents designed expresly for them.

A fresh coat of wax every six months is usually sufficient to prevent ill effects, according to the CAA. And although it's been a general rule that it's best to wait six months for the paint on a new car to settle before the first wax job, the Chrysler Corp. now says that their new cars can be waxed immediately.

The CAA advises, then, that the best rule in caring for your car's finish is simply to follow the instructions in your owner's manual — instructions that have been written with a specific model in mind.

Former Soviet Agent Relates Plot to Seduce Canadians

WASHINGTON (CP) — A hearsay story of a love affair between an unidentified Canadian diplomat and a Russian spy girl has been unveiled with the release of previously secret Senate testimony by a former Soviet secret police agent.

He also told of a plot to lure three young Canadian embassy girls to a romantic dacha outside Moscow. The scenario even included a musician named Igor to serenade them.

The dacha scheme failed miserably. The only Canadian to enter the Soviet net was a businesslike first secretary who didn't even take notice of the would-be spies who had laboriously prepared the setting.

As for the 1963 love affair with the unidentified first, second or third secretary, the former Soviet agent said he got the story secondhand from the girl involved and didn't know much about it although it, too, apparently was a failure.

Yuri Krotkov, who appeared before the Senate subcommittee on internal security under the name of George Karlin, told in recently-released testimony of a whole range of schemes to compromise foreign diplomats from a number of countries by supplying them and their wives with attractive bed partners.

Karlin a Soviet playwright, screen writer and radio correspondent, before he defected to London in 1963, said he was "co-opted" or recruited by the KGB—Soviet secret police—in 1946 while a correspondent for Moscow radio.

In his testimony running for several days of closed hearings in November, he said the KGB "spent a lot of money and energy" on the "operation" against the young Canadian cypher girls of the Canadian embassy.

He wasn't sure of the names —"one was Brown, I guess, another—I do not remember the name of the second one."

Karlin based much of his story on hearsay from other agents. But he himself was involved in the plot against the Canadian girls.

The KGB rented a dacha for him outside Moscow and rented another across the street. A Soviet woman employed at the Canadian embassy "was ordered to press the Canadian ambassador, the first secretary and the staff" to rent the cottage but they were not interested.

Later the KGB ordered the Russian woman to tell the Canadians she had rented the dacha herself and then invite them to spend their weekends there.

"The idea was this: When two Canadian girls, among others, would be there, then they would play probably ball or walk, to find a way to get acquainted with them." A second Russian agent also was assigned to the operation. He was identified only as Schvartz and was to pose as a student friend of the Russian woman. —

"It was very difficult" for the Russian woman—Karlin said he could not recall her name—"to bring Canadians to her dacha. . . ."

"They did not come for a long, long time."

"We prepared everything. Even one musician—what was his name—Igor, probably. The musician with the accordion came, you know, to entertain them to become 'friends'."

Finally some Canadians visited but nothing came of it.

"Then, Karlin continued, "by one of KGB's orders the Russian lady pretended to be ill and someone called to the Canadian embassy. We hoped that they would come to visit her, and even we prepared a table, with wines in front of her dacha.

"But only the first secretary came. He came alone and he went through us. He spent half an hour with the lady and then he came back and even he didn't look at us and he went to Moscow.

"All that operation failed. . . . I would say they were all right, these Canadians. They were human, God, but they were well instructed, I guess."

Karlin also told a story about a Canadian diplomat at the Moscow embassy but didn't know his name or whether he was a first, second or third secretary.

In fact he got the story second hand from a girl who claimed to have had a love affair with the Canadian in 1963 before he was recalled

The girl was Rita Prokofiev, who also used the code name Zoya.

She had mentioned to Karlin a "love affair" with a Canadian gentleman.

He testified that the Canadian bought a Volga car so as not to draw attention when meeting Rita. According to Rita, he said, they were in love and "the KGB wanted to do something but she told me at that time that they were all stupid, these people of the KGB."

He added:

"She said they did not trust her absolutely and therefore they wanted to control everything. The result was that the operation failed and the Canadian diplomat went back to Canada. He was married in the time she mentioned."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Some Folk Resent Medical Warnings

Even at the risk of killing themselves, some people resent being told what to do to save their lives. Tell some youngsters not to speed and they will drive with a heavy foot on the accelerator. Tell some adults that this or that way of life is dangerous, and they will call you a scaremonger.

The other evening a colleague said to me at a medical meeting: "It seems to me that the most difficult aspect of writing a medical column is telling it straight to readers without frightening them too much — yet not keeping things from them they should know."

I agreed. I said it's something like walking a tightrope. You hope you are in balance between not promising too much (being a Pollyanna) and, on the other hand, not frightening people unnecessarily. Therefore, you will understand why I welcomed the following letter from a reader:

Dear Dr Steincrohn: I just want to say how much I appreciate your column in our newspaper. I think it is a God's blessing, especially for my husband and me. We read your column in which you advised one of your readers (Mrs. U.) to see her doctor because she had symptoms supiciously like diabetes.

My husband has symptoms similar to hers. He quickly made an appointment to see our doctor. Sure enough he had diabetes — and very bad. I am so grateful we read your column because he could have been dead by now. That was months ago.

Please keep warning people about cancer, emphysema and all the rest. If Mrs. U. could have seen my brother die of cancer, I'm sure she'd change her mind about calling doctors scaremongers. The doctor warned my brother to give up smoking four years before he died. But he didn't. When he died he was nothing but skin and bones. Many people don't realize what you are trying to do by advising us, until it happens right in their own family. That is why I'm writing to let you know that some folks are grateful to you. — Mrs. H.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am a woman, 70 years of age, and have had excellent health all of my life (no operations). However, I am terribly concerned about my failing memory. I have worked up until now, but have recently retired.

I am quite certain hat there will be many "oldsters" interested in my question which is: "Is there anything that can be done to remedy the situation?" Thank you. — Mrs. L.

Comment: I don't know of any specific, sure - fire remedy to overcome forgetfulness. As you are undoubtedly thinking, in many cases the reason is a cerebral circulation (arteries and veins in the brain) which is at fault. The blood vessels are not as "young" as they were, and oxygen and other nourishment do not get through as quickly and as well.

Sometimes it is psychological. I've known patients who could not remember names, for example, even when they were in their 40s and 50s, who became needlessly alarmed when they still could not recall names when they were in their 60s and 70s. They had "forgotten" that this was a failing that they had when they were young and that it was entirely unrelated to aging blood vessels.

Nevertheless, Mrs. L., if it bothers you that much, I'd suggest you talk it over with your doctor. Although there's no special medicine that helps everybody, he may hit upon some medication that can improve your memory.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Oppression Strengthens Foe

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is one of the great ironies of human history — not yet recognized by the impractical "practical" men who exercise political control — that violence, persecution and oppression only strengthen and solidify the very enemy they seek to subdue.

A European friend of mine the other night, stopping here for a few days on a tour of the U.S., asked me to comment on the new "black militancy." He wanted to know when the American Negroes began calling each other "soul brothers" and acting as to self-consciously unified group.

He saw nothing like that when he was last here, a dozen years ago. But, since the widespread white reaction against the Civil Rights movement and the failure to implement court decisions in many areas, the blacks have been brought together as never before in our history. The rise of black racism is the mirror image of white racism.

In something of the same way, the state of Israel can be said to have been created by Hitler. In the years before the Nazi persecutions began, Jewish consciousness was low and diminishing. Many German Jews had assimilated (or so they thought) into the German culture; and Jews elsewhere in the world only mildly supported Zionism.

It was the virulent thrust of official anti-Semitism in Germany that suddenly solidified the ranks of world Jewry and gave the tremendous impetus to the formation of the Israel state. Without this dreadful exacerbation, it is doubtful that Judaism in the 20th Century would have remained much more than a cultural and religious vestige for millions.

And now, in a grotesque inversion of roles, the Arab people have become — in their own eyes, at least — the persecuted and dispossessed, at the hands of the Israeli. The astonishing revival of the Palestinian Liberation Movement after languishing for 20 years, now threatens to capture the imagination and at least tacit support of all Arab nations.

What is equally ironic here is that without the presence of Israel, the Arabs felt no real unity — indeed, quarrels among them were as deep and fractionated as any in the world. The only thing that has brought them together is their common resentment and fear of Israel, which has overcome their own traditional enmities and suspicions.

The blacks could have been absorbed into the mainstream of American life long ago; the Jews would undoubtedly have refrained from transforming Zion from a dream into a political reality; and the Arabs would have gone their separate ways — without the tremendous external pressures forcing them to band together fiercely. It is their "enemies" who have strengthened the very forces they sought to extinguish.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 6

Your birthday today: This is a sort of harvest year, in which the results of seven years of efforts begin to show. You draw away from people and habits which contribute little to your happiness. Definite materials are there for the asking, and you can use them for solid success. Your own efforts are the greatest factor. Today's natives have a faculty of escaping public notice, whether they are acting constructively or scandalously.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Go along with the stream of events, coincidence; take casual advantage of whatever happens. Seek fresh business and social contacts. Group financial projects promise progress.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Tend your business without letting friends tell you what to do. Someone who really knows may let you in on confidential information. Don't neglect exercise.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): There's much to celebrate today among friends and family. Teamwork goes well. Settle a reasonable deal without fuss and fanfare; add to your savings.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Consider seriously any career proposal, or see whether you can set one up. Purchases of new clothing, tools, appliances, furnishings work out well, if not impulsively made.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Use your achieved situation to create further progress. Take family, friends, and enjoy new scenery. Some incident stirs old memories, deep feelings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Optimism and industry are today's keywords. Put on your best attire for any public appearance, enjoy looking well. Rescue abandoned projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Stimulus comes from competition and the energy of your associates. Get in the swing of things, share your own work and hobbies. Home projects promise well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Settle quickly for reasonable terms rather than hanging on in the hope for something. Survey your resources, reserves, insurance coverage; then think about improvements.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Work hard to keep up your momentum and thus attract more support. Hobbies studies are also rewarding. Home life is best this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Whatever can be brought to completion should be, and the results collected. You have the public eye on you now; work to build your repute. Family activities are favored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Extend yourself to be sociable. There's much satisfaction all around with the way events are going for several friends. Good news is cause to celebrate.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): On business ideas, far more discussion takes place than anybody had thought possible. Listen carefully for unintended concessions, settle for a definite goal before the day is out.

MONTREAL (CP) — Four young Quebecers were charged Tuesday with kidnapping and non-capital murder in connection with the October kidnap-slaying of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte.

Brothers Paul and Jacques Rose, Francis Simard and Bernard Lortie all face possible life sentences on conviction for either crime.

They also were charged with three violations of the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970—membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, advocating or promoting the illegal acts of the FLQ, and advocating the use of force or the commission of a crime to effect a change of government in Canada.

Not-guilty pleas were entered in their behalf after they refused to plead, and each was escorted from the courtroom shouting slogans of support for the terrorist FLQ.

The Rose brothers, Simard and Lortie were found criminally responsible Monday at the end of a lengthy coroner's inquest into Mr. Laporte's strangulation death.

They appeared Tuesday at the end of an arraignment session at which 11 other persons were charged with harboring, aiding and abetting the four after the fact of the kidnapping and murder.

A 12th person was charged with obstructing justice.

Trial dates for all accused Tuesday are to be set Thursday and Crown prosecutor Jacques Ducros said the Crown is ready to proceed with trials without delay.

All were sent to trial under

FLQ Statement Fails to Excite Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday that another reported statement from the outlawed FLQ might be another attempt to try to divide the Canadian people.

Commenting on a report that the Montreal police received another statement saying that FLQ is far from dead, Mr. Trudeau said it may or may not be true. If it is true, he said, it is an added argument against immediate repeal of the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970.

However, he said, he had no idea whether the statements in it were accurate.

"It's just a communique. I can't get very excited over it."

African Bishop to Die For Coup d'Etat Role

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Most Rev. Albert Ndongmo, 44, Roman Catholic bishop of Nkongsamba, was sentenced to death today by the Yaounde military tribunal.

Msgr. Ndongmo was accused of taking part in a plot to assassinate President Ahmadou Ahidjo. Two others also were sentenced to death.

Tuesday, the bishop was sentenced to life imprisonment for plotting an armed rebellion. The bishop had testified that he has been in contact with a man planning a "spiritual coup d'etat in which only the angels would act," but he denied playing an active role in the plot.

Sentenced to die with the bishop were Gabriel Tabeu and Celestin Takala. Five others received terms of life imprisonment, 15 got 20-years terms, 25 received 10 years and 13 five years. Fifteen suspects were acquitted.

If Ahidjo does not commute the death sentences, the bishop and his co-defendants will be shot to death at a public execution.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A flow of cold air covers Ontario today. Skies will be mainly sunny today but continuing cold with snowflurries and snowsqualls near the larger lakes. Afternoon temperatures both today and Thursday are expected to range from near 20 in the south to near 10 in most northern regions with overnight lows of near zero in the south and 10 to 20 below zero in the north.

Soldiers' Role In Quebec Ends

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian armed forces' operation in aid of the civil power in Quebec has been terminated, the defence department announced Tuesday.

The action was taken at the request of Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette, a spokesman said.

Troops were called out to assist Quebec police forces in maintenance of law and order following the abductions of British trade commissioner James Cross and provincial Labor Minister Pierre Laporte by terrorists last October.

Prime Minister Trudeau said Dec. 24 that all the armed forces personnel would be withdrawn by Jan. 4—Monday—except for soldier bodyguards on important persons.

Tuesday's order meant that all guards now have been withdrawn, and the remaining troops will return to their bases.

Bodyguards were simultaneously withdrawn from the few public figures in Ottawa still under protection.

At one stage of the kidnap crisis, large numbers of federal cabinet ministers, high public servants and foreign diplomats in Ottawa were protected by combat-ready troops.

Pocock Would Accept Non-Catholic Students

TORONTO (CP) — The Roman Catholic Coadjutor Archbishop of Toronto, Most Rev. Philip Pocock, Tuesday night told the Metropolitan Toronto separate school board that non-Catholics should be permitted to send their children to Catholic separate schools.

He made the comment after saying he believes parents will increasingly demand spiritual content in their children's schooling in the next few years.

Separate school boards in Ontario now receive government funds only for Roman Catholic pupils. Provincial law does not allow non-Catholics to assign their tax money to separate Catholic schools.

Heath's Mood Is Called One of 'Savage Candor'

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau hit the headlines in The Evening Standard today.

The Beaverbrook newspaper gave top display to the Ottawa report in which Trudeau warns that Britain's proposed sale of arms to South Africa poses a danger to the Commonwealth's future.

The Standard also prominently displayed its own London story saying that Prime Minister Heath leaves for the Far East in a mood of "savage candor."

Heath is reported to be bitter because some Commonwealth leaders have been more outspoken in their public criticism of the arms proposal than they have been in private exchanges with him.

They also have been slow in complimenting Britain on aid for the developing countries.

Heath is likely to take the attitude at the Jan. 13-22 Commonwealth conference in Singapore that from now on Britain will put its own interests first in all international dealings, the newspaper said.

The Guardian reported in an Ottawa dispatch that Trudeau is believed to have made detailed plans with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere on how to face the arms issue.

"Mr. Trudeau clearly accepts that he has an important and even crucial role to play at Singapore and has prepared his ground methodically," Guardian correspondent Clyde Sanger reports.

Most British newspapers have concluded that Heath will strongly defend his intention to supply a limited range of naval and other equipment to South Africa.

However, The Sun suggests there is "just a glimmer of change" in his attitude.

"He no longer wants to persuade the world that it is right to provide arms to an apartheid government," the newspaper said.

"He rests his defence on the claim that we have an obligation to do so."

The Sun urged Heath to call the whole thing off to prevent destruction of the Commonwealth.

Trudeau In Pakistan

RAWALPINDI (CP) — Nearly 16 hours of jet flying across 10 time zones brought Prime Minister Trudeau to a snappy military welcome in this sunny West Pakistan city today.

Trudeau was met at Chaklala Airport by President Yahya Khan who is also army chief.

Renewed Peace Talks Are Moving Cautiously

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The renewed Middle East peace talks moved cautiously ahead today with most diplomats here skeptical about the immediate prospects of a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The diplomats believe procedural questions will dominate the talks, held under UN special envoy Gunnar Jarring, for several weeks.

In addition, UN officials are well aware of Egypt's warning not to extend the current ceasefire after its expiration Feb. 5, unless Israel announces a timetable for withdrawal from the territories it occupied in the 1967 six-day war. No one here expects the talks to have progressed that far in four weeks.

Jarring conferred separately Tuesday with the representatives of Israel, Egypt and Jordan in his 38th-floor suite at UN headquarters.

Adhering to Jarring's appeals for quiet diplomacy, the three participants — Ambassadors Yosef Tekoah of Israel, Mohammed H. El-Zayyat of Egypt and Muhammad H. El-Farra of Jordan—were tight-lipped about their discussions, which were expected to continue today.

Trial of Nine Jews Is Postponed for Week at Leningrad

MOSCOW (AP) — The court martial of a Jewish officer in the Soviet army continued today in Leningrad, but the trial of nine other Jews has been postponed until next week, Jewish sources reported.

The government charges that all took part in the plot to hijack a Soviet airliner to Scandinavia last June so some of the conspirators could emigrate to Israel. Nine Jews and two gentiles were convicted in the plot on Christmas Eve and face long terms in labor camps.

The informants said a verdict is expected Thursday in the military trial of Lieut. Vulf Zalmanson, 31, who is charged with treason and desertion charges. His brother, sister and brother-in-law were among the earlier defendants.

Zalmanson could be sentenced to death on the treason charge and seven years in a labor camp for desertion, but it was not known what the prosecution was asking. Sources said that even Zalmanson's father was refused admission to the military trial when it began Tuesday.

Western correspondents have been forbidden to travel to Leningrad for any of the trials, and officials there refused to confirm that the Zalmanson trial had begun.

Relatives of the nine other Jews awaiting trial said court officials told them the hearing was postponed "at least until Monday" because defendant Lzi Yagman, 30, was ill. They were given no information except that Yagman had a fever.

L'Humanite, the French Communist party newspaper, reported today that no more Jews will be tried in Leningrad. "According to our permanent correspondent in Russia, Max Leon," the party organ reported, "a well-informed source says that rumors spread in recent days in Western circles concerning the preparation of a new trial at Leningrad have no basis."

In Rome, the Italian Communist party said it has intervened on behalf of Jews in the Soviet Union and other East European countries. It said steps were taken with Soviet and other authorities "in the forms that were considered most opportune and efficacious."

The party organ L'Unita published a statement officially confirming that the Italian party had received an appeal for help from 93 Soviet Jews who said they were barred from emigrating to Israel.

The letter was transmitted last September to Uberto Terracina, a Jew and Communist floor leader in the Italian Senate.

Italian papers this week said that Terracina replied to the letter, but that other Italian Communist leaders ignored it.

In Washington, the state department took strong exception to a Soviet protest implicating the U.S. government in what Moscow said are Zionist extremists demonstrations against Soviet representatives in the United States. The note implied that the Kremlin might provide less protection for Americans in the Soviet Union unless the incidents cease.

Robert J. McCloskey, state department press officer, said: "We are deeply concerned and shocked by the open threat of possible retaliation against American establishments in the Soviet Union."

He said acting Secretary U. Alexis Johnson rejected immediately the Soviet accusation that "U.S. authorities . . . continue to connive with these criminal actions." American policemen have been injured and have made many arrests while quelling demonstrations and disturbances at Soviet offices and diplomatic missions, McCloskey said.

McCloskey also reported that two American diplomats in Moscow had received threatening calls over their unlisted telephones, which he said indicated the callers had official sanction.

The Soviet mission to the United Nations filed an official protest charging "hostile acts of Zionist hooligans" and threatened to take its grievances to the American courts. It said police did nothing to stop attacks on the Soviet mission in New York Dec. 27-28.

Demonstrators have been protesting treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union in general and death sentences given two of the Leningrad defendants in particular. The sentences were commuted to terms in labor camps by the Russian Supreme Court.

In Jerusalem, the head of the Russian Orthodox Church in Israel refused to accept a petition protesting his country's treatment of Jews. About 100 Israelis prayed at the Wailing Wall, the Jews' holiest shrine, then marched to the residence of Archimandrite Hironym.

They asked him to send the petition to Premier Alexei Kosygin but he said he could not participate in politics.

An official of the Soviet embassy in Copenhagen told a group of Danes to take a similar petition with 10,000 names and "go to hell." The group said it would mail the petition to the Kremlin.

Prince Edward Warden Installed

PICTON (Staff) — Bloomfield Reeve Alan Anderson yesterday was elected Warden of Prince Edward County by fellow councillors during the inaugural session of county council held in Shire Hall.

Mr. Anderson, a veteran member of council, was escorted to the warden's chair by Bloomfield past wardens Harold Cleave and Arthur Moore.

A member of Bloomfield village council for several years, Mr. Anderson operates Picton Shoe Store.

In an address to council members and spectators, warden Anderson stressed Bloomfield's active role in county affairs when it existed as a part of Hallowell prior to its incorporation as a village in 1907. He noted that six wardens from Bloomfield village had served Prince Edward County in the past 64 years.

The new warden introduced his council for the coming term and invited them and all others present to attend the 100th anniversary services of Bloomfield United Church which will be conducted this year.

Mr. Anderson encouraged all councillors concerned with growth and development to work with Prince Edward's new industrial commissioner, William Duggan, in the months ahead.

He commented that his immediate concern is to see the old Anglican Church, purchased by council last year for development as a museum, brought closer to completion.

"The best is none too good for our senior citizens," remarked warden Anderson, referring to council's plan for a new county home for the aged.

He also touched on pollution, noting that local councils as well as higher levels of government frequently are criticized on this issue.

"Let's take a look at ourselves, our factories, our stores and our homes. What are we doing about pollution?"

"Let's set our house in order," he urged.

Mr. Anderson's remarks were followed by formal congratulations from Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox, who recalled that 20 years ago he had been escorted to the warden's chair.

Mr. Whitney predicted a prosperous year for Prince Edward County and supported the Canadian International Paper Co. Kraft Pulp Mill proposed for Hillier Township.

He voiced confidence in the experts employed by the Ontario Water Resources Commission and other government departments.

Warden Anderson also received good wishes from past wardens Harold Cleave, Arthur Moore and Fred Hobbs who served as county warden in 1925.

Former reeve of Picton Bernard Hepburn brought greetings from the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario.

Former Picton mayor, H. J. MacFarland, also attended yesterday's inaugural session of council to offer his congratulations to Prince Edward's new warden.

A reception at the Royal Hotel, with Mr. Anderson as host, followed the meeting.

Induction

Frank C. Murray, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, was officially inducted into his executive position by Mark Kellow, President of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce at the 105th Annual chamber meeting at the Sun Valley Motel yesterday.

Money Is Still Major Problem

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce is faced with financial difficulties resulting from a yearly deficit of $4,285, reported at the annual meeting held yesterday at the Sun Valley Motel.

Chamber president Frank Murray stated, however, that "we are confident that this problem will be solved within the next few months.

"It has been the subject of continuing study by your Board."..

Once again the problems of insufficient membership have placed the Chamber in a position requiring self-analysis.

"The past six months, in fact, has been a period of frequent examination and reassessment of the policies and functions of the Chamber of Commerce," asserted the president.

Not only did the chamber face the problems of a smaller than required membership, but financial sources have entered into the picture.

According to J. C. Pat Houston, manager and former president of the chamber, the "policy of city hall has been to reduce assistance to the C of C, making our position increasingly difficult."

He explained that in years gone by, the Industrial Commission and the chamber were a single organization, receiving grants from the city

"The real pinch started with the split," he stated.

However, the chamber has been in the red before, and because of the increasing services to the community, the gap between debit and credit has increased.

Mr. Houston explained that the tourist promotion provided this year was highly subsidized from chamber funds, "beyond city grants."

This year, "the city paid for the printing of the Belleville brochures, which didn't begin to pay for the total cost of tourist promotion."

Mr. Murray, who took over the controls of the chamber in May of last year, said that "we had hoped for a closer liaison between the chamber and the industrial commission and city hall.

"We were somewhat disappointed when invitations to the City Manager and the Industrial Commission to be honorary directors of the chamber were rejected."

At the next meeting of the directors, Jan. 11, the newly elected and continuing board members will plan their attack on the deficit.

Members yesterday were asked to indicate their preference for committee memberships. The seven committees are: membership, special projects, convention bureau, Belleville Booster committee, tourist promotion, community affairs and education.

Mayor-of-Week Program Expanded

Belleville's annual mayor-of-the-week program is expanding this year to include seven schools, all in the city area.

New this year to the scheme of civic participation are Albert College and Loyalist College, each of which will send one student to accompany Mayor J. Russell Scott on his official rounds.

The program has been sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club for some years as a means of acquainting students with civic politics and administration and of arousing interest in eventual participation.

Each school — Centennial, Quinte, Moira, BCI, Nicholson Catholic College, Albert and Loyalist — elects one representative student from a senior grade to take part in the mayor-of-the-week scheme each year.

During his or her week with the mayor the student attends all council and committee meetings, sits in on interviews and learns the functions of each city hall department.

Albert College will lead off on Jan. 11, when Anne Murdock of Iroquois Falls, a grade 12 student and president of the student council, will begin her stint at city hall.

A BCI student will follow the next week, says George Zegouras, chairman of the Rotary Club youth committee that co-ordinates the program.

OVERWEIGHT-Is it Too Late to Control Your Weight?

Recent research reported in January Reader's Digest indicates that overweight people may be that way simply because they ate too much as children. After maturity, it may be too late to control weight. This study shows that an adult who has been significantly overweight since childhood can keep his weight down only by incessant self-denial. The guilt and self-hatred associated with chronic failure to stay on a diet may be more psychologically damaging than the overweight is physically damaging. Read OVERWEIGHT? Belleville's Not for Birds This Winter

Contrary to reports, Belleville's population is falling.

Bird population that is.

Two of the district's most ubiquitous resident species — house sparrows and the starlings — have decreased dramatically in numbers.

The Quinte Field Naturalists, who recorded the decline in density during their annual bird count last Sunday, have no explanation for the drop-off.

Five parties of Field Naturalist members combed the Quinte district within a 30-mile circumference of City Hall to take the bird census. They counted 5,081 individual birds, a startling decline from the 14,259 individuals they counted in 1969.

The decline in house sparrow and starling populations was the main factor in this year's lower bird count.

The number of species wintering in the area has dropped too — to 32 from the 40 noted last year.

The Quinte census is part of the continent - wide Audubon Society census and will be tabulated in detail and recorded in the annual Audubon Christmas census list.

The naturalists noted some surprise appearances and unexpected absences this year.

Cardinals, not common in this area, turned up with a population of 16. Purple finch, pine grosbeak, common redpoll, pine siskin, American goldfinch and red crossbill were all absent from the list.

Six species of hawk were noted, the most common being the red tailed hawk with 36 counted, and the sparrow hawk with 9 observed.

The birds listed and their numbers are: black duck 2, common goldeneye 7, sharp shinned hawk 1, Cooper's hawk 3, red tailed hawk 36, rough legged hawk 6, marsh hawk 1, sparrow hawk 9, herring gull 19, mourning dove 2, great horned owl 1, hairy woodpecker 6, downy woodpecker 20, blue jay 75, common crow 1, black capped chickadee 144, white breasted nuthatch 13, winter wren 1, cedar waxwing 3, northern shrike 9, starling 2,621, house sparrow 1,553, red winged blackbird 12, common grackle 2, cardinal 16, evening grossbeak 95, slate colored junco 29, tree sparrow 321, white throated sparrow 6, song sparrow 10, Lapland longspur 15 and snow bunting 41.

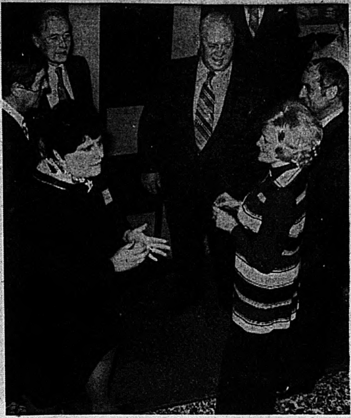
Jail Head Appointed

Appointment of a superintendent to the Quinte regional detention centre — now nearing completion at Napanee — was announced today by the department of correctional services.

In charge of the new centre will be Earl W. Martin, now superintendent of Kingston jail — a post he has held since 1948.

The Quinte detention centre will replace the four existing jails in Belleville, Kingston, Napanee and Picton and is the first centralized operation of its kind in Ontario.

It will house 104 prisoners in facilities equally divided between minimum and maximum security.



VIP Evening at Sales and Ad

Women's role in today's business world was discussed at last night's dinner meeting of the Women's Sales and Advertising Club of Belleville. Present for after-meeting discussions were Mrs. Jane McCaw, club president, Mayor J. Russell Scott, Frank C. Murray, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, Lee Grills, MP for Hastings, Mark Kellow, guest speaker and President of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Carolyn Emerson, club vice-president.

Doers' Responsibilities 'Horrendous' — Speaker

"The responsibilities confronting the doers in communities across our country are horrendous."

Mark Kellow, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, personnel and public relations manager of the Quaker Oats Company of Canada Ltd. in Peterborough, yesterday called upon Canadians to commit themselves for the future benefit of Canada.

Addressing first the 105th annual meeting of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon and the Women's Sales and Advertising Club of Belleville last night, Mr. Kellow went to great lengths to describe the frightening problems facing Canadians.

He stated that existing, seemingly unrelated problems, when observed jointly, become significantly linked.

Ecological activism, student power activities, racial movements, student political activities, civil rights movements, extremist violence, drug use and abuse, interest in the occult, religious revivalism, human potential movement, sexual liberation movements, hippie communes, sensitivity training, women's liberation (a ripple of laughter greeted this statement at the Women's Sales and Advertising Club meeting) and activist demonstrations, were all individually noted.

"It is no exaggeration to state that everything is subject to human interference or control, or choice.

"This expanded range of choice has given us the opportunity, as never before to relieve human suffering and to provide for human self-fulfillment."

He explained that, as part of their role in a changing Canada, the Ontario Chamber of Commerce "submitted a design for a course in economics at the Senior High School level at a recent meeting with the Department of Education, on an advisory basis.

He called upon Belleville residents not to think of their community as having boundaries on the shores of Lake Ontario, or at Highway 401.

"Your community is Canada."

Pensioner's Letter To Go to Ottawa

The rapid increase in the cost of living and how inflation is reducing the standard of living for thousands of pensioners is going to be brought to the attention of federal finance minister Edgar Benson through a letter from a Belleville man.

At city council this week a letter from H. Glynn-Jones, 35 Northwood Crescent, calling for relief of the pensioners' lot was included on the day's agenda.

Mr Jones in his letter said he had retired in 1962 with a company pension that at the time seemed adequate to support him and his wife at a reasonable standard of living.

But inflation plus the rising cost of living had eroded his pension.

"Like thousands more I was born too soon to participate in the Canada Pension Plan," he wrote.

As an indication of the position which persons on fixed pensions find themselves in, Mr. Young noted that federal statistics show the cost of living up 27 per cent in the past 10 years. But pensioners have no increase in wages to offset the rising costs.

Mr. Young said his municipal taxes had risen from $275 in 1960 to $516 in 1970. His paycheck deductions for PSI, hospital and Blue Cross amounted to $12.85 in 1960 while today the cost is $20.08.

He feels that pensioners should be relieved of the burden of paying education taxes and also says the basic income tax exemption should be greatly increased for pensions.

"What can your government do to protect the purchasing power of my income against inflation and higher taxes," Mr. Young asked.

Council members indicated that they were appreciative of the position in which pensioners found themselves but indicated council could not control the cost of living.

Council voted that Mr. Young's letter be forwarded to finance Minister Benson.

Books for Caribbean Shipped from Nicholson

Hundreds of stories were shipped from Nicholson Catholic College yesterday.

But the real story was in the shipment itself.

Its origins were seeded by Operation School Supplies — a standing project of the provincial education department that sends school books and equipment to developing West Indian regions.

Since 1966 used material donated to the project by schools and local school boards has been sent to Caribbean countries.

However, there still is a crucial need for books, the department announced in a recent pamphlet circulated in Ontario schools.

Hence a new project was organized — Books for Empty Shelves — and Nicholson was among schools responding to the request.

The need, says the department was not for textbooks. What's needed are volumes of pleasure reading — and as many as possible.

In recent weeks, Nicholson students — under the supervision of the college's sodality — have been collecting every category of book they could pry from the owners.

The result was a mini library — some 2,000 volumes of fiction, classics, paperbacks, story books and picture books.

Shipped to the department in Toronto they will eventually be flown to Caribbean destinations — a phase of the operation in which the armed services have helped out in the past. Supplies have been shipped out by airforce transports enroute to the West Indies.

Once arrived, the books are sorted according to age categories.

Youth Centre Is Now Court

BRIGHTON (Staff) — Provincial Court, proceedings were held here today in a new location — the village's youth recreation centre.

The Scotty Broughton Youth Centre is owned by the municipality and is administered by a community centre board comprising Mrs. Audrey Simpson, Robert Hanks and J. W. D. Broughton.

Formerly court sessions had been held in the basement of the 85 - year - old Brighton town hall. However, the judiciary, barristers and the police have expressed dissatisfaction with the facilities there.

To secure courtroom space, the Department of Public Works has signed an agreement with the village to lease the youth centre for one day a week. Village officials stress that youth recreational services in Brighton will not be hindered by judicial functions.

Seven servicing personnel, two military security guards, and a 13-member operational crew comprise the group of local servicemen aboard.

Vietnam Strategy

President Nixon rationalizes his contemporary strategy on Vietnam in such cut-and-dried, simplistic, terms. He told newsmen recently that if the North Vietnamese continued to infiltrate into the war zones and interfere with planned American troop withdrawals, the United States would then resume bombing of enemy concentrations and the routes they use.

In short, it is tit for tat — but, this is the unhappy fact — it is unlikely to have any great stratigic effect. Bombing has failed to halt the enemy in the past and there is no reason to suppose it will be of anything more than nuisance value now.

After a decade of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, the Communist enemy's military capability and economy appear to be as resilient as ever. True, the level of fighting has been scaled down, but CBC correspondent Michael Maclear (who recently talked with U.S. prisoners-of-war in Hanoi) confirms that the Communist side has carried out a massive repair program since the previous bombing and remains geared for a long war.

U.S. strategy meanwhile is to withdraw its troops gradually and leave the fighting to the South Vietnamese. The latter is a much more effective fighting force than it was in the early days, but is it strong enough to resist the Reds on its own?

That is the question hanging over the United States and other nations concerned about Communist designs in Asia. It is a question that may be answered with conviction only with the passage of time and events.

Trains and Places

Actress June Lockhart (the woman doctor in the now-defunct Petticoat Junction) evidently is a train buff, at a time when train travel has fallen upon hard times.

Describing the Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena, she said of a railroad motif: "Train travel, I am afraid, is a fast deteriorating mode of travel, but I travel on the Sky Chief to see my daughter at school in Flagstaff, and it is lots of fun. I enjoy sitting in the diner and so on."

Thus, we have another railroad fan, but many more are needed if train travel is going to survive on this continent.

And speaking of travel, and shades also of the Ontario government's recent advertising campaign, actor Richard Boone had some interesting observations recently on his work and on the kind of places in which he functions best.

Like many actors nowadays he has been making films overseas. This year he starred with Leslie Caron in a film produced in Israel, and as a result of this experience he is planning to produce films in that country. He says he has quit Hollywood for good (he is currently on location in a John Wayne film in Mexico) noting "I think there are so many places in the world that are more interesting to live . . . that give you a chance to work more productively."

To round off his cosmopolitanism, Boone now makes his home in Hawaii. "My son was 10 years old, we lived in the west part of Los Angeles — very nicely we lived too — but my son had never been to school with a Negro or a Mexican. And this is in Southern California. I felt I was not giving him a fair shake as far as education is concerned. In Hawaii he goes to school with every kind of kid that was ever born any place."

It is an attitude you would not find in many places, or among all one's fellow men. But Hawaii is a true melting pot of races, and one where racial antagonisms, happily, are rare if not non-existent. As for Hollywood, Boone said on one of his infrequent visits: "I see long, long faces. And as a place to live, the problems — smog, traffic, the race situation, education, motivating youngsters — all seem to be getting worse."

Money Orders

Canada's new style postal money orders are causing difficulties for firms handling them regularly.

The problem could be eased greatly, however, by public attention to the new system. The Intelligencer has been receiving money orders in various amounts, but the senders have failed to write in the firm's name and their own names in the spaces provided.

In some cases the senders have sent their own copy, clearly marked as such, instead of the money order itself.

Apart from this the new form is an improvement on the old, in that it bears the exact amount. Formerly one bought a money order in such-and-such an amount in round figures, then had to add stamps to complete the sum required.

P.M. Lee Hates Hippies, Dirt

Singapore—From Political Shrimp to King Crab

SINGAPORE (AP) — Lee Kuan Yew driven to tears when Singapore was cast out as "the smallest of shrimps in a sea of very hungry fish," has transformed his island city state into a well-fed king crab.

Under the tough-minded prime minister, not even the size of the island is the same—developers wrest chunks of land from the sea for more room.

At 47, Lee is stamped on to Singapore like the pattern on a Ming vase. He loathes dirt, so the city is spotless. He champions hard work, so now it bustles. He hates hippies, so hair is short.

His "Rugged Society," an extension of Lee's strait-laced personality, has given Singaporeans a rocketing standard of living and a new moral code to uphold.

This means devoted followers and vehement critics. Some call him an overbearing despot. Others credit him with vastly improving life for the island's two million inhabitants.

Few question Lee's hardmindedness and brain power. His friends say that's all he really wants.

Lee is Singapore, from the time he digests morning dispatches with two lightly boiled eggs and seven cups of Chinese tea until his post-midnight shuffle of the day's reports.

He returned from Cambridge University with two firsts in law and a star for distinction. He shot toward the top as a leftist labor leader. He had to study Chinese and Malay and drop his Anglicized name—Harry Lee.

His wife still calls him Harry, but Kuan Yew means "light that shines far and wide" and it's closer to his image.

He was prime minister, at 35, when Britain accorded self-rule in 1959. He pressed for union with Malaysia in 1963 and fought bitterly when suspicious Malay leaders cut Singapore loose two years later.

Lee, with tears, shouted: "We have a right to survive!" He drew his shrimps-fish analogy then as Singapore floundered alone, politically independent but economically in a bind.

British troops based here helped, but then Britain announced plans to withdraw forces from Asia. To diversify, Lee's government encouraged investors, industrialists and tourists. Now the booming economy will hardly miss the army wives' shillings.

Lee bought jet fighters and tanks, manned by a compulsory national service. His former federation-mates in Malaysia already are uneasy. Political analysts often remark that Lee needs a bigger stage to play on, but few seriously predict he'll ever try to do anything about it.

But Lee cuts a wide swath in other people's countries. He returned recently from a 12-week trip to five continents, including a United Nations appearance and the Lusaka non-aligned conference.

He promised Soviet leaders that Singapore would service their warships in peacetime. He saw people in Washington from the president to computer designers.

Next week he will be host to a meeting of Commonwealth prime ministers.

Lee's background gives him an unusual vantage point. His great-grandfather came from China and made a fortune as a shopkeeper. His son sent Kuan Yew to England for schooling to be "the equal of any Englishman."

Lee makes it clear he is no displaced Chinese, but he once kept a British official waiting with the remark: "He has 400 years of empire and my ancestors have 4,000 years of written, recorded history."

Similarly, he once said Americans lacked "a background, a history, a culture, cultivated and civilized." He views Americans as essential and says of Vietnam: "I think it is a very grim situation because the will to resist is largely imported, the capacity to resist is also largely imported. But what alternative is there for the time being"

America's role, he said, should be to "convince Asians that a non-Communist group of nations could survive, and can flourish as well as, if not more than, the Communist states in Asia."

Lee's own government is described as democratic socialism, with his People's Action party holding all 58 Parliament seats. Bright politicians like Foreign Minister S. Rajaratnam and Defence Minister Goh Keng Swee help out, each his own man despite Lee's stature.

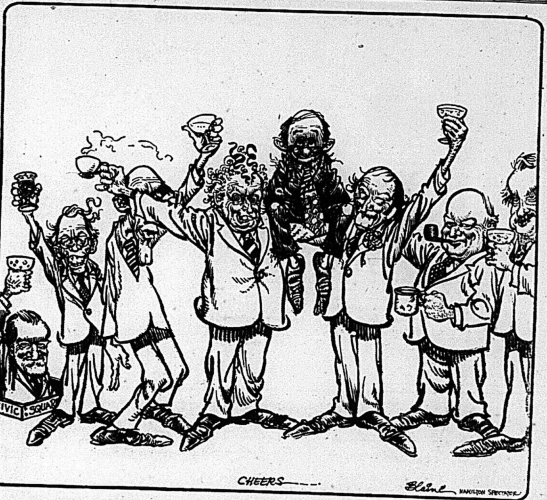
Lee lives simply, preferring to stay in the middle-class neighborhood where his family was reared. His official Jaguar takes him to the government residence for work, receptions and golf practice—his handicap is 12. He works in an open-neck shirt.

His wife, whom he met at Cambridge, runs the family law firm but makes no courtroom appearances. His mother teaches Chinese cooking. His father still sells jewelry in a store not far from Lee's office.

Friends aren't sure where Lee got his puritanical streak, but one takes credit for talking him out of smoking. Anyone blowing smoke his way risks his ire.

He drinks beer, but not enough to affect the health he worries about constantly. He pops pills of all shapes and colors.

Lee's abhorrence of hippies seems to stem from fear that what he calls the Western drug culture might hurt the Rugged Society He said after a visit to Berkeley Calif.: "I thought that if my son were there, looking like a few of the 27,000 students . . . I would take him by his long hair, get him a good crew-cut, put him in a hot steam bath and get him a thorough scrub-down"



Dr. Potter's Tour And Government in Ontario

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I agree with Dr. R. T. Potter that government is serious business. Most of us who suffer from its inadequacies from time to time are just as concerned.

That he finds it necessary to tour the province to impress this fact upon delegates who will be selecting a new leader of the Tory party is a sad commentary on the state of Conservative politics in Ontario.

He is right when he says "we are living in a new era" and suggests we must find a new approach to it. The intriguing thing, is how can the Tories have a new approach without completely changing their political philosophy? Hidebound with a tradition of big business backing and staunch support of the establishment image, it is hard to image anything new. They may wrap the package differently but the contents will be the same.

Having served a sentence of over 20 years under Tory administration many people in Ontario may well be looking for parole under a new government.

Some of the things people are tired of are, new roads leading to nowhere, medical schemes that grow more expensive by the day, grandiose reassessment plans calculated to make home owners poorer than ever, education schemes likely to bankrupt them, and industrial handovers to foreign interests.

If the opposition parties take notice of the disenchantment of the voters of the province and act accordingly, we just might be able to enjoy a few years whereby the average citizen could recuperate from the excesses of the Robarts government.

We can certainly do without political leaders who borrow money on the foreign market telling us the interest tag will be nine million dollars, only for us to find, in fact, it cost 20 million. But perhaps I am being unkind to Mr. Robarts. Some obviously benefited under his leadership. Insurance companies seemed to do very well, doctors and lawyers managed to stay off the welfare roles and big business, despite its wailing over the White paper on taxation, remained healthy.

In the realm of forgivable loans, the Americans did not fare too badly either — I find it hard to recall the Canadian companies that were blessed with the same provincial generosity.

Of course we must not overlook the addition of the reassessment regiment to the already overloaded army of civil servants, it provides jobs, costs lots of money too. I wonder if the provincial Tories would consent to releasing the figures of civil servants that got, and hold their present jobs by political patronage. It would be enlightening I'm sure.

I admire Dr. Potter for his concern but I doubt very much if his trip will serve to alter the status quo in any way at all. Looking over the ranks of the provincial cabinet it is fairly obvious they are all tarred with the same old Tory brush.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

More on Snowmobiles

Brockville Recorder and Times

In addition to the dangers inherent in running a snowmobile along a travelled road, there is also danger in taking to the fields. One man was nearly decapitated prior to Christmas when he ran under a barbed wire fence while travelling at high speed across a farm field. Other people have had eyes poked out on the sharp ends of limbs as they travelled through bushes or under trees.

The snowmobile obviously, can be a hazard to operators who aren't wary. They are not only a hazard to the highways and byways, but also to the motorist who has difficulty seeing them because of their low silhouette.

Uncertain terrain, dangerously high noise levels and control problems caused by the snow itself are only part of it. The size and vulnerability of snowmobiles are extra hazards. They add up to a vehicle as dangerous as it is fun, in the hands of a driver who's out for fun only . . . snowmobiles aren't for children; of any age.

Windsor Star

The major reason for the rising death rate associated with snowmobiling is the stupidity of the operators. The thought that the snowmobile is a toy and not a machine seems to predominate — aided by frivolous television advertisements.

For their part manufacturers must bear some degree of responsibility — this despite their genuine attempts to ensure their clientele are safety conscious. One area which needs closer scrutiny is the advertising campaigns which have projected the image of snowmobiling and its adherents.

The other is associated with safety itself. There is no reason whatsoever for a machine built primarily for recreational consumption to be capable of speeds up to 70 miles an hour. It merely increases the possibility of high speed accidents. Another improvement from a safety standpoint would be greatly improved lights for night use. At present the headlights are hardly adequate.

Focus on Welfare Reform

Ottawa Journal

The Government's white paper on social security is only that: a paper, not legislation, but a general statement of policy subject to the same pressures of public opinion and vagaries of Government priorities which have buffeted and, let us hope, influenced profoundly the proposals in the white paper on taxation.

No one should get breathless over any specific suggestions at this stage, or start spending any anticipated extra allowances.

The emphasis upon paying out money, be it for family allowances or old age pensions, according to need, is a welcome change from the system of universal allowances. The old argument, long favored by governments, of giving the same benefits to persons with high incomes as to those with low incomes now appears to have been simply so much nonsense! The administration costs might have been low but the white paper says flatly that universality is "a high-cost technique" and "an inefficient anti-poverty tool."

It has taken a long time for this to be admitted officially in Canada.

The basic answer to poverty is greater opportunity for people to work, not bigger handouts. The white paper pays only lip service to the need to stimulate economic activity and to provide more jobs.

The effect of the white paper's philosophy may be to discourage persons from providing for their old age through prudent saving during working years.

Not everyone is given to putting money away. But many can. By guaranteeing a married couple who show financial need no less than $255 a month in supplementary old-age benefits, those who did not provide for their future, for whatever reason, will find themselves at least as well off as those who scrimped and saved. Is it entirely quaint to ask what effect such a double standard will have on the national character?

Retail Milk Price Expected to Rise After Wholesale Boost

Local dairies today indicated they would adopt a "wait and see" policy with respect to any possible increase in the retail sale price of milk as the result of an increased wholesale price announced by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

The announcement of a 20 cent per cwt. increase in the price of fluid milk was made this morning at the annual meeting of the milk marketing board in Toronto.

Board officials at the same time announced plans for a further wholesale price increase in September.

Dairy officials in Belleville said today's increased price for fluid milk would undoubtedly have to be passed on to the customer.

"But we'll have to take a look at our own picture before making any decision," said the local manager of Brookside - Prices Dairy in Belleville. "We'll have to figure it out."

Armin Quickert, manager of Reid's Dairy had much the same comment.

"Undoubtedly there will have to be some adjustment (of the retail price,) of milk," he said

The last increase in the wholesale price of milk was in September 1968 when it went up 50 cents to $6.65 per hundredweight.

In London, Ont., a spokesman tor Borden Co. Ltd. said the wholesale increase would cost customers at least one cent a quart extra for bottled milk.

R. M Vinnington, regional manager for Brookside-Prices in Kingston, which operates a Belleville outlet, was not available for comment.

Since 1968 there has been considerable local juggling of milk prices including a seven cent decrease in the retail price of jug milk, along with a partial recovery.

Mr. Quickert said today that the present over - the - counter price for jug milk was still one cent below the 1968 figure.

In recent weeks, since the big grocery chains went on their discounting spree, milk has been one of the main items chosen for price cutting in Belleville.

Last week three-quart jugs of 2 per cent homo milk were retailing at supermarkets for as low as 67 cents.

At the same time the "regular" price of the same package was 79 cents at the dairies and at many of the smaller retail outlets.

Also at the same time, the price for bag "packaged" milk in some supermarkets was 89 cents for three quarts of homo and 86 for two per cent.

16 Charged in Laporte Case

preferred indictments which allows the Crown to bypass the preliminary hearing stage.

In another courtroom, ruling on bail applications of three men arrested under the War Measures Act was put off to Jan. 15. The Crown opposed the applications.

Lawyer Robert Lemieux, author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon are to stand trial in February on charges under the act.

First of the alleged kidnappers to appear was Lortie, 19, a student who wore a small goatee and was the quietest of the four.

Simard, a 23-year-old unemployed laborer, exclaimed "Ah, the FLQ," and wagged his fist when the charge of membership in an "illegal organization" was read.

"I plead nothing," he told Mr. Justice Paul Trepanier after hearing the charges in Court of Queen's Bench.

After staring at the ceiling and whistling through his teeth as the charges were read, Simard shouted "FLQ, vive le FLQ," as he left.

Jacques Rose, 23, a laborer, gazed around the courtroom, smiling, as the charges were read and shouted "Vive le FLQ" as he was led out.

Paul Rose, 27, a teacher, interrupted the court clerk during reading of the charge of advocating force or crime to change a government in Canada, shouting:

"In Quebec, not in Canada."

He also interrupted the clerk to tell him to "speak more clearly or don't speak at all."

Jacques Ducros, Crown prosecutor, said the four will be tried separately. This would enable the Crown to call them as witnesses against one another.

In the bail hearing under Mr. Justic Roger Ouimet of Court of Queen's Bench, the Crown said the charges against Lemieux, Vallieres and Gagnon, including seditious conspiracy and membership in the FLQ, are too serious to permit bail.

The Crown also contended that there was no guarantee that the men would appear for their February trials if released.

They were arrested Oct. 16, the day the War Measures Act was invoked to fight terrorism after the kidnappings of British diplomat James Cross Oct. 5 and Mr. Laporte Oct. 10.

Mr. Laporte was found dead Oct. 18 and Mr. Cross was released Dec. 4.

Lemieux, a lawyer who has defended several FLQ terrorists in court and who acted with lawyer Pothier Ferland on behalf of himself, Vallieres and Gagnon, told Mr. Justice Ouimet that granting bail "is not a decision that you will regret."

He said that while Vallieres and Gagnon have been convicted before, they have always appeared for their trials after getting bail.

He also said both Vallieres and Gagnon are sick.

Charged as accessories after the fact in the Laporte kidnap-murder were Francois Belisle, 19; his sister Francine, 22, a nurse; Richard Therrien, 20, and his sister Colette, 22, both students; Yves Roy; Robert Dupuis; Michel Viger, 30, an accountant; Claude Lariviere, 26, a researcher for a Quebec government commission investigating the status of the French language in Quebec; Louise Verreault, 20, and Denise Quesnel and her 18-year-old daughter Helene.

The charges of being accessories carry possible life sentences.

Francois Roux, 21, a film cameraman, was charged with obstructing justice on or about Nov. 7, a Criminal Code offence punishable by two years in prison.

Seven of the 11 charged as accessories were also charged under the Public Order Act with aiding members of an illegal organization and with seeking to prevent their arrest, trial and punishment.

Five of the 11 had already been charged in November with offences under the War Measures Act, offences punishable by five years in prison, or a $5,000 fine or both.

Christmas Eve Is Tonight

Most Christmas trees have found their last resting place on the city dump, but for a sizable group of Canadians the holiday season is just beginning.

They are members of the Catholic Churches of the Byzantine Rite, who celebrate Christmas according to the old Julian calendar on Jan. 7.

That makes tonight Christmas Eve for Canada's citizens of Romanian, Slovakian, Ukranian and Russian descent.

Robert Sozanski, a Belleville resident who belongs to the Ukranian Catholic church, says the few city people of his faith will have to go to Kingston or Toronto for the traditional midnight mass tonight.

Christmas day, according to the Julian calendar is Jan. 7, but for Ukranians the main celebration of the Nativity takes place Christmas Eve.

Parties of carollers visit from house to house and are invited in at each for food and "a small draft."

As more and more people join the carollers, the whole thing ends in a big party before mass.

A 12 - course meatless dinner is served. Not only is it meatless — it contains no animal products at all, which eliminated all dairy products.

The dinner is preceeded by a ceremonial dish of boiled whole wheat, symbolizing life, poppy seed, symbolizing death and honey, symbolizing God.

Before church the women of the household make up baskets of food which they take to church with them to be blessed by the priest. In this way, says Mr. Sozanski, the family begins Christmas day by eating blessed food.

Although few members of the Byzantine Rite live in this district, there is a large concentration in Toronto, where all the traditional ceremonies will be observed tonight by the congregations.

Soft-spoken Accountant Heads Western Canada Party

EDMONTON (CP) — Gerry Beck, who has announced the formation of the Western Canada Party, is a soft-spoken accountant who wants to give the West a loud voice in federal politics.

Even if the new party only elects a few representatives, he says it will ensure a greater voice for the West which has been "robbed by the federal government."

Mr. Beck announced the formation of the new party Monday. He is vice-president of it and one of the main organizers.

The party's headquarters are in Maple Ridge, B.C., home of its national secretary, Ernie Lemberg, but so far Mr. Beck has been the main spokesman. The party has an executive consisting of vice-presidents from each of the western provinces, plus the national secretary. They also have a 10-man board of directors.

A conservatively-dressed businessman of 35, Mr. Beck has been involved in politics for about two years and never with one of the major parties. He started a local chapter of the Voice of Western Canadians in early 1969 and when he heard of a similar organization in British Columbia, called the Western Parliament Advocates, he began corresponding with Mr. Lemberg.

The Western Canada Party wants to see all elected representatives from the West—not only from their own party—have a free vote in the House, he said in an interview. That way, it would be easier to see when a particular issue is strongly opposed or strongly endorsed by regional representatives, regardless of party.

"The only way a representative can be free now is to cross the floor of the House when he disagrees with his party."

Mr. Beck said that when his party begins campaigning, it may force many of the current party representatives to become independent.

"We will go to election campaigns and confront the other parties and ask if they are going to speak out or going to further the party line.

Mr. Beck believes that people are becoming more certain that they want their representatives to speak out in Ottawa. If the candidates won't agree to speak out, he believes the people will support the Western Canada Party—and if the candidates do agree, then part of the party's aim will have been achieved, he says.

Stirling IOOF Sponsors A Family Fun Night

STIRLING — On Wednesday evening, the Stirling IOOF No. 239 sponsored a family fun night at the Oddfellows' Temple. The members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge and their families were also invited. At 8 p.m. three films were shown, one of which was about a motor trip from Nova Scotia to British Columbia. The group enjoyed a series of games, carols, bingo, cribbage and croquinole. A buffet luncheon followed in the lodge banquet hall with several members in charge.

Prizes were awarded for euchre to Mr. and Mrs. Don Walker and Mr. and Mrs. George Haggerty. For the special award Mrs. Ernest Broadworth held the lucky ticket which was drawn by Stewart Bronson.

Following the luncheon the orchestra consisting of Norman Rosebush, Kenneth Morrow and Mrs. Philip Conley provided music for dancing. Jim McDonnell called the squares.

Claims Credit Is A Way Of Life

REGINA (CP) — Credit is a way of life and if people haven't learned how to handle it they're in trouble, says Earl Beattie, manager of Saskatoon Avco Finance and Service Co.

Mr. Beattie was speaking to members of the Regina Local Action Committee, a group of credit grantors who give talks on credit at schools, service club meetings and other gatherings.

"Our purpose is to educate the public about credit matters, such as budgeting money and using credit wisely," he said.

W. C. Jennings, director of Canadian Acceptance Corp., described the group as "a kind of public relations and educational project."

There has been much legislation recently to protect the consumer, but we feel that education about the use of credit is a better way. There is a lack of understanding about credit and our purpose is to fill that gap."

The Experts Say

New Publication Provides Information

TORONTO (CP) — If you want to rent an airplane, install a burglar alarm, get advice on bird feeders, hire a house sitter or buy a custom-made pillow, there is a book that will tell you where to go in Toronto to do it.

The book has been produced by the junior women's committee of the Art Gallery of Ontario as a fund-raising project.

It is called What the Yellow Pages Can't Tell You About Shopping in Toronto. Under categories such as food, flowers, clothing, gifts, it lists and describes stores and services that committee members found good, hard to find, useful, interesting.

It tells you where to get chipped crystal or marble tables repaired, baby carriages mended, where the high-style second-hand stores are. It lists antique stores, where to buy pine reproductions, where to go for a head to toe beauty treatment.

The idea was first considered two years ago at the committee's future planning sub-committee. Actual work began on it about nine months ago, says the book's public relations chairman, Mrs. D. C. McIntyre.

The entire 35-member junior women's committee fanned out across the city looking for places to include.

"We each had a section of the city to cover, and we went upstairs, downstairs, searching out these places.

"We asked about delivery, about telephone service, whether there was anything interesting about the proprietor. In a toy store that specializes in educational toys, I found that the owner has primary school teacher's specialist training.

"We eliminated any estimate of cost ranges because what might rate as expensive for me might not for someone else."

Each of the women wrote a report on each store or service she found that she thought might qualify. The reports were sifted and compared, the likeliest places chosen, and then rechecked.

"Someone went to all the food shops and bought something in each one. She had bunches and bunches of grapes and ate some of them all. A very fashionable woman, someone who really knows style, checked the boutiques."

When the final galley proofs were in, someone called each business again to check the phone number and check the information.

Long before that someone had also phoned to get permission to use the "Yellow Pages' in the title.

The committee began with a $5,000 bank loan. They intend to have a first printing of 5,000 books to sell for $2 each.

They will sell the book through the art gallery, possibly through some of the businesses listed in it and possibly in co-operation with one of the Toronto newspapers, through its outlets.

Profits will go to the art gallery. Mrs. McIntyre says the junior committee is primarily concerned with public relations, working with school children, organizing men's lunches. They do hold a ball as a fund raising project, and the book will be another one.

"The junior committee members are all under 35 years old. When they leave it's so sad, because then everybody knows."

A Hearty Winter's Meal

A steaming bowl of Chicken Gumbo is going to raise your rating as a good cook and provider. Make this main course soup according to Mary Moore's recipe today.

Kitchen Tested Recipies

Chicken Gumbo Soup Is A Nice Change of Pace

By MARY MOORE

A chicken soup that is different and a main course seems to me to be eminently suitable to the weather, the budget and the appetite.

I have managed to find a package of fresh frozen okra so that this could be called a valid gumbo. If you cannot find fresh frozen okra in your area substitute cut up green beans.

CHICKEN GUMBO
(About 2½ qts.)

One 3½-lb. chicken
8 cups water
½ bay leaf
1 tsp. salt (first amount)
1 carrot diced
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup tiny elbow macaroni
1 chicken Bouillon cube or 2 tsps. chicken granules
1 cup canned tomatoes
1 cup sliced fresh frozen okra (or if unavailable substitute cut green beans)
1 tsp. salt (second amount)

Put chicken into soup kettle and add water, bay leaf and first amount of salt. Cover and simmer 3 hrs., turning chicken over once. Lift chicken to utility tray and while hot with large fork and spoon separate meat from bones and skin. Discard skin and all bones including those little rib tip bits. Strain and chill broth. Chop chicken meat. You will be able to discover any little bones still lurking in the meat as you chop. Add chopped chicken to skimmed broth. I had three cups chicken meat and 7 cups broth. Put on to cook with carrot, celery, tiny elbow macaroni and chicken bouillon cube (or granules) until carrots are tender. Now add tomatoes, okra (or beans) and second amount of salt and simmer until okra is tender — about 20 min.

Serve as a main course with garlic French bread or Honey Nut Muffins (see Tuesday — yesterday).

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Chilled Cranberry Juice; Roast Shoulder of Pork; Apple Chutney; Sweet Potatoes; Creamed Green and Yellow Beans; Lemon Snow with Custard Sauce; Tea.

Ann Landers

Parents Embarrassed By Child's Accident

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter is four years old. While visiting with friends yesterday something occurred. Our little girl had been seated on a lovely upholstered chair. Somehow, when we got up to leave, it was obvious that she had wet clear through.

We apologized profusely. The host and hostess were most gracious. Offers of restitution were refused. What should we do to compensate them for their loss and inconvenience? We would like to buy them a new chair but my husband says it would be out of line. We both would very much appreciate some word from you. Thanks in advance. — REDLANDS, CALIF.

DEAR RED: By this time your friends probably have had the chair cleaned professionally or they have washed the upholstery with a bicarbonate of soda solution. Take a good look the next time you visit. If the chair appears to be damaged, insist that they have it reupholstered and send the bill to you. Another suggestion: From now on., put rubber pants on the kid when you go visiting — just in case.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married a man 14 years my senior because he said he loved me more than anything in the world. He proved it by leaving his wife and three childen to marry me. It also meant leaving his church. I thought any man who would do all that must be sincere.

We have been married less than a year and for the past seven weekends I have been alone. My husband goes over to his ex-wife's home every Friday evening for dinner. Sometimes he spends the night there. If he comes home in the morning he runs back at noon and stays through dinner. Last weekend he stayed overnight both Friday and Saturday. When I told him I was getting fed up, he said, "Find a hobby. My kids need me and I'm not going to let them down."

My husband's parents like his first wife better than they like me. I'm sure they have been encouraging him to go back to his first family. What can I do? All the cards seem to be stacked against me and I'm afraid I'm losing out. — EL.

DEAR EL: You might as well throw in the deck, honey. The ex-wife is holding the winning hand. Sorry.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in behalf of the dogs and cats of America.

Please tell people who have no feelings for animals to do themselves (and the animals) a favor and stop putting on an act for friends and neighbors. Some people believe a dog or a cat will make the house seem more "homey." Pets are frequently used as props for family photographs and Christmas cards.

Inform the reading public, Miss Landers, that folks who do not genuinely love animals should take them to the nearest Humane Society. Too many people don't know that the Humane Society is for all pets not just strays. In some states there is a modest charge for leaving these unfortunate creatures. In Michigan it is free. — B. H. M.

DEAR B. H.: Hooray for Michigan and thanks for the information.

Successful Living

It Helps If You Share Ideas, Feelings

By DORIS CLARK

We are making progress. Some of us now recognize that it helps people if they can share ideas and find out more about themselves by talking to other people.

To this end, we hear about workshops on "communication in social and interpersonal relations" and other such fancy titles, which really make sense when you get down to them. When a group of married or single people participate in a workshop, they let their hair down (even more abundantly than the present styles call for).

In such an atmosphere, they lossen up, find out what other people are thinking and learn to accept themselves and others as fallible, yet honest and open human beings.

According to one psychologist, "The individual is more likely to be positively stimulated when in the company of others than when he is alone." If you feel a need for stimulation, how about sounding out resources where you are for some talk sessions about things that matter to you —

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I was interested to read some comments on children in your column. My two youngest boys aged five and six years fit into this category.

They have both been tested by psychologists and have slight visual perception disabilities. I am working all the time with them, constantly devising new games, activities, etc., too numerous to go into now.

These children are so eager to learn and we are all enjoying our 'school work", as they call it, so much. The two participate, and what could have become a frustration is fun and a daily sense of accomplishment.

A whole new world has been opened to me and I am eager for any and all information available.

I enclose 20 cents for your leaflet "Children With Learning Disabilities." — We Are Overcoming

Dear Overcoming: Good for you! The leaflet is the result of innumerable letters and research with the experts in visual and perceptual difficulties of all kinds. I hope it will add materially to your resources for helping those eager kids.

Some Committed, Despite Potter's Plea

PC Riding Associations Choose Their Delegates This Week

By LILLIAN NEWBERY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Progressive Conservative riding associations will choose this week the delegates who will elect a leader to succeed Premier John Robarts at a convention in Toronto Feb. 10-21,

A Canadian Press survey of 10 key ridings shows that some will expect their 10 delegates to vote as a bloc, at least for the first ballot, while others will leave the choice up to individuals.

Dr. Richard Potter, member of the legislature for Quinte, has been visiting the associations, urging them not to commit themselves hastily to any candidate.

He says they should be aware of the issues before they give support.

As one would expect, ridings whose elected member is in the running will back him with all 10 votes. Thus Chatham-Kent will back Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs, while Carleton East will give its 10 to Bert Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, riding officials said Tuesday.

Education Minister William Davis was the first candidate into the field and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence was expected to declare his candidacy today.

The mines minister is expected to have heavy backing from Northern Ontario. This year he took on the extra responsibilities of minister of northern affairs.

"He's made at least 18 trips to the north since," said Lorne Colpitts, president of the Fort William Riding. "I don't know as we've ever had a minister paying as much attention to us."

However Mr. Colpitts said Allan Lawrence should not assume he has got the northern votes sewed up. "We don't like anybody taking us for granted."

Mr. Colpitts said the Northwestern-Dryden district association will discuss at Fort Frances this week a motion to throw support behind Leo Bernier, member for Kenora.

Sydney Handleman, president of the Carleton association which will choose delegates Thursday, said members in that riding have never voted as a bloc.

"There's going to be some sympathy for Bert Lawrence as a local fellow but we haven't committed our vote."

John Rixson of Grey South riding, where delegates will be chosen this afternoon at a legion hall, said the meeting was open to all members, the executive was formally notified and "word was passed around."

Grey South has never voted as a bloc, he said. However some delegates will ask their member Eric Winkler for "guidance" and Mr. Winkler is "extremely friendly" with Mr. Davis.

In Premier Robarts' London North riding, president D. S. Rudd said delegates voted for five different candidates in the federal leadership convention of 1967, and he expects a similar division this time.

Mr. Rudd emphasized that delegates will be elected at a general meeting and the executive will not necessarily be among them. "Nobody is a shoe-in."

Arthur Code of Durham riding said he was not in favor of Durham delegates voting as a group because "90 per cent of them never had personal contact with the candidates."

Arthur Antoine, president of Stormont riding, said delegates will be chosen Jan. 11—the deadline for names to be sent to party headquarters in Toronto.

"I presume it will be most of the executive but it will be decided in a democratic way," he said.

Before the meeting, the executive will meet with their member, Fern Guindon, minister without portfolio, and it would be "only natural to ask him for guidance."

Asked if Stormont's 10 will vote as a bloc, Mr. Antoine said: "I hope that's the way we will."

Roger Inglis, head of the Hamilton West Association, said their member, Ada Pritchard, will be asked her opinion.

"If I were a member I'd like to be able to deliver a group of votes, otherwise it weakens her position," he said.

Mr. Inglis said there is "a lot of interest in Bob Welch" while some of the membership leans toward Mr. Davis. Mrs. Pritchard is known to support Mr. Davis.

If Mr. Welch enters the race, St. Catharines riding will support him. Otherwise, says association president W. Stuart Ellis, delegates will decide individually after hearing the candidates' views when they visit the riding.

Discovered Dead

Liston a Fighter Since His Birth

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Charles (Sonny) Liston, former world heavyweight boxing champion, was found dead by his wife in their luxurious desert home Tuesday night. Authorities said he may have been dead a week.

Geraldine Liston found her 38-year-old husband's body lying across a cushioned bench and their bed in the master bedroom of their $60,000 home, Clark County sheriff's deputies said.

Lieut. Bud Gregg said today there was no suspicion of foul play. An autopsy was ordered to determine the cause of death.

Liston's ring career spanned the years 1953-1970. Once considered the strongest of all heavyweights, he won boxing's most cherished crown with a stunning first-round knockout of Floyd Patterson in Chicago Sept. 25, 1962.

Liston defended his title twice. He knocked out Patterson in another one-round victory and then lost the crown in a seven-round defeat by Cassius Clay, now known as Muhammad Ali, Feb. 25, 1964.

Gregg said Liston apparently was undressing to go to bed when he flopped straight back with such force that a rail of the bench was broken. He was wearing shorts and a T—shirt.

Gregg said other clothes were found nearby and that an unfired pistol in a holster was on the dresser in the upstairs bedroom. A fingernail file was on the bed under Liston's 6-foot-1 body.

The split-level home in the Paradise Valley residential area two miles east of the Las Vegas Strip has a swimming pool and is next to a golf course.

Gregg said Mrs. Liston found the body between 8:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. after she had returned from St Louis, where she was visiting her mother. Gregg said Mrs. Liston left las Vegas Dec. 26, and after she was not able to reach her husband by telephone, returned home.

SONNY LISTON

The television set in the bedroom was still on.

Liston was in an automobile accident U.S. Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 23, in Las Vegas, was taken to hospital for chest injuries and facial cuts, was released, but later was readmitted to hospital when he complained of the chest injuries.

At the time he said: "I took a pretty good cut on my forehead —it took maybe 15 to 20 stitches. They thought I would have to have plastic surgery but now they don't think so. I crushed the steering wheel when I hit and I have some chest pains."

In losing to Clay, Liston fought a listless six rounds, then saw his title slip away when he failed to answer the bell for the start of the seventh round. He claimed he suffered an arm injury.

He was blasted to the deck by Clay's mysterious "phantom punch" in Lewiston, Me., May 25, 1965, in a rematch. Some thought it was the punch that ended Liston's career but he launched a comeback in 1966, and at his death had a record of 48-4.

Liston, 38, was almost constantly in the news, either because of his stunning ring exploits that included 36 knockouts or because of his frequent run-ins with the law.

"I have been in the limelight two ways—good and bad," he once said. "Ever since I was born I've been fighting for my life."

Liston fought once in 1970, stopping Chuck Wepner on a ninth-round technical knockout in Jersey City, N.J., on June 29.

Hockey Air Not Cleared

LONDON (CP) — Nothing that would affect Canada's controversial position in international amateur hockey developed Tuesday night at a meeting of an eligibility committee of the International Olympic Committee.

Best information after the Tuesday meeting was that it did not come to grips with the question of Canada wanting to use pros or reinstated pros in international competition. It apparently was not even mentioned.

So the situation seems to remain the same with Canada: the International Ice Hockey Federation would let it play some pros, but IOC President Avery Brundage has scared them off by threatening Olympic disbarment of any hockey team playing against one tainted with professionalism.

John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, head of the IIHF, said after the Tuesday night meeting that Canada is definitely out of the 1971 IIHF tournament—no news to Canadians—and "probably" could be out of the 1972 Olympics in hockey.

Bunny apparently meant that, if one or another of the 16 qualifiers for 1972 fell out, Canada could move in by fielding a simon-pure team and dropping into a low class.

Lord Killanin, an IOC vice-president and member of the eligibility group meeting here, told a reporter that "we are asking ourselves whether we should alter the rules a little, not to open them, but to try to find a common denominator."

The loquacious Bunny, in a three-way interview, chimed in:

"We're trying to decide, will the payment of a certain amount of money disqualify a person from the (Olympic) Games.

'BUNNY' AHEARNE

"My proposal, put before the meeting, is that there should be a limited payment allowed."

Lord Killanin, asked about this, said:

"I would say it's unlikely."

He sugrested a way of beating commercialism by individuals in the Olympic Games.

His plan is for national associations to sign contracts with manufacturers of equipment, such as running shoes, with revenue going to the associations and not to the athletes themselves.

Blanks North Stars

Every Day Plante's Birthday

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Jacques Plante won't be 42 until Jan. 17, but the way he has been playing recently every day's a birthday for Toronto Maple Leafs.

The 16-year veteran of National Hockey League wars blanked Minnesota North Stars 2-0 in the only Tuesday night game, lifting the Leafs within five points of third-place Montreal Canadiens in the East Division.

It was Toronto's 11th win in 12 starts, the lone blemish being a 6-3 setback at Bloomington, Minn., to the North Stars Christmas Day.

During that span, Plante and Bruce Gamble have shared five shutouts, allowing only 15 goals while the surprising Leafs have struck for 57.

But there's little doubt when he's on the ice, Plante is the leader—shouting instructions, rebuking errant defencemen, clearing and even passsing puck up the ice to team-mates in the clear, checking opposition skaters who come within reach of his stick.

Tuesday night's game at Bloomington, which reversed the Christmas Day setback, was just such a night for the Shawinigan, Que., native as he did everything except score in his efforts to keep his team-mates aroused in an otherwise lack-lustre game.

Rookie Billy MacMillan's first-period goal proved the winner, and Plante closed the door, turning aside 29 Minnesota shots while another NHL veteran, Gump Worsley, also turned in a superlative effort in the North Stars goal.

JACQUES PLANTE

The same two clubs go at it again tonight in Toronto.

In other games, Vancouver Canucks visit Montreal Canadiens, Los Angeles Kings are at Chicago Black Hawks, California Golden Seals entertain St. Louis Blues and Pittsburgh Penguins are in Philadelphia against the Flyers.

Toronto coach John McLellan had some personal ideas about why the lethargic Leafs who opened the season are so hep on winning of late.

He traces it back to their 7-2 loss to Punch Imlach's Buffalo Sabres Nov. 18 in Maple Leaf Gardens.

"From then we started to realize that nobody feels sorry for you in this game," the amiable Toronto coach said after the Minnesota game. "And you can't feel sorry for yourself.

"You just have to work yourself out of a slump."

McLellan, in his second year behind the Leaf bench after replacing Imlach, said the Leafs had cause to want Tuesday night's victory.

"We had beaten them (Minnesota) only once this year. That was an exhibition game. So we need to make this up by winning the back-to-back games."

Leafs have proved they like to get revenge. Ask Imlach, whose Sabres have been beaten 2-0 and 4-2 since their successful Gardens debut.

Campbell Lowers Boom For $7,000 in Fines

MONTREAL (CP)—Centre Walt McKechnie of Minnesota North Stars learned Tuesday that it does not pay to argue with National Hockey League referees.

McKechnie was tagged with a $250 fine by NHL president Clarence Campbell for an incident in which he attempted to accost referee Bryan Lewis in a New Year's Eve game in Pittsburgh.

But McKechnie was not the only player to receive bad news from Campbell. Players on four NHL teams were fined a total of $7,000 for leaving their benches to join ice brawls.

Just before Christmas, Campbell assessed a total of $15,850 in fines for similar incidents.

The McKechnie incident started when Lewis handed him an elbowing penalty. The Minnesota player argued the point and was then slapped with a misconduct penalty for using abusive language.

Campbell said that the player then went out of his way to obstruct Lewis while the latter was returning to his position and then received a game misconduct.

The misconduct cost the Minnesota player $50 while the game misconduct was $200. Normally the fine for a game misconduct is $100 but Campbell felt that the regular fine was inadequate in McKechnie's case and therefore added the extra $100 penalty.

The first of the bench-clearing incidents occurred in a Toronto Maple Leafs-Philadelphia Flyers game at Maple Leaf Gardens Dec. 26.

Fourteen Philadelphia players each paid the automatic $100 fine for leaving their bench to join the melee and 12 Leaf players paid $200 each, because it was the second such occurence involving Toronto players in less than three weeks.

In addition, Flyers goal tender Bernard Parent was assessed $100 for leaving his crease to take part in the activities.

The Toronto melee broke out with less than two minutes remaining in the game as Brian Spencer of the Leafs and Bob Kelly of the Flyers were moving towards their respective benches for a routine player change before a faceoff.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

The pair collided and began fighting almost immediately.

After the combatants were separated, Spencer punched another Flyers' player and the brawl restarted.

For their parts in the Boxing Day activities, Spencer received two majors and a misconduct and Kelly was tagged with a major penalty. Both players were reported to Campbell by referee John Ashley.

Spencer received a $100 fine for his failure to go to the penalty box plus the $50 assessed with his misconduct. Kelly was rapped with a $100 fine for failing to go to the penalty box when ordered.

The second brawl took place in New York the next night in a Ranger-St. Louis Blues contest.

Campbell fined 13 Rangers and 13 Blues $100 each for leaving their players' bench to join the fracas which was precipitated by a scrap between Bob Plager of the Blues and Ted Irvine of New York.

The fight was broken up by the officials and the feuding pair, joined by Bill Plager, who had been given a 10-minute misconduct sentence, took their places in the penalty box.

Then Barclay Plager skated by and shouted some remarks at Irvine who indicated he was ready to leave the penalty bench, although he did not.

Both players benches then emptied although not a punch was thrown. Bill Plager left the penalty box to join the milling about. He was fined $150 for leaving the box and team-mate Billy Sutherland was hit for two $100 incidents, when it was discovered he had left his bench to enter a fight for the second time during the same period.

The fines will be deducted from the players' salaries and remitted to the NHL's Players' Emergency Fund.

Police Justified In Spencer Death

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Police were justified in engaging in a gun battle that killed the father of NHL player Brian Spencer, a coroner's jury ruled Tuesday night in this central British Columbia city.

It returned a no-blame-attached verdict in the death Dec. 12 of Roy Edward Spencer, 59, of Fort St. James, B.C., shot down in front of television station CKPG after he had forced the station off the air at gunpoint.

The senior Spencer had driven the nearly 100 miles from his home community to protest that the station was not televising a game in which his son, forward Brian Spencer, 21, was playing with Toronto Maple Leafs.

"We believe the RCMP officers had reasonable and probable grounds to return fire to protect themselves as well as the protection of others," the jurors said in their verdict.

The inquest was told that of the shots fired by Spencer—three in all—one struck RCMP Constable Dave Pidruchny in the foot and another hit the holster of Cpl. Roger Post.

Spencer, a gravel pit operator tremendously proud of his son's rise to big-league hockey, was alive at the scene but was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

Pathologist Dr. Vernon Fraser testified that Spencer was hit once in the left shoulder, once in the right armpit—a shot puncturing the lung—and once in the mouth.

Dr. Fraser testified that either the shot in the right arm or the mouth could have been fatal.

He said Spencer had a blood-alcohol reading of .05 per cent, under the generally accepted limit of impairment.

Spencer's widow testified that she last saw her husband at 5 a.m. before he drove off to Prince George on the day of his death.

Spencer, the inquiry was told, ordered the station off the air shortly after 7 p.m.

Cpl. Post testified that he was on duty with a fellow officer when they received a radio call that there was an armed man at a radio station.

They did not know which radio station but since they were only three blocks away from CKPG, they went to its parking lot.

Other police testimony was that it was Spencer who opened fire; that he was found with a pistol which had six live rounds in it and that it was cocked to fire. It was a weapon that holds nine rounds.

Cpl. Gordon Anderson testified that an examination of Spencer's car the day following the shooting uncovered ammunition, a rifle magazine and a .303 rifle. Also in the car were hunting knives and a 40-ounce bottle of wine, three-quarters full.

NHL Schedule Changed To Accommodate U.S. Network

TORONTO (CP) — Changes in the National Hockey League schedule to accommodate United States television were announced Tuesday.

Don Ruck, NHL vice-president, said in a telephone interview the changes came about because Columbia Broadcasting System could not decide before the season started which games it would carry during its schedule of 13 Sunday afternoon games starting Jan. 10

As a result, Philadelphia Flyers will be host to Pittsburgh Penguins tonight instead of next Sunday, when the Flyers will play the Canadiens in Montreal to open CBS's game of the week schedule.

The Flyers and Canadiens were to meet at Montreal Jan. 12.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings were originally scheduled to meet at Detroit in the CBS opener Sunday, but Ruck said early drafts of the 13-game format (there were between 15 and 30 drafts before the current one was selected) had an overdose of Toronto games.

Ruck said one of the drafts had Toronto playing in six of the televised games.

With the Montreal-Philadelphia game set for 1:30 p.m. EST, Canadiens general manager Sam Pollock has also approved a change in moving their Saturday night home game to Saturday afternoon to allow the players a longer period of rest.

"What happened is that the NHL schedule was printed before we completed our television plans," said Ruck. "Because of printing problems, one of the early drafts went to the NHL office in Montreal and was used in the NHL schedule.

"Naturally, a few changes were made afterward, the same as any other year."

Ruck stressed that there was nothing wrong in having the Leafs exposed to the whole of the United States. He said CBS and the NHL were thinking of the difficulty for players playing Sunday afternoon games, with extensive travel and little sleep in between, "not the fact that it was the Leafs."

Under the present schedule, Leafs appear three times, twice against Boston Bruins.

Ruck said he knew of no other changes planned for the 1970-71 season.

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Dennis Shaw of Buffalo Bills was named offensive rookie of the year in the National Football League Tuesday by The Associated Press. Shaw, who completed 55.5 per cent of his passes for 2,507 yards, edged Dallas Cowboys' running back, Duane Thomas.

LONDON (AP) — A racing driver involved in a flaming crash gets fewer than 30 seconds to get out of his wrecked car and escape serious burns.

A report issued Tuesday says even the best possible fireproof clothing will not guarantee protection.

The report is by the Jim Clark Foundation, a charitable trust formed in memory of Scotland's former world champion driver, killed in a race at Hockenheim, West Germany, in April, 1968.

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — The Canadian Professional Boxing Federation's rating committee has recommended that welterweight champion Donato Paduano of Montreal defend his title against leading contender Clyde Gray of Toronto.

Committee chairman R. B. Pearson said Tuesday an offer of $6,000 for Paduano is on record for him to defend against Gray in Toronto Feb. 1 Pearson said he has been advised that Paduano will make it a title defence in February but presumably in Montreal, "where he can get a better offer."

MONTREAL (CP)—Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes, 1970 Canadian Football League champions, is bringing another sports attraction to this city.

The Ottawa lawyer announced Tuesday night he will run a North American Soccer League franchise in 1971 and that the team will operate from the 33,000-seat Autostade, which he currently rents from the federal government for his Alouettes.

Last year, the NASL operated with teams in Atlanta, Dallas, Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis, Washington and Rochester, N.Y. Toronto and New York have already announced their intentions of 1971 entry.

Snowmobile racer Mary O'Neill makes sure that things are in running order for the Kawartha Cup Internationals in Peterborough this weekend. The Quinte contestant will be one of more than 1,000 from Canada and the United States vying for the $25,000 prize money which makes the event one of the major races on the continent. Factory teams from all of the major snowmobile manufacturers will be on hand for the competition.

Snowmobiles Try to 'Skin the Cat'

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

This is the Year of the Cat, or so claims a leading snowmobile manufacturer in a national campaign.

Quinte area rider Mary O'Neill, who trades horses for horsepower in the winter months is hoping that the slogan will prove to be more than an advertising executive's pipe dream when she competes in the Kawartha Cup International races this weekend.

A veteran campaigner in horse shows across the province Mrs. O'Neill has been riding snowmobiles only a year. "It started out to be just a family machine", she says of her first Arctic Cat model, "but I just had to give racing a try." "Maybe after this weeeknd I'll wish that I hadn't," she adds with a smile.

Certainly up until this point there has been little reason for remorse at taking up the country's fastest growing winter pastime. In nine races last year at places such as Picton, Tweed, Bancroft, Denbigh and Centreville she came away with a total of nine wins.

This year she has made a successful jump into the major race circuit.

Competing at Bradford, Ontario, two weeks ago Mary managed to pick up first, second and third place finishes, along with the first spill of her racing career. "I wasn't using skates (metal guides on the ski edges) and I went off a corner", she says of the mishap.

Last weekend at Mosport she placed second in one race, but was plagued by mechanical failure in her other class. "I don't think that the Mosport track is as difficult to ride on as an oval one", claims the Northern Electric employee, "It's almost like sitting in a big easy chair."

There won't be anything easy about this weekend's Kawartha Cup competition with over 1,000 entries on hand for the $25,000 in prize money.

Factory teams entered include Alouette, Arctic Cat, Rupp (defending team champions), Polaris, Ski-Doo (Barrie and Valcourt Quebec teams), Chaparral from Colorado and a number of others, including two Arctic Cat factory teams from Minnesota and Peterborough.

The Quinte contestant is entered in all three womens stock classes with machines of 295, 340 and 399 cc's. She feels that her best chance will be in the 340 class since the factory mechanics have the big machines in the best possible running order. She hasn't had time to become familiar with the 295 model supplied by a local dealer.

Among the favorites for top prize of $700 and the Molson's Womens International Trophy will be defending champion Helen Clarke of Barrie, whom Mrs. O'Neill has beaten three times in six meetings this winter.

Her first race will be 10 a.m. Saturday morning at the Morrow Park Raceway in Peterborough.

Mary O'Neill gets her Arctic Cat airborne in a trial run before the Kawartha Cup Internationals.

Golfers Show Faith In New Course Owner

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Earl Johnson has a trusting face.

That could account for the reason his new Belleville Golf and Country Club has attracted 60 paid - up members before it has even been open-ready in time?

Work began on the 6,200-yard layout on Highway 2 this side of Marysville last spring and greens were being cut before the first snowfall.

Next week, Johnson hopes to begin construction of a 62 x 26 - foot knotty pine clubhouse which features a pro shop, snack bar and lounge area, men and women's washrooms, and an upstairs loft overlooking the championship 18-hole course.

"We have been hauling the lumber from the other side of Gananoque and hope to put the footings in next week. All we need is a building permit."

The Belleville G. and C.C. will be open to all green fee players as well as members, and special programs include free lessons for women and junior golfers.

The course will be officially opened May 15.

Will the new clubhouse be ready in time

Owner Johnson chuckles. "If we can build a golf course in six months, I guess we can build a clubhouse in four!"

Fairways May Have Answer to Scoring Problem

The Belleville Fairways biggest need this season has been a balanced scoring attack as five players have accounted for 38 of the 57 goals scored this season. That meagre scoring output exceeds only that of the Trenton Golden Hawks, cellar dwellers in the Eastern Ontario Junior B loop.

The team may have taken a major step towards filling the need with the appearance of 1970 scoring leader Terry Meagher at the Fairway's Tuesday night practice.

A 27-goal performer with the Belleville B's last year, Meagher signed with the Fairways at the start of this season, but decided to take another crack at the Niagara Falls Flyers after recovering from an ankle injury sustained at the Junior A team's training camp.

The right winger was informed by the Flyers in a December tryout that they felt he was too far behind in conditioning to crack the Niagara Falls lineup.

The Fairways management was understandably pleased with the latest addition to the lineup.

"He could really help us", noted coach Floyd Crawford, "he's a step ahead of most guys in this league."

"Terry didn't look to be in that bad of shape", added manager Jim Matthews, "and he was booming those shots of his."

Meagher's addition would take some of the pressure off centres Danny Lupenette and Brian O'Coin who led the team with ten goals each. Lupenette has added 11 assists to his total to tie defenceman John Mulvihill for the lead in that department.

Belleville is currently three points behind the Cobourg Cougars in the league standings but hold three games in hand over the fourth - place club.

Kingston aided the Fairways cause Tuesday night with an 8-0 blanking of the Cougars, who face Belleville in a key Sunday night meeting at the Memorial Arena.

Wells Wants All Cigarette Ads Prohibited

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Thomas Wells urged the federal government Tuesday to place an immediate prohibition on all cigarette advertising in Canada.

In a letter to federal Health Minister John Munro, Mr. Wells noted a British announcement that cigarette smoking as a health hazard had reached epidemic proportions.

This is just one more report in a long list which points out "the very real health hazard created by smoking," Mr. Wells said.

A statement revealing contents of his letter came amid speculation that American cigarette manufacturers, forbidden to advertise on U.S. television since last weekend, may seek advertising sources in Canada.

Mr. Wells said he was particularly alarmed at an increase in smoking among young people despite educational programs designed to keep them from starting.

"Some school boards in the province are not only condoning, but by providing smoking facilities in schools are actually encouraging young people to start smoking," he said. "I urge school boards to reconsider their position and decisions on this issue."

Curb on Smoking Urged in Britain

LONDON (AP) — The British government came under increasing pressure today to act against cigarettes after the Royal College of Physicians reported that smoking kills more than 27,000 Britons a year.

Some sources predicted that within weeks the government would follow the United States' lead and order health warnings printed on cigarette packs. Further restrictions on advertising —cigarette commercials are already banned from television— were considered inevitable.

"The government must now take prompt action to see that effective preventative measures to discourage cigarette smoking are taken," The Guardian said in an editorial. Most other newspepers agreed and several urged curbs on advertising, although newspapers would be hit hardest.

The report from the Royal College of Physicians said lung cancer was the biggest killer of cigarette smokers, but thousands die each year of bronchitis or coronary afflictions.

"The chances are that two out of five heavy cigarette smokers —25 or more a day—but only one out of five non-smokers, will die before the age of 65," it said. "The man of 35 who is an average cigarette smoker—15 to 24 a day—is likely on average to lose 5½ years of life compared with a non-smoker."

If nothing is done about the problem, it said, smoking could kill 50,000 Britons a year by the 1980s.

More Are Seeking the Sun

Cathy Rankin (left) looks over brochures inviting travel to exotic places with travel agency employee Lydia Talnariu. A cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that in most provinces there is an increase this year in the number of people seeking to escape Canada's winter for a brief period of sun and sand.

Alberta Plans Tax on Lotteries

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The provincial government announced plans Tuesday to put a 10-per-cent tax on the gross revenues of lotteries in Alberta, including the $200,000 sweepstakes planned for Calgary and Edmonton.

Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart said operators of major lotteries have been told to calculate the taxation in their 1971 budgets. Legislation to introduce the taxation is expected at the next session of the legislature which starts next month, he said.

The minister was speaking shortly after exhibition associations in Calgary and Edmonton announced they will each sponsor a $200,000 sweepstake this year based on a thoroughbred horse race.

First prize in each race will be $100,000.

The Edmonton Exhibition Association said its sweepstake will be held in conjunction with the 42nd running of the Canadian Derby on Aug. 14.

The Calgary Exhibition and Stampede will base its sweepstake on the Stampede Futurity Stakes Sept. 11.

Tickets for each sweepstake will cost $2.50.

J. M. BARRIE, THE MAN BEHIND THE IMAGE by Janet Dunbar

As far as the world knew, James Barrie's life was one long success story. Born the son of a poor Scottish weaver, he became rich, famous, the author of a long list of successful plays. But behind the mask was a lonely, unhappy man. Dominated by a very possessive mother, he was forever searching for the love denied him as a child. Here is the story of Barrie's private life and the world of fantasy which resulted in his stories and plays.

FROM LAUREL HILL TO SILER'S BOG by Joh. K Terres

The Mason Farm is an abandoned homestead in North Carolina, now a wilderness area belonging to the University of North Carolina. For seven years John Terres took almost daily walks through the grown fields observing the wildlife of the sanctuary. He writes of these birds and beasts with a lyrical pen but a naturalist's precision. It is an enriching experience to walk with Mr. Terres from Laurel Hill to Siler's Bog.

THE FORGOTTEN FLEET by John Winton

It is widely believed that the Naval War in Far East was entirely an American undertaking. Yet by VJ Day the British Pacific and East Indies Fleets had 600 ships and a quarter of a million men in that theatre. They faced great difficulties of distance and supply and experienced many shortages. Nevertheless they made an important contribution to victory and after the surrender of Japan, were used for the repatriation of the Commonwealth prisoners and the rehabilitation of British Territroy in the Far East. Mr. Winton tells the story for the first time.

A VERY SHELTERED LIFE by Douglas Stuart

Douglas Stuart joined the BBC in 1946 and served in many parts of the world as Time after time he found himself at scenes where history was being made.

He was in India after independence, Cairo during the Suez crisis, Washington after the assassination of John F. Kennedy His book is an entertaining portrait of the international scene with many revealing glimpses of behind-the-scenes activity.

WYOMING WIFE by Rodello Hunter

This is the story of a woman's initiation into the rugged hunting, fishing and camping life so dear to her husband. Her account of her transformation, told with humor and affection, is rich in the atmosphere of the beautiful Grand Tetons, full of wilderness housekeeping and a wife's happy adjustment to a man's world.

LOOKING FOR DILMUN by Geoffrey Bibby

Mr. Bibby, who is not only a distinguished archaeologist but a noted writer on archaeology, has been in charge of excavations on the island of Bahrein and Kuwait for 15 years. They have uncovered evidence of a civilization older than Sumer which had been lost for 3,000 years. It is undoubtedly the kingdom of Dilmun, known to the Sumerians and Babylonians as a legendary land of immortality. The author re-creates the life of a powerful nation, as large as Babylonia and Assyria combined, the fifth great empire of the ancient world.

He's No Miracle-maker But - - -

Trudeau Is Sure Commonwealth Will Survive

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau played down his role as a miracle worker before leaving for the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore, but said he will do his bit to keep the organization together.

During a news conference prior to Mr. Trudeau's departure, the prime minister answered questions primarily on Britain's announced intention to resume arms sales to the white-supremacist South African government.

He assessed the dispute between Britain and several Negro African leaders over the issue as dangerous—several African leaders have threatened to leave the Commonwealth if Britain goes ahead with the arms sales—but said he is sure the Commonwealth will continue to exist after the conference.

The conference will be held between Jan. 14 and 21.

"The United Kingdom appears to be determined to go ahead with an act that other countries are determined it should not go ahead with."

He would go in search of "an area where one or the other parties may be willing to give a bit."

But it would be a mistake, he said, to build up his role as "any great mediator or diplomat."

"I'm certainly not going to perform any miracles."

Mr. Trudeau said he has no "precise formula" for trying to bring about a compromise between Britain and countries such as Tanzania, Zambia, Uganda, Ghana and Nigeria.

While he knew what results he would like to see emerge from the conference, "if we can't get results we certainly won't stomp out and close the door."

Britain has not sold arms to South Africa since former prime minister Harold Wilson lowered an embarg on such sales six years ago.

Hees Says Arms Sale 'Crazy'

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Any persistance by British Prime Minister Edward Heath to sell arms to South Africa may indicate an intention to "break up the Commonwealth", former trade minister George Hees said Tuesday.

Speaking to a group at Trent University, Mr. Hees said he doubted the Heath government would press for the sale in the face of the Commonwealth leadership meeting later his month.

"I can't believe that Heath, who is normally reasonable, will go ahead with this. He is crazy if he persists."

Inquest Held at Toronto

Towel in Abdomen 'Size of Handball' But Did Not Necessarily Cause Death

TORONTO (CP) — An autopsy room assistant said at an inquest Tuesday that when he first saw a green operating room towel in the body of a man who died a week after emergency surgery it looked "like a football, about the size of a handball."

Another witness said the towel did not necessarily cause death.

William McCleery, the assistant, said he found the towel when he put his hand in to move the intestines. He said: "I was stunned."

Wilfred English, 68, of Fort Erie, Ont., died Nov. 23, eight days after undergoing emergency surgery at Toronto General Hospital. An aortic aneurysm—a ballooning of the aorta, the main artery from the heart—ruptured.

The inquest into his death is continuing.

Dr. Orest Bykowski of the hospital's department of pathology said the towel was not visible when he opened Mr. English's abdominal cavity at a post mortem the morning after his death but lifted it out when Mr. McCleery found it.

Dr. Michael Quinnhill, of North York General Hospital, who performed an autopsy, said Mr. English died of kidney failure resulting from shock caused by severe blood loss.

He said he could not make a definite assessment of the part played in Mr. English's death by the towel, which had been folded. When folded it measured about eight inches by three inches and 1½ inches deep.

The pathologist said the towel did not appear to impinge directly on part of the bowel, which showed changes resulting from lack of blood supply. However, the towel could have interfered with Mr. English's breathing function and could have played a part in interfering with the blood supply to the bowel.

He said that in a younger, healthier man "I do not think it would cause a man's death."

Dr. Quinnhill listed a number of medical problems Mr. English had, including hardening of the arteries, blockages of the arteries by blood clots, fatty deposits of the arteries, scars from old heart attacks, bronchitis, emphysema, enlargement and fattiness of the liver and changes in the spleen and bowel as the result of poor blood supply.

The emergency operation was performed by Dr. David Sokol, chief resident in cardiovascular surgery at the hospital, who had performed this kind of surgery on 12 previous occasions, said staff heart surgeon Dr. David MacGregor.

The quality of surgery was good, Dr. MacGregor said, and after the operation Mr. English "appeared to have recovered remarkably well. . . . I could really find nothing at fault."

But by Nov. 20, he said, "it was obvious he was going to die."

Dr. MacGregor said hat possibly as many as eight towels would be used in an operation of that nature to drape the patient and wrap the bowel. He said the towels now are counted as well as sponges and clamps.

He said the surgeon customarily makes a search of the abdomen and "this was done in this case."

"If you counted everything eventually you're going to be counting the surgeons in the room," he said.

Maclear Defends Interview

TORONTO (CP) — A reporter's job is to get the story, Michael Maclear said Tuesday, and to get it "whether or not the politicians want it."

Since Maclear's Christmas Day interview in North Vietnam with a number of United States prisoners of war he has been "getting a bit fed up with having to justify why a reporter should cover the major aspects of the Vietnamese war at the moment—namely, the question of American prisoners."

The interview was described by a U.S. defence department spokesman as an "enemy propaganda film."

"Maybe it was," Maclear said Tuesday. "The U.S. hasn't accused me of being a dupe, or a stooge; they say I've been 'taken in.' I think that's irrelevant. I was allowed in; I filmed what I was permitted to film, to report what I was permitted to see.

Canadian Scientists Plan New Space Research

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists already are deeply involved in a new generation of research satellites to carry forward work of the Alouette and ISIS series spawned by the Defence research board.

Agreement is near with the United States on making the new series another co-operative space research venture.

The first is expected to be put into orbit in 1974 to do a series of experiments on communications technology, provided scientists of the two countries agree in the next few weeks on what experiments to include.

"Our problems are technical —we want more included than the rockets will be able to lift," Dr. John Chapman, assistant deputy minister for research of ment, said in an interview.

CTS—for communications technology satellite—will be the next major project for the research centre once ISIS-B, the last of the Alouette and ISIS series, is safely launched in March.

Initial cost forecasts for CTS final accurate figure depends on the associated experiments decided on.

Tentative plans call for two satellites, both to be put into orbit by United States rockets.

More than 100 representatives of the electronics and space industries have been briefed on the outlines of the program but practically nothing has been said about it publicly.

However, space industry publications have reported that among the experiments tentatively put forward is one to test communication between the satellite and community antenna systems on earth.

This could have an important bearing on Canadian communications systems.

Angela Davis Denies Guilt

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Black militant Angela Davis, acused of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in the Marin County courthouse shootings of last August, declared her innocence Tuesday at her arraignment, asserting she was the victim of a political frameup.

Entering the courtroom next to the one where three black convicts made a fatal breakout attempt Aug. 7 last, she raised a clenched fist and smiled as some of the spectators called: "Right on!"

Facing Superior Court Judge Joseph Wilson, she said: "I want to declare publicly before the court and the people of this country that I am innocent of al charges brought against me by the state of California."

She is acused of furnishing the four guns with which the convicts made their break, leading to the deaths of Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley, two of the convicts and an accomplice.

The third convict, Ruchel Magee, 31, who survived a wound, was arraigned with Miss Davis. Heavily shackled, he chalenged the court's jurisdiction.

Alan Brotsky of San Francisco, chief counsel for Miss Davis, moved that she be named her own counsel, that she be granted bail and that the indictments be dismissed on grounds of insufficient evidence and inability to get a fair trial.

Wilson told him to file the motions in writing by Feb. 5 and gave the state until Feb. 22 to reply.

"If we women can't do any better than be equal to THEM, I say forget it!"

Snowmobile Squad Of Police Urged

KESWICK, Ont. (CP) — Coroner C. Stewart Noble said Tuesday a special squad of snowmobile-hauling police cruisers should be created to catch speed limit.

Mr. Noble, speaking in an interview on the eve of an inquest into the death of Raymond Wright, 39, in a snowmobile accident, said the squads should be made up of four officers in a cruiser, pulling a trailer with biles

The idea, however, was rejected by Keswick Police Chief Alvin Pollock, who said he was "not going to allow my cruisers to chase these fellows breaking the speed limit."

Chief Pollock said snowmobiles should be either banned from public roads, or the drivers compelled to obtain proper driving licences.

The inquest has stirred a new concern for snowmobile activity by officials in this Lake Simcoe winter resort community, 25 miles south of Orillia.

Mr. Wright, a service station manager and father of three, had a reputation as a careful, safety-conscious man. He was killed Dec 20 when his snowmobile struck a wire fence while driving on a golf course.

The fire started in the crew quarters of the Irving Oil Co. Ltd. ship about 2:30 a.m. and was brought under control about four hours later.

The tanker was to have sailed for Halifax at 6 a.m. with a cargo of gasoline. It was moored at the Irving crude oil wharf at Saint John East.

Hollywood Props to Be Auctioned Off Again

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Got any use for the wheeled Teddy bear drawn on a string by toddler Shirley Temple in Captain January? Or the oval couch of Marilyn Monroe and Yves Montand in a dream sequence of Let's Make Love?

These and about 2,000 other items, including ersatz gorillas from Planet of the Apes and a gory-looking dummy head that rolled downstairs in Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte, will be up for auction next month.

Twentieth Century-Fox is going the route taken several months ago by another financially troubled studio, MGM, in disposing of its movie props.

But less extensively. MGM sold a vast, 40-year accumulation ranging from Clark Gable's raincoat to the Showboat river steamer.

Fox is clearing out only a fraction of its approximately 55,000 properties—ones that have served their purpose, can't be used again and are taking up valuable storage space.

Walter M. Scott, supervising set decorator, thinks the auction should bring "anywhere from a quarter of a million dollars up."

MGM hasn't said how much it realized from selling its gigantic collection outright to an auctioneer. Trade talk is that MGM got $1.3 million and that the auctioneer sold the props and costumes to the public for somewhere between $4 million and $7 million.

Fox is different, too, in that it isn't selling its goods to the auctioneer. It will retain possession until the bidder buys.

The auction, Feb. 25-28, will be the first by the new West Coast house of Sotheby, Parke-Bernet Los Angeles. It's a division of Parke-Bernet Galleries in New York and an affiliate of Sotheby and Co. of London.

Scott, 63, a winner of six Academy Awards for set decoration—on The Robe, The King and I, The Diary of Anne Frank, Cleopatra, Fantastic Voyage and Hello, Dolly!—led a tour of a huge sound stage crammed with goods for sale.

They included Tallulah Bankhead's chaise lounge in The Royal Scandal, the ornate desk used by Marlon Brando as Napoleon in Desiree and Edward G. Robinson's 1830 French bed from House of Strangers.

Clothing Back to 12th Century

Sheila McCrystal takes her turn at the ironing board as she works on the 12 century costumes for the Belleville Theatre Guild's upcoming play, The Lion In Winter. With an assist from the play's stage manager, Rene Robertson, she prepares costumes similar to those worn in reality during the reign of Henry the Second of England about whom the play is written.

Dress Problem in Period Play

The opening night of the Belleville Theatre Guild's newest play, The Lion in Winter, is now only three weeks away and members of the cast and production staff are hard at work preparing for the play's 10-day run.

And one of the most difficult chores for such a play—the story of Henry the Second of England and his family — is the research and work that goes into the making of costumes.

Costume mistress for the play is Eleanor Jourard who, with assistance from Shiela McCrystal, has been researching to discover what were the popular materials and styles in the 12th century as well as the popular hair styles and jewellry.

Last night Miss McCrystal and Rene Robertson, stage manager of The Lion in Winter, set to work on the costumes while members of the cast performed on stage.

"There's quite a bit of research involved to get the right period in a play — the right hairstyles, clothing and jewellry fashions," they explained.

Involved as well are the materials that were popular then and the weaponry utilized in various episodes of 12th century intrigue.

"We try to get as close to the real thing as you can get," Mrs. Robertson explained, and costumes for this particular play must be made for seven people.

The Lion in Winter was written by James Goldman and enjoyed success as an outstanding movie a couple of years ago. This particular play is also very popular with community theatre groups such as the Belleville Theatre Guild.

Featured in the cast are respected guild performers, Peter Kitcher and Flo Yanover as Henry and Eleanor of Aquitaine. Milt McCrystal plays Geoffrey in the production.

Also featured are Robert Nihill, a Napanee actor who will perform for the first time in Belleville. He plays Richard.

Lion in Winter also introduces Dawn Clark, theatre arts teacher at Albert College, who plays Alais.

Michael Read and Stu Arnott perform Phillip and John respectively.

The play opens Jan. 27 and runs for 10 performances until Feb. 6. There will be no performance Feb. 1.

The curtain rises at 8:30 p.m. during all the performances, a change from previous plays when they started at eight p.m.

Tickets are $1.25 for students and $2.25 for adults.

Resident artistic director with the guild, Lawrence Ewashen, describes the play as a historical comedy, compared to an old - fashioned Virginia Woolf.

It is a comedy of politics, family relationships and intrigue.

"We're looking forward to a sellout crowd," Mr. Ewashen said.

ANAF News

A happy and a healthy New Year to you all and, with this greeting, a gentle reminder that it is time that all date stamps should read 1971 by now.

Another year has started, the festivities are over and it's back to the weary grind. From all accounts a good time was enjoyed by all with the weatherman being very kind to this district.

Dominion President J. C. Lundberg was at the club on Jan. 1 and wished all his fellow members the season's best. He was a guest at the mess dinner given to the Air Cadets and he remarked that, as he watched them file in smartly to their places, he couldn't help feeling a surge of pride that he was a member of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit who have recently been accepted as their sponsors.

Dressed meticulously, with gleaming white shirts and black bow ties, the cadets took their places with dignity and decorum. Their deportment was such that Cde. Jack said many messes across the country could maybe equal but certainly not surpass it.

The president also told of his great pleasure in receiving Christmas cards from practically everyone of the charming Dutch youngsters that were guests of the Unit and the City of Belleville last summer. Without exception they were all still remembering their wonderful friendly reception from the citizens of this friendly city.

There was a great crowd at the annual New Year's Eve Ball with a good number of lovely prizes being distributed during the evening. Among the lucky winners were Bob Rolland, Carl Brethour, Bob Clark and Dick Thompson. These were all door prizes and there were also a half a dozen spot prizes. The levee was well attended in the morning and it was an open day for the ladies.

During the afternoon, unit president Dick Burns also extended greetings to all and invited them to join him in a toast to the continued good comradeship and success of the Unit in the coming year, with the hope that the new executive would receive the same wonderful co-operation that his executive and himself had enjoyed during his tenure of office. He was heartily applauded.

The entertainment chairman reports that he has plenty of live entertainment lined up for the Friday evening socials which he hopes a good number of members and their guests will enjoy. Free admission as in the past.

For the sports - minded there is little to report until after the election Thurs. Jan. 14. Remember the date.

Though still in hospital, Cde. R. Woods has been moved from the Kingston General Hospital to room 711, BGH. Cde. J. Lucciola is in room 715, BGH also. Resting at home are Cdes. F. Cronin, J. Polan and D. Locke.

Once again a Happy New Year to all.

THANK YOU . . .
FOR PAYING YOUR CARRIER PROMPTLY

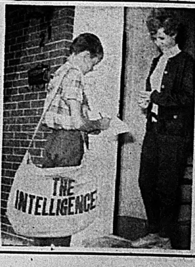
Collections by your Intelligencer carrier are timed to provide you convenient service and best meet his school and study schedules. He may begin collections Thursday and complete his collection on Friday, so that he can pay for his papers on Saturday morning.

Your thoughtfulness in paying him the first time he calls to collect will encourage him in giving you prompt service. It will save him extra work for which he would receive no additional profit.

It will give him more time for school and other activities . . .



Let a SPECIALIST Do It!

CAUSE ALLERGIES

TORONTO (CP) — Christmas trees give about seven in 100 people unwanted presents—runny noses, skin rashes and sneezes—two Ontario doctors have found. In a study of 1,657 allergy patients, Dr. Derek Wyse of Kitchener and Dr. David Malloch of the University of Toronto department of botany found most developed the symptoms less than 24 hours after the tree was brought home. About 15 per cent, they said, developed them three or four days later, worsening as the tree dried.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Hysterectomy Not End of Sex Life

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Although my doctor is conservative he now advises that I have a hysterectomy. I hate to think of it as I'm only 37. Fortunately, we have three children.

My trouble is fibroids that have begun to grow and cause me to bleed so much I've become anemic. What has really concerned me is the effect the operation will have on our sexual relations. My husband and I are perfectly happy.

But I'm too much of a prude to ask my own doctor if the operation will make me lose my own desire for sex. And suppose the surgeon finds something wrong with my ovaries? Suppose they have to come out? Will that complicate things even more?

What has really put doubts and fears into me is a friend who said I may as well say goodbye "to the good old days" after the operation. I'm worried for my husband as much as I am for myself. What do you suggest? — Mrs. T.

Comment: Where life and health are concerned, sometimes I think that good friends become bad liabilities rather than assets. They mean well but arouse apprehensions. It seems needless to say it again and again, but isn't it more sensible to take the advice of a trained doctor than the hearsay suggestions of a well-meaning friend who has no inkling of what the problem is all about?

I can't give you specific advice, but it's usually true that enlarging fibroids, accompanied by bleeding sufficient to cause anemia, is reason enough for considering hysterectomy. As for oophorectomy (removal of ovary) that will depend upon what is discovered at the time of operation.

But let's just suppose that both ovaries and uterus are removed. Is it inevitable that you will lose your sex drive? Ask your doctor. Hardly a day goes by when he isn't asked this question, so don't feel so self-conscious about talking frankly with him.

Chances are he will tell you that removal of ovaries and uterus (or uterus alone) will not necessarily diminish desire or accomplishment. Mainly psychologist re actions in some women may cause a sexual problem.

If your doctor feels that you will need some hormone therapy after operation, that will take care of any hormonal deficiencies. Most women I've talked to after they had hysterectomy say that pleasure was increased rather than decreased after such surgery. Reason? Freedom from fear of unwanted pregnancy.

For Mr. U.: It isn't true that everyone with a punctured ear drum is bound to get an infection in the middle ear. Of course, swimming and diving sometimes invite such trouble. Therefore, I suggest that playing water polo may be a hazardous sport for someone like yourself. Incidentally, given time, some punctured ear drums heal by themselves. And when there is a real indication for the operation, some can be closed by surgery.

• • •

For Mrs. G.: It isn't true that once you start taking hormones you will have to take them for the rest of your life. Your doctor will know when, and if, they need to be discontinued.

• • •

For Mrs. C.: Women who are only interested in increasing the size of their breasts aren't always aware that others have an entirely different problem, pendulous breasts. Plastic surgeons are able to reduce breast - size. When there are specific reasons for it your doctor will consult with a capable surgeon.

Many Jobs Are Open In Mines

TORONTO (CP) — The mining industry across Canada has hundreds of openings despite present high unemployment and the industry's generally high pay rates, mining officials in Toronto say.

A survey of head offices this week showed there are more than 1,000 openings in Ontario alone for unskilled, skilled and professional mining personnel.

In Western Canada, the coal mining industry reported that shortages of workers this year have forced cuts in the expected coal production.

Hourly wages vary widely, depending on the location of the ground—and the type of metal—gold workers are paid lower, for instance, because of the ore's low profitability at present.

But the average weekly wage in mining during September was $162.50, the second highest among 10 service and industry categories listed by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

At Sudbury-area nickel-copper operations base pay rates, exclusive of overtime and shift differentials, range from $3.20 an hour for surface workers to $3.74 an hour for drillers underground and $4.10 an hour for a stope leader. A skilled machinist gets $4.55 an hour.

Mining manpower is still scarce, mining officials said, because of the drawbacks such as isolation, lack of housing, living conditions and job insecurity.

Sydney J. Harris Says

None Drive as They Think

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One of my sons is going to start driving this year, so the other day I picked up a copy of The Safe Driving Handbook which is based on the training program developed for the U.S. Air Force.

Looking through the book before I gave it to him, I was surprised (and more than a little disconcerted) at the things I didn't know or hadn't thought about, even though I have been driving a car for 35 years.

For instance turning at random to page 52, I glimpsed the heading: Two Common Erros in Stopping for a Light, showing two mistakes you can make while standing still!

"When stopping for a light," the book reminds us, "it is potentially dangerous to have your wheels turned to the left. If hit from behind, you could be pushed into oncoming traffic. You may want to turn left when the light changes, but it is poor policy to start with anything but straight wheels."

Another error that had not occurred to me is explained this way: "A much more common accident occurs to the man who stops at a light, decides he is over the white line, and backs up a little. Then he forgets that his gearshift is now in reverse. The light changes, he steps on the gas, and plows into the car behind him. It happens every day."

Many drivers (even "experienced" ones) don't know that getting on to a freeway is quite different from getting on to an ordinary busy roadway. On the ordinary roadway, you slow down as you get on to it —but on a freeway, you are supposed to do just the opposite. When you enter the access lane, you should speed up until your speed matches the freeway traffic speed.

Another common fault on freeways is the failure to recognize that going slow is fully as dangerous as going too fast. As the handbook points out, "not many persons realize that you increase your chances of having an accident if you are going 20 per cent slower than the rest of the traffic."

And while most drivers know enough to turn down their "brights" when they are approaching you at night, only a small percentage remember to do the same when they are following you on a crowded freeway. Dazzling lights in your rear-view mirror are a menace to safe driving, and only the overland truck drivers seem to handle their lights properly.

On second thought I'm going to keep the book for a while and go through it myself. No man drives as well as he thinks he does, just as no man really plays poker as well as he thinks he does. Before I try to turn my son into a civilized and competent driver, I'd be wiser to provide him with a model rather than with a book.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 7

Your birthday today: A year and a half of diligent effort opens; none of it quite what you've done before, nothing overly easy, but all productive in ways you do not anticipate. Depend mainly on your own plans and effort. The full results of your work do not arrive immediately. From time to time you become the referee or arbiter; it may even be up to you to enforce local peace. Today's natives are each a type unto himself, no two alike.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be on time and mind your manners. Your money will flit at any opening of the wallet. Subtle choices like color schemes, qualities and textures should be deferred.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Keep a calm surface to mask your real concerns, but let your friends know you do care. There is much to fret over, but very little you can do at the moment. Your time will come.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Information turns out to be incomplete or inaccurate. Your good humor and patience in checking are essential. Strive for thrift, as there may be a sudden need for cash.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Take the middle road through the complexities of today. You find out things you hadn't suspected; questions of your inner reactions preoccupy you.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Force issues at work, but in personal life do the opposite. You have no privacy for emotional displays anyway. Expect to hear a wild story, not to be taken seriously as first told.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You feel strongly about real-to-you but not-serious-to - others matters, so don't expect them to share your views. Younger people try to please — reward them for their efforts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): New contracts, fresh assignments have special glimmers of hope. Settle outstanding issues. Technical consultations are highly favored early in the day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Tact is essential, as you may not quite understand what's behind places and habits. Associates enter into some impractical scheme — avoid getting involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Luxury is tempting, but hold onto your spending money; special needs are coming up. Don't react at once to provocative stories. Wait for more details, then choose a calm, more effective course.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Don't tell anybody what to do today — you have a specific responsibility if you do. Group activities work out better. Include solitude, serious study in your evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): People appeal to your idealism, with more results than they had any right to expect. Where other people have a share in what is done, double-check arrangements.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your sympathy helps others in their problems and concerns. Make it as short a day as you can, on as conventional a path as you can find. Relax early.

Canada Won't Sign Pact on Mind Drugs

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will participate in final negotiations on a new international treaty on mind-bending drugs but will not sign the document or make binding verbal commitments for the present, reliable sources said Wednesday.

These instructions were given to the Canadian delegation for the Jan. 11-Feb. 19 Vienna conference on the international treaty on psychotropic drugs.

Canada will be represented by Dr. J. Maurice Leclair, federal deputy health minister, with Dr. Ross Chapman, director-general of the federal food and drug directorate, as alternate.

Most independent nations are expected to be represented at the conference, called under United Nations auspices to adopt a treaty on drugs not covered by existing international narcotics control treaties.

The federal cabinet decided last month that Canada would make no binding arrangement at Vienna.

Health Minister John Munro told the Commons Dec. 17:

"The intention of the Canadian government is to listen and participate in the discussion and to do nothing that will prejudge its position prior to receiving the final report of the Le Dain commission."

The report is not expected to be ready before May and will include recommendations respecting many of the drugs under discussion at Vienna.

Trudeau Hears Plea

India's Nuclear Ability Feared

RAWALPINDI (CP-AP) — Pakistan said today it fears Canada is helping India become a nuclear power.

Discussing talks here between the president of Pakistan's military regime, Gen. Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, and Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, a foreign office spokesman said:

"We are concerned about the buildup of armed forces in India, particular in official statements including ones by the Indian prime minister, on its nuclear potentialities and the development of nuclear weapons by India.

"A feature that is significant in this respect is that Canada is the original source of nuclear assistance in the research field for India.

"The possibility of India becoming a nuclear power on the basis of the kind of assistance it is getting from Canada . . . is one of the matters we conveyed to the prime minister."

Asked about these comments Trudeau's press aide, Peter Roberts, said: "That is their story."

He refused further comment.

Canada built India's first nuclear reactor at Trombay, near Bombay. Its waste material can be used to make plutonium for nuclear weapons.

sion to construct twin power reactors in Rajesthan. The waste from these can also be used to produce plutonium.

The discussion over nuclear weapons appeared to produce the sharpest exchanges during the talks in which the British intention to sell arms to South Africa and its affect on Commonwealth unity a common policy toward China, and British entry into the Common Market, also were discussed.

Canadian sources said Trudeau and Yahya agreed both countries "desire to stay in the Commonwealth."

But their agreement did not take into consideration what their attitude would be if Britain went ahead with South African arms sales.

A Pakistani spokesman said the talks did not consider a formula seeking to avoid a Commonwealth split over arms sales. Yahya repeated his country's opposition to the proposed sales.

The spokesman said Yahya also told Trudeau that Pakistan found China "a very good and very reliable friend and neighbor."

The possibility of general trade preferences between the two countries should Britain enter the Common Market and end Commonwealth preferences also was discussed.

Trudeau arrived in Pakistan Wednesday and will leave for India Saturday for a four-day visit before flying to Singapore for the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference starting Jan. 14.

Tory Peer Hits Heath's Arms Plans

LONDON (CP) — Evidence of Conservative party differences over Prime Minister Heath's proposed arms sale to South Africa emerged today as a prominent Tory peer publicly lashed out at his leader and compared him with the late Neville Chamberlain.

Speaking at a Conservative forum, Lord Alport, a former junior Tory minister and high commissioner to Rhodesia, said he fears Heath has identified the arms issue with his own political credibility and is determined at all costs to protect that credibility.

"If this is the case, I fear that the consequences may in time be no less far-reaching than those which followed from the stubbornness of another brave and efficient man, the late Neville Chamberlain."

As prime minister, Chamberlain persisted in an attempt to appease Adolf Hitler only to find Britain engulfed in the Second World War.

Alport told the forum Wednesday "I cannot support a policy which is politically unwise and militarily irrelevant."

Heath has argued that a British naval arms are essential in South Africa to offset a growing Soviet naval build-up in the Indian Ocean threatening Britain's vital sea routes.

Welch Enters Race

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Thomas Wells announced today he will not be a candidate for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party but will support the candidacy of Mines Minister Allan Lawrence.

Mr. Wells' announcement came shortly after Provincial Secretary Robert Welch held a news conference at Niagara-on-the-Lake to declare his candidacy—the fifth cabinet minister to do so.

Mr. Wells said he will support Allan Lawrence because of the mines minister's concentration on the need for re-organization of government.

The "decision-making process in the province has become "sluggish," the health minister said, and he believes Mr. Lawrence will change that.

"There is no shortage of government in this province or this nation, but its efficiency and excellence could and must certainly be improved."

Mr. Wells said he will travel in the next month to campaign for the mines minister, but will concentrate on seeking support from party delegates in Metropolitan Toronto.

But Its Use Will Be Eased

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa announced Wednesday night that Quebec will retain extraordinary powers granted by Ottawa to fight terrorists.

But he said the province will relax application of the powers — the Public Order Temporary Measures Act, 1970 — that replaced the War Measures Act by recommending that police return to "normal precedures."

The war measures, giving police power to arrest without charge and hold persons without bail, were invoked Oct. 16 at the height of Quebec terrorism to give police far-reaching powers in the fight against the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

The FLQ claimed responsibility for the kidnapping of James (Jasper) Cross, a British trade commissioner free now, and the kidnap-slaying of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's labor minister.

Mr. Bourassa told reporters after a cabinet meeting Wednesday night: "The risk of the population is too great for us to ask for immediate repeal of the law.

"Instead, the government will recommend to the police that they return to the use of normal procedures, except in exceptional cases."

Meanwhile, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said that withdrawal of troops Monday has thrown the task of protecting public officials into the laps of police.

The troops were brought in Oct. 15, the day before invocation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Choquette said special patrols of Quebec Provincial Police would replace the soldiers.

Mr. Bourassa said the justice department will instruct police on the circumstances—not defined—in which the emergency powers may still be used.

But he did say the emergency powers—which expire April 30 —will be used in the event of another kidnapping, an assassination or other special cases.

Jarring Flying To Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Special envoy Gunnar Jarring flies to Jerusalem today in an effort to get his Middle East peace talks moving.

Diplomatic sources said the Swedish diplomat bowed to Israeli demands after concluding that substantive discussions could not begin at UN headquarters until he conferred with Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

UN diplomats expressed belief that the Jerusalem visit would be brief and that Jarring's talks at UN headquarters with representatives of Israel, Egypt and Jordan would start again in two or three days.

Jarring decided to make the trip after Israeli Ambassador Josef Tekoah urged for the second successive day that he accept an invitation extended by Eban Dec. 28.

Arab sources charged privately that the proposal was a stall to delay the peace talks, but Western diplomats said Jarring believes the Jerusalem visit is necessary to get the talks off the ground.

It was not clear why Israel placed so much stress on the meeting, but some observers speculated Eban might seek to shift the site of the indirect Arab-Israeli talks to Cyprus or some other location closer to the Middle East.

GIs 'Frag' Officers

Grenades Are Locked Up

QUANG TRI, Vietnam (AP) — Sgt. Gene Tingley usually got to the orderly room shortly before 6 a.m. to relieve the night duty sergeant. That morning he overslept. At 6:03, five pounds of plastic explosive blew the headquarters building apart.

The blast crippled the duty sergeant and broke the leg of a soldier asleep in the next room.

"It took me until about noon to figure out they were out to get me," Tingley said. "Then it was kinda shocking."

Tingley, 37, of Madrid, Iowa, was the target of a "fragging" — an attack by a soldier using a fragmentation grenade or other explosive against another American, usually his sergeant or an officer.

Army spokesmen claim they don't know how many fraggings occur in Vietnam. They say the problem is not serious enough to warrant special attention at headquarters.

But it is known that fraggings increase sharply as U.S. units shift into defensive positions preparing for withdrawal. Concerned field officers see it as another manifestation of growing frustration, racial tension and deterioration of morale.

One battalion commander in the Americal Division has all "frag" grenades collected from his troops as they come out of the field. The soldiers get them back when they board helicopters for another combat assault.

Although reports vary widely among units, an authoritative source in the Americal Division said fraggings average "about one a week, and there are at least one or two units in the country where it runs higher."

Very few fraggers are caught, often because the evidence is destroyed in the explosion.

Drug use often is suspected in fragging cases, but investigators admit to little evidence of this.

Producers Say Increase Overdue

The 20 cents per hundredweight increase in the price of milk announced yesterday by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board was long overdue as far as dairy farmers in the Quinte district are concerned.

The announcement of the increase was made in Toronto Wednesday by George R. McLaughlin, chairman of the milk marketing board, who said the increase would go into effect February 1.

About 8,400 of the province's 27,000 dairy farmers will receive the 20 cent increase for milk earmarked for sale to customers in bottled or packaged form.

Yesterday's announcement dealt mainly with the price of fluid milk going to city dairies and there was no specific information as to how the increase would apply to farmers supplying industrial milk for cheese and other purposes.

An official at the Foxboro Cheese Factory north of Foxboro said no official word had been received regarding the new producer price for cheese milk.

The current price of fluid milk for the bottle trade is $6.65 per hundredweight increase to bring this to $6.85.

In contrast, the price received by farmers for cheese milk is $3.60 per hundredweight.

Cheese milk producers feel that a price increase for milk going to cheese factories has been long overdue.

One of these is Mrs. Fred Lang of Marysville, who said that dairy farmers, unlike city milk distributors, have no way to pass increased production costs along to the customer.

She was referring to the statement by officials of dairy companies that the retail price of milk would likely go up a cent a quart as result of the 20 cent increase to farmers.

"When farmers buy a new tractor or a new milk cooler, they cannot pass the cost along to the consumer," she said.

Rather, they have to wait until the milk marketing board increases the producer price of milk.

The Lang's are cheese milk producers who send their milk to the cheese factory at Newburgh.

Loot $1.00 From Shop

Belleville City Police are investigating a break-in that occurred at seven p.m. yesterday at McGuire's Barber Shop, adjacent to the footbridge.

According to Deputy Chief Harold Reid, thieves got away with approximately $1 in change after gaining entry by breaking some glass in the door and releasing the lock.

Patrons in a beauty salon next door heard the sound of the breaking glass but no one investigated and consequently there were no witnesses.

Pioneer earthenware crocks and jugs line the basement recreation room of Allen Miller, who has assembled a collection of 500 pieces of early Canadian pottery and is looking for more. With his son Darryl he displays an unusual product of a Prince Edward pottery — a gallon jug decorated with a woman's face drawn in cobalt blue slip before the earthenware was glazed and fired.

Cheese Factory Is Sold

Shamrock Cheese Factory, on Highway 33 south of Stirling is under new ownership.

Effective January 1, the land, factory building and equipment were sold to Ernest Reid, owner of the Evergreen Cheese Factory, RR 2 Stirling, just east of the village.

Shamrock's milk quota of 6,224,973 pounds has been purchased by the Beulah Cooperative Cheese and Butter Company of Ivanhoe.

However, according to a spokesman of the Shamrock Co-op., the Highway 33 factory will continue in operation under Mr. Reid's ownership.

Less than a decade ago the Shamrock factory was expanded and new cheesemaking equipment was installed.

The number of cheese factories in the Quinte district has seen a steady decline since World War II when the federal government introduced a loan assistance program to encourage factory amalgamations.

As a result, many of the smaller factories went out of existence with new larger plants geared to year-round production being erected.

Examples were the new Foxboro factory: Maple Dale Co-operative on Highway 37 north of Plainfield and the Eldorado Cheese factory.

An the number of factories continues to decrease, Plum Grove Cheese Co-operative, RR 5 Stirling, is now offering its factory and equipment for sale along with its quota of 2,662,206 pounds of milk.

Pots Are His Passion

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Everything has gone to pot in Allen Miller's basement—literally.

Not the illegal, vegetative variety.

Mr. Miller's pots are products of an older, pre-plastic culture, when the common packaging material was heavy earthenware turned on a potter's wheel into shapes designed to hold every household commodity from butter to whisky.

The Northern Electric employee has been collecting salt - glazed earthenware crocks for eight or nine years, and now has 500 or so lining the walls of his basement recreation room. A few of his exceptional pieces — including a Royal Doulton Scotch whisky jug — decorate the family living room.

Since the Canadiana craze accelerated in the 1950s, crock collecting has become a fad among auction sale devotees looking for inexpensive "antiques".

But few people have approached the collecting of early Canadian containers with the zeal and knowledge of Mr. Miller. He is assembling a collection that will include every shape, size and color of jug and crock used in this district from pioneer times until the First World War.

Adding zest to Mr. Miller's search is the fact that the Quinte district was a pottery making centre from 1844 until 1914, and examples of unusual whimsies turn up regularly in barns and cellars at spring cleaning time.

In addition to the products of potteries in Picton and Belleville, household and commercial products came packaged in crocks manufactured in Great Britain and the United States. Mr. Miller's collection includes a bewildering variety of imported earthenware in common use locally for cheap packaging before the advent of kraft paper, cardboard, glass and plastic.

Mr. Miller has a theory about early earthenware. There is something masculine about it, he says, that has a special attraction for men interested in pioneer and primitive artifacts.

"At auctions you generally find men more interested than women in bidding on jugs and crocks," he says. "An earthenware pot is a piece of the earth, massive and hard. Because of their weight, especially when wet, they were turned in the potteries by men."

As Mr. Miller's Royal Doulton pieces prove, the finest English potters turned out inexpensive containers for the trade. They turned pots as tiny as a half inch high and massive jugs up to three feet or more tall.

In Picton, members of the Hart and Lazier families ran a large pottery, where they made everything from household utensils such as churns, butter crocks and chamber pots to jugs for local grocers, druggists and distillers, usually stamped with the merchants' names.

The Hart brothers, who established the Picton pottery in 1884, settled in the Prince Edward town because the raw materials of their industry — New Jersey screened clay and salt from the wells near Syracuse, could be transported cheaply by boat across the lake and into Picton harbor.

The Picton industry was an offshoot of another Hart family pottery in Fulton, New York, and Mr. Miller counts among the prizes of his collection two jugs from the parent American pottery.

Local pottery shows a strong Pennsylvania Dutch influence. The commonest earthenware is stone grey in color, with a hard vitreous glaze and cobalt blue markings. The size of the container was marked on the earliest pieces in the cobalt blue "slip", and stamped into the unbaked clay in later pieces.

But a few early potters let a piece out of their plants without a bit of decoration, flower designs and "squiggles" showing their descent from Pennsylvania Dutch motifs.

As well as the crocks themselves, Mr. Miller is assembling a "collateral collection" of documents concerning early potteries and their owners.

A copy of the Fulton, N.Y. pottery's inventory for 1884 gives an idea of the cost of packaging in those days. The one gallon jug, the commonest size, sold then for 30 cents.

The fat brown molasses jugs prized by casual collectors sold for 35 cents apiece and a five gallon butter churn for $1.20. A medium sized chamber pot was worth 25 cents and a spitoon 50 cents.

Inflation and demand have upped prices for the same articles today. Whacky bidding at country auctions by city people new to crock collecting and with no idea of earthenware values have driven people like Mr. Miller to antique shops and private contacts for their purchases.

An undistinguished one-gallon jug sells at $1 to $3, the variation in the price depending on shape and color.

Since unrealistic prices have led Mr. Miller to give up auction sales, he has found his crocks through advertisements in The Intelligencer and country weeklies in the area. He has found some of his best earthenware through responses to his advertisements and right now is working on a mystery uncovered through a construction worker's knowledge of Mr. Miller's interest in crocks.

While working on a site in Napanee, a front-end loader operator dug up 31 crocks buried under 20 to 30 feet of earth. Newspaper advertising led him to Mr. Miller with his find. Included were ordinary jugs, inkpots, flower pots and three unusual pieces that had never been known to exist before — small round brown pots, apparently moulded instead of turned on a wheel, and fashioned of clay rolled very thinly. Both imported and local pottery were included in the find.

From the age of the pottery Mr. Miller estimates the crocks had been buried, at least 50 years, probably more than 70 years. Since no one, even in pioneer times, dug cellars 20 to 30 feet deep, he is at a loss to explain how they came to be there.

He is now embarked on a search of the title to the property and an investigation of records in an attempt to solve the mystery. He hazards a guess that the site of the find was once the location of an inn or even a pottery. Identifying the three fragile brown pots is another problem that adds zest to Mr. Miller's pursuit of his hobby.

Algeria Finds Economic Feet

ALGIERS (AP) — Eight years after the end of French rule, Algeria finally seems to have found its feet. Some diplomats foresee a spectacular economic boom.

New cars, mostly made in France, jam the streets. Foreign businessmen crowd hotels and air services. Customers jostle for attention in luxury stores along Rue Didouche-Mourad, once called Michelet.

Algeria's ambitious four-year industrial development plan calls for a nine-per-cent annual rise in gross national product through 1973. Factories are going up with foreign aid and beggars have virtually disappeared from the streets.

Algeria has overcome its post-independence turmoil.

The end of French rule was a grim disappointment for many hopes. The cheering people who surged through the streets in 1962 thought independence day was the start of an era of happiness and prosperity following 130 years of colonial rule and a bitter "war of liberation" that lasted eight years.

In fact, it was the beginning of chaos, more bloodshed and years of near-starvation. More than 1,000,000 French settlers who had dominated the Algerian economy and administration fled in a panicky exodus. Many of those who stayed behind were expelled or found their property expropriated.

For want of Algerian technicians, the administration all but collapsed. The economy dropped to 1912 levels. Ahmed Ben Bella, then president, sought to encourage the millions of unemployed with fiery speeches and flamboyant but unrealistic projects.

The young nation depleted its human and material resources in an uprising by local military groups estimated to have cost more than 10,000 lives. Its weakened army was decisively defeated in a week-long border war with Morocco in 1963.

Ben Bella abolished embryonic democratic institutions and set up a leftist one-man regime which virtually brought Algeria into the Soviet sphere. In 1965 he was swept away in a military coup led by an austere Arab nationalist, Col. Houari Boumedienne, chief of staff during the war of independence.

Boumedienne believes in action rather than speeches. It has taken years for him to achieve any kind of popularity. A gradual improvement in living conditions has finally earned him widespread approval.

Boumedienne has promised to return to some form of parliamentary rule next year. The ruling National Liberation Front will remain the only party, but voters will have a choice among several candidates for a constitutional assembly.

The president has moved sharply away from heavy dependence on Soviet support.

"Revolutionary socialism" is still the official philosophy, but when a foreign enterprise is nationalized the owners are allowed to negotiate for months for adequate compensation.

The government backs the all-out demands of the Palestine guerrillas, but has avoided direct involvement in the Middle East conflict. It has recognized the Viet Cong and the exile regime of Norodom Sihanouk as the legitimate governments of South Vietnam and Cambodia—and it has no diplomatic relations with the United States.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

QUESTION: Can you give us details about the Petrified Forest in Arizona and the best way to get there?

ANSWER: The Petrified Forest National Park can best be reached via U.S. 66 and I-40 out of Chicago. It is located between Albuquerque, N.M., and Flagstaff, Arizona.

The Park, which covers about 95,000 acres, contains an abundance of petrified coniferous trees in brilliant and varied colors. Most of the trees are prone; many are in fragments. Numerous other fossil plants and bones have been discovered here.

It is believed that many of the trees grew near where they lie today. In Triassic time, 190 million years ago, this area was a swampy basin near sea level. The trees probably grew on scattered low hills throughout this section. Streams flowing into this basin from surrounding highlands carried in sediments rich in volcanic ash and at the same time gathered up dead logs, carried them a short distance and then buried them in these sediments. Slowly the wood of the logs was impregnated with mineral solutios of silica, which gradually filled in the wood cells until the logs are now virtually solid stone. Iron oxide and other minerals stained the silica to form the present rainbow colors. Later the region was uplifted and the action of wind and rain exposed part of the logs although many remain buried to a depth of 300 feet.

There are five distinct districts in the park: Blue Mesa, Jasper, Crystal and Rainbow Forests between I-40 and U.S. 180 and the Painted Desert section north of I-40. Each section has individual characteristics and all are worth a visit.

The Rainbow Forest is best known and surpasses the otheers in the number of logs exposed. Many of the trunks exceed 100 feet in length. The outer sections are generally reddish brown, but the cross sections reveal every tint of the rainbow. Some have been reduced by the elements into fragments and the ground is strewn with chips of agate, onyx, carnelian and jasper.

The Painted Desert section includes the Black Forest and spectacular parts of the Painted Desert. There are no roads or trails in this section and it is not easily accessible beyond the rim drive.

The park is open to visitors all year. There are picnic sites on the Painted Desert rim at Chinde Point and near the Rainbow Forest Visitor Centre. The Rainbow Forest Lodge, near Rainbow Forest Visitor Centre, and the Painted Desert Oasis, at the park headquarters just north of I-40 provide gas, oil and meals. No overnight accommodations or camping in the park. Open daily, generally one-half hour after sunrise to one-half hour before sunset.

Visitors are not allowed to gather specimens of the petrified wood of any size whatsoever within the park boundaries; violations are punishable by heavy fines and imprisonment. Curio stores sell polished specimens secured from privately owned land outside the reserved area of the national park.

Agate Bridge is formed by a petrified log which spans a 40-foot-wide ravine; 111 feet of the log are exposed. In 1917 a support was erected to maintain it.

Newspaper Rock, reached by a short side road one mile south of the Puerco River, is a large rock upon which prehistoric Indians inscribed petroglyphs, including various signs and symbols whose meanings have never been deciphered.

Puerco Ruin, the remains of an ancient Indian pueblo, was occupied until approximately six centuries ago. It is just south of the Puerco River.

Rainbow Forest Museum, near the south entrance, contains beautiful polished sections of petrified wood, crystals, minerals, fossil leaves, fossil skulls and exhibits designed to tell the story of the Petrified Forest. Open daily; free.

Quarter Century of Service

RCAF Memorial Fund Fights Misunderstanding

The RCAF Memorial Fund has raised about 16 per cent of the estimate cost for its Hall of Canadian Aviation History project at CFB Trenton.

And, in a tough time for fund-raising campaigns, difficulties are being compounded by public misunderstandings about the project, say fund organizers.

Organizers in Ottawa report that $513,000 had been donated to the memorial fund by December. Goal for the project — slated for 1973 — is $3,600,000.

"Fund raising is a tough business in Canada these days," notes a report on the project. ". . . the task is being made more difficult in this case by lack of understanding among many people about the true nature and aims of the project".

Most common misconception is that the memorial will be "a sort of million-dollar rock pile."

The project — on Highway 2 west of the Trenton base — is an "imaginative" complex emphasizing Canada's aviation exploits and developments, designed to "provide knowledge and entertainment" for all age groups.

The complex will include an RCAF memorial, convention centre, aviation history hall, library, study area and theatre.

Major phases of Canada's civil and military air history will be incorporated along with the "most complete collection" of aviation books and films in Canada.

Another misconcetion plaguing canvassers, say organizers, is that the Fund has salaried employees. A professional fund-raising organization was retained in the early stages of the project, but its contract has expired. Heading the program is Air Marshal C. R. Larry Dunlap, who donates his time freely.

Thus, say organizers, administrative costs are low.

The Trenton location is described as one of the more "controversial" aspects of the project.

The fund couldn't afford land in any metropolitan location and defence department could not donate land in the Ottawa area.

"The 35-acre parkland site at Trenton was made available at no charge," and is near the main trans-Ontario route of Highway 401.

By comparison, Upper Canada Village at the east end of the province draws big crowds every year.

The choice, say fund spokesmen, was between building at Trenton or scrapping the entire project.

Fund spokesmen say many Canadians know little about their aviators' achievements and exploits.

"Unfortunately," they add, "the facts are becoming obscure because of our reluctance to tell our own story, which is something of a national trait," they add.

EARL COOPER

Trentonian Top Shriner

Earl Cooper, Trenton, has been elected president of Belleville Shrine Club for 1971. The Club includes Shriners from a wide area, from Cobourg to Napanee, and from Madoc to Picton. It meets the third Wednesday of each month at the Shrine Club, Highland Avenue, Belleville.

Mr. Cooper has been a Shriner for 11 year. He has served on various committees involving Shrine activities and work for crippled children.

Mr. Cooper retired after 27 years in the Royal Canadian Air Force, with the rank of Warrant Officer First Class. Since retirement he has owned and operated Aljan Motel, near Trenton.

All his spare time is devoted to Shrine work. The Shriners support hospitals for crippled children, two in Canada, 16 in the United States, one in Mexico and one in Hawaii. Much work for crippled children is done in the local area.

The Shriners now support three Burn Institutes, the only such institutes in the world dedicated to the treatment of severely burned children and the development of remedies for burn damage to children.

Opening Dates Are Revised

February 1 is the current target date for completion of the 81 - unit senior citizens apartment complex on West Bridge Street.

Local administrator for Ontario Housing Corporation, W. James said today that the top floor apartments of the new structure opposite the fairgrounds were now completed and tradesmen were putting the finishing touches on the first floor.

Included in work still to be completed is the installation of carpeting on the main halls.

"It's entirely possible that the building will be ready by February. If not, certainly before the first of March." Mr. James said.

Ontario Housing is also awaiting completion of the 45 - unit senior citizens apartment on Turnbull Street, but here the building may not be ready for tenants until about April 1

Low rental town housing being erected by Ontario Housing on North Park Street is expected to be ready for occupancy within the next few weeks.

There are 39 low rental housing units in the North Park Street complex of about six different buildings.

Similar low rental housing has been provided on Pine Street with this development being officially opened about December 1.

All apartments in the more than 50-unit town house development on Pine Street are now occupied, Mr. James said.

And there is a waiting list for the North Park Street units and also for both senior citizens apartment structures.

Quinte Conservatives Prepare for Convention

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The process of selecting a new leader for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party is now in the grassroots organizational stage in the Quinte district.

There now remains little more than one month to the mid-February Toronto convention that elects a successor to Premier Robarts.

But the key mechanism in the complicated machine that is the convention — the delegate vote — now is being assembled by all party consistuency associations.

Before the end of this month, the Conservative organizations that hold all three Quinte ridings, will have named the men and women who will vote as delegates in the final act of leadership choice.

Organizing the delegate vote thus far has been the only major involvement of the local organizations in the leadership process.

All riding associations still await the campaigning of leadership candidates who — by tradition — endeavor to extract grassroots support by personal visits to the local political organizations.

However, a new slant has been given such a tradition in the current leadership campaign by a political native son of the Quinte district — Dr. Richard Potter.

The Quinte MPP is due back in Belleville today after four days stumping the province, pleading with fellow Conservatives against premature commitment of their vote.

Through a series of press conferences in major regional centres, Dr. Potter has been telling local party followers not to decide on a new leader until convention time — when they will have the best chance of personally assessing each candidate's policies and attitudes.

Meantime, his own riding association has named its delegates to the convention.

Neighboring Conservatives of Prince Edward - Lennox — represented by Norris Whitney, MPP — will select their representatives this weekend.

Harold Bonter, association president, said today the Conservative riding executive will meet at the Royal Hotel in Picton Saturday night to name delegates to the Toronto convention.

In Hastings riding — held by Clarke Rollins, MPP — the delegate selection will take place Jan. 23, at an assembly of the local Conservative association in the Kiwanis Centre at Madoc.

Delegates named to represent Quinte riding are: Ted Parker, association president; Douglas Whitley, Roy Jeffries, Gerry Brennan, Mrs. Edna Patrick, Frankford; Mrs. Dolores Hall, Trenton; Mrs. Vera Morphy and Mrs. Eleanor Haggarty; and Roger Porter and Trudy Brown, of the riding's Young Progressive Conservatives.

Commission Seeks New Manager

TRENTON (Staff) — The Public Utilities Commission here is looking for a new manager and the man should be a qualified electrical engineer, the new PUC chairman, D. James MacDonald said yesterday.

It is expected that the commission will begin advertising for the post in the next few weeks. The closed-door PUC meeting here was called partly to deal with the matter of filling the senior post.

Decision to seek a new manager was prompted by the retirement, shortly before Christmas, of James Page, who had managed the PUC for 12 years.

There has been some speculation that by hiring a well-qualified commission manager, one other post in the commission would become reduntant. However, Mr. MacDonald emphasized that nobody on the commission should be in fear of losing his job

Mayor Duncan McDonald said this morning that the PUC would set up meetings with the Ontario Hydro to seek advice as to what kind of qualifications would be desirable for the position.

The mayor said that he did not believe that any members of the present commission staff would be qualified, although Charles Hilton, a new Public Utilities Commissioner, is not against the prospect of hiring from the present staff.

Black and White

While the Commonwealth countries get together in Singapore for another round of talks we have been reading about those awful South Africans, in the magazine South African Panorama.

South Africa, as most of us know, left the Commonwealth in 1961 on the eve of declaring itself a republic and because it wanted to handle its own affairs in its own way. It continues to do so, despite a renewed barrage of criticism over its racial policies, and the current proposed purchase of arms from Britain which some fear will alienate black Africa and cause the downfall of the Commonwealth.

We believe the Commonwealth will survive, and for the sort of peaceful reasons that one can find inside the pages of Panorama. The only sign of warfare we could find in this particular issue was an article on clay pigeon shooting. The rest has to do with activities equally familiar to Canadians except that they are played out against the warm sun and exotic landscapes of this southern land mass.

The cover picture in color of three attractive young lasses standing among some fat, healthy jersey cows, is an introduction to an article on a Stellenbosch farm's cattle herd. And there is a piceure of Stella Helerie, who was elected Miss Jersey Maid 1970 and who would be the equivalent of a dairy princess here.

From an article on a group of American women pilots who undertook a flying safari on South Africa in their light aircraft (including a visit to the Bantu population's self-governing Transkei region) there are features on the late N. P. van Wyk Louw, who was a noted academic and poet in the Afrikaans language; on the town of Worcester (population: 12,200 whites, 20,500 coloreds, 6,000 Bantu, and 100 Asians), which last year celebrated its 150th anniversary in its dramatic mountain setting northeast of Cape Town. Worcester is centre for a school for the blind and services for the blind in the country at large include the production of braille in the Bantu languages. There are four schools for the Bantu blind.

There is a great deal else — articles about the Workers' Rehabilitation Hospital in Johannesburg, education, a performance of Peer Gynt by students of Rhodes University, Grahamstown, in their own ultra-modern theatre, the award of technical school diplomas to Bantu students, and there is a picture of a group of boys from Durban high school, in blazers, ties, slacks and hair on the short side, who would rank among the best-groomed school kids anywhere.

One Canadian who ventured into this supposedly bedevilled land is Frank Schnabel. He is chairman of the World Federation of Haemophilia, and Panorama shows him on a visit to East London for the first meeting of the South African organization.

City Hall

It was with considerable concern that we learned of the structural and other defects of the century-old city hall. They have already been outlined, as presented in the report of a firm of consulting engineers, and while a $750,000 (Mayor Russell Scott's estimate) for a new city hall seems, by common consent, out of sight, it is quite clear that a good deal of work will have to be done to afford council and its administrative staff a safer and more efficient home. If the entire structure cannot be brought up to building code requirements, then at least the safety factors mentioned in the report should be an immediate priority.

Automated

With a major Canadian airline announcing that it has started installing automatic navigation equipment that will eliminate the need for human navigators in all of its DC-8 aircraft, one wonders what is to become of the latter? We can look for some trouble in this regard, on the issue of job security and compensation for loss of employment. On the other hand it should ultimately mean savings for the airline, and others adopting the equipment, at a time when there is talk of decreasing passenger traffic.

Getting the Message Across—Dief Or Trudeau-Style

Personal Touch and Going the Extra Mile in Politics

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Soon . . . well, just how soon only political fates, or, possibly, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau know . . . there will be another federal general election.

And soon, at the very latest, can be no further in the future than another year and a few months.

So let us look at one very special — even key — aspect of the party leader's platform appearance.

What is so special is how he ends it, what he does when he comes to the close of his speech.

And this he must do, two and sometimes on three or more speaking dates a day, and at the very minimum, once every night those six grinding weeks of the campaign tour.

Television? Yes, of course, important, too. But also in a special and quite impersonal way. The recent mid-term United States congressional elections, if they proved anything, showed that TV was not really the magic vote lantern that so many politicians were coming to regard it.

It makes the campaigner too remote, a shadow who can neither be heckled nor applauded, who often intrudes into your living room and monopolizes an interlude — be it only two or three minutes — that you might prefer to put to better and more entertaining use.

When the candidate goes to the TV studio, he tells himself he does it to reach, hopefully, a mass audience with a minimum expenditure of time, if not of hard campaign cash.

But there is the aspect to it, also, that there lurks the suspicion that he may be seeking sanctuary from the crowd in the privacy of the TV studio where even the floor director and the cameraman do not argue or answer back.

So there is still nothing with the direct personal appeal of the man standing there before you on the platform in the living, breathing flesh, making the very considerable effort of directing himself on this one special occasion to your attention, scrutiny and assessment.

He takes a chance. He can be heckled. Even howled down.

He can be damaged by the size of the crowd — if it is small, the disinterest hints of possible disaster ahead on election day.

He takes the chance, too, that he can come off the platform a winner.

Not every leader can make a great speech every day and every night for six weeks. The unavoidable repetition makes it impossible to ring the victory bell every time.

But if he can not always make a good speech, he can make a good exit.

And it is there, as he leaves the platform — how he does it, what he does with the next few minutes, and where he goes — that he can make a dismal failure or a ringing triumph of his appearance.

The best in the tricky business of bowing out was John Diefenbaker.

But let Maritime Conservative MP Robert Coates tell the story.

Bob Coates had won the Cumberland Tory nomination unopposed, basically, he concedes, because in 1957 with the Liberals supposedly still riding high after 22 years of unbroken rule, nobody wanted to be the Conservative sacrifice.

"I made a two or three minute speech and Dief gave 'em a 20-minute rouser," relates Bob Coates, "and while they still were applauding, he leaned over and told the chairman to keep the meeting going at least another couple of minutes.

"Then he leaned over to my side and said 'now you and I will get down to the door fast and shake the hand of every person in this hall on the way out.'

"We did, and I knew then how it pleased people that the leader and the candidate cared that much about each one of the 1,200 voters in the hall."

Bob Coates recalls how in earlier years when he was still outside politics looking in he had heard former Conservative Leader George Drew speak and invite everyone in the hall to come up on the platform and meet him.

Not many bothered. But if George Drew had been at the door, how different it might have been.

Pierre Elliott Trudeau has taken this get-down-among-the-people a step further.

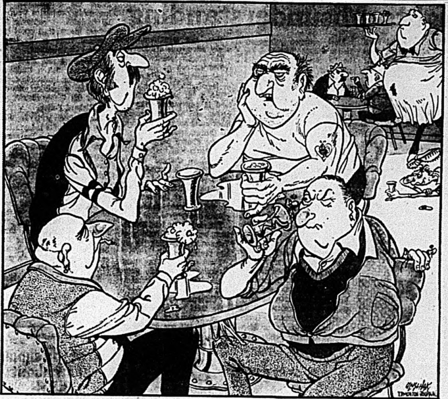
He mixes with the crowd bodily, moving around in the eye of a human hurricane, laughing, waving, kidding, arguing, kissing, and, on occasion telling a lout to get lost or a tough to drop dead. Occasionally it goes as far as confrontation, but it is intensely PERSONAL and it gets across.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield tries the crowd mixing appeal, but seldom if ever at the door where nobody can be overlooked, and with no real set pattern of performance. The man's shyness and sensitivity gets in the way.

Mackenzie King and even Louis St. Laurent, essentially private persons, never attempted it except with very select and hand-picked almost pre-programmed small elite crowds.

Lester Pearson attempted to learn but never really mastered the art.

But it is a whole new world and it belongs politically to Mr. Personality who can make you know it like it is.



"It isn't the buck-passing in government I mind so much — It's the buck-keeping that bothers me!"

What About Vietnam?

The Hypocrisy of Canada's Stand on Arms Issue

Kingston Whig - Standard

Some elements of the Canadian press are busily predicting imminent disaster for the Commonwealth unless that champion of national respectability, Prime Minister Trudeau, is able to intercede successfully between Britain and black Africa. The issue, of course, is the Simonstown Agreement whereby Britain, 15 years ago, promised to sell certain ships and maritime war material to South Africa in return for the use of the vital Simonstown naval base.

Black Africa, itself hardly lilywhite when it comes to bloodletting of a particularly horrendous order — all in the name of freedom, of course — takes the attitude that any nation which sells any kind of arms for any reason to South Africa is ipso facto its enemy. The fact that it is Britain which is involved seems to make the matter even more unacceptable to them — an interesting study in background and motives.

Much Canadian comment concentrates on the "prestige" which Mr. Trudeau will gain if he is able to intercede successfully, and the disastrous effect a failure would have both on that prestige and on the standing of Canada as a sucessful mediator in affairs of international morals and ethics. This line also unfailingly mentions the fact that Canada is busy trying to persuade Britain to consider the continuation of special trading benefits if she should happen to join the European Common Market.

In view of this purely economic concern, and of the undeniable fact that Canada is guilty of selling war materials to the United States while at the same time deploring the war in Vietnam, it is something less than high-minded of our Government and those who back its policies to take the moral line with Britain in this synthetic issue which, in any case, is none of our business.

Prime Minister Trudeau would be well advised to keep pretty quiet in Singapore while the Commonwealth talks progress. He could easily make himself, and his country, look quite professionally hypocritical.

• • •

Ottawa Journal

There is a heavy touch of dramatizing in some of he press accounts in Canadian newspapers of the save-or-break role that Prime Minister Trudeau will have to play at the Commonwealth conference in Singapore later this month.

The Commonwealth has died on the eve of these conferences for many years now, but somehow returned to life. Yet if it survives this present "crisis" over Brtain's proposed shipment of arms to South Africa it will be because British and African leaders no less than Mr. Trudeau will have willed it so.

We don't deny the width and depth of the present danger. Within the formal bindings of his third report to member governments, Arnold Smith, Commonwealth Secretary General, says that if member countries do not respond to challenges confronting the organization it may not be able to survive "in a meaningful form."

He expressed his very real concern about the arms shipments to Mr. Trudeau when he was here at the end of November and it is known Mr. Trudeau shares that concern. To the editor of this newspaper Arnold Smith said at that time, "Western powers (meaning Britain) should be careful lest in seeking to prevent what they fear might be Soviet intrusion into African affairs they exaggerate the threat and unite Africans against whites on a continent living close to nerve-end sensitivities."

'Parcost' Prescription Program Is Making Heavy Weather

London Free Press

Although Minister of Health, Tom Wells, maintains that the plan has already cut prescription drug costs by 10 per cent, the savings are virtually imperceptible to patients who must depend on their doctors' use of the Parcost index to benefit from the cheaper generic name drugs.

The program cannot achieve maximum success without acceptance by physicians.

Evidence indicates that doctors are not so much hostile to the program as they are indifferent to it. Most of them are not taking the time to check the Parcost index before prescribing drugs. They are prescribing drugs in the traditional way, which in most cases means their patients are shouldered with the higher cost of brand-name drugs.

It is also in the interest of drug company salesmen to uphold the brand-name practice — another problem for Parcost to overcome.

The political fanfare with which the Government announced Parcost may have raised unrealistic hopes for quick results, though it's questionable if the public generally appreciates how the plan is supposed to work.

Parcost deserves a longer trial before being branded a failure but it seems apparent that more effective means must be devised to encourage medical acceptance.

Although it is somewhat premature to make hard judgments on the effectiveness of the government-sponsored Parcost program to reduce drug costs in Ontario, the preponderance of evidence so far suggests disappointing results.

For one thing, the program has illustrated how firmly doctors are married to habit. A survey undertaken by the Ontario Pharmacists' Association reveals that the bulk of the province's physicians are still prescribing the more expensive brand-name drugs for patients, despite the encouragement given by Parcost to broader use of drugs under their chemical or generic names.

Parcost was designed not only to cut drug costs, of course, but to strengthen quality control. The key to the program — introduces about three months ago — is a comparable drug index listing a wide range of prices for drugs of comparable standards. It was distributed to doctors, dentists, pharmacists and general hospitals across Ontario and can be bought for $3 by interested individuals. Participating druggists display a Parcost symbol.

World Outcry Likely Stayed the Hand Of Franco and the Soviets

Ottawa Journal

The Russians can maintain until doomsday that the commutation of the death sentences in the Leningrad hijack case had nothing to do with the almost universal outrage against the brutality of the punishment. The world will believe otherwise.

What has happened in Russia and in Spain is something remarkably new in the recent history of these countries, and profoundly encouraging.

The responsiveness of both dictatorships to the instinctive cry for humanity does not mean an end to persecution. But perhaps it shows that even Russia, infinitely a more regimented society than Spain, has recognized that it can no longer live in contempt of what the world thinks.

The quality of mercy which General Franco has demonstrated in commuting the death sentence of six Basque nationalists will hardly subdue the uproar over the case either in Spain or abroad. Thirty years imprisonment is better than the firing squad, but only barely. The reprieve has only taken the sense of urgency out of the protests. But the fact that tough old Generalissimo Franco felt compelled to heed the pressures for clemency suggests the strength of the more liberal pressures now abroad in Spain. A decade or more ago Franco would have done what he wanted done. Now it seems he is doing what he must do.

The Basques have become pawns in the continuing struggle between the ultra right wing and those, even in Franco's cabinet, who want to let the Spanish sun into the old dark corners. The terrorists who have killed a police chief should be brought to punishment; no one argues that. But the larger issue is whether moderate forces in Spain will at least overcome the oppressive conservatism of Franco's long regime. The Generalissimo is probably still shrewd enough to see the inevitability of political change, even in Spain.

The discontent of the Basques is one trouble which Franco cannot blame on the Communists, not with all the Catholic priests involved!

Canadians Must Gear To Change

Richard Needham in
The Globe and Mail

What is clear to me — what should be clear to any businessman or non-businessman — is that if we're going to get all our people working, we'll need to make drastic changes. But modern Canada is not set up for drastic changes; we're too tightly organized, too institutionalized, too bound up with rules and regulations; like the dinosaur, we can only plod along in one set direction. So change will be forced upon us, and it will be painful, and we're just feeling the start of that pain.

Israeli Says Well Holds Gold Coins

TAIYIBA, Israel (AP) — A young Israeli businessman is digging in an ancient water well that he is convinced holds $1,000,000 in gold coins of the Turkish Ottoman Empire.

Avshalom Saadya claims the coins were hidden there by a paymaster during the Turkish army's retreat from the Holy Land before the victorious British 53 years ago.

Saadya and his digging crew have reached a depth of 120 feet. So far they have found five coins in the rocks and mud.

"According to the old maps I have, the coins have got to be there," he said.

The story leading up to the hunt, as Saadya tells it, contains all the elements of buried-treasure folklore: In 1917, the Turks were retreating in Palestine before the British army. One of the lines of retreat ran northeast across stony, hilly terrain, through what today is central Israel.

A young paymaster decided there was no longer any point in paying the soldiers their salaries, so he placed two crates of gold coins in the well 12 miles east of the Mediterranean.

This year the same man returned to look for the treasure, equipped with maps he had drawn of the spot, Saadya said. He refused to give the man's name but said he is nearly 80 and lives in the eastern Turkish town of Izmir.

Nor will Saadya, 34, reveal how he got in touch with the Turk. He did say he would pay him 10 per cent of the treasure and another 10 per cent would go to Mahmoud Zbada, an Arab who owns the land on which the well is situated.

The treasure hunters say there are 800,000 coins of 18-carat gold. The seven-man digging crew is using a motorized winch to scoop up the stones and mud.

"Half the battle was finding the well," Saadya said. "You would never have known it was a well. There was a two-ton rock on top of it, and shrubbery had sprung up all around. We moved the rock with a bulldozer, and since then we've been digging from dawn to dusk."

He said the only halt came when the national antiquity department demanded the dig be called off, claiming the well was an archaeological site. Saadya said there was a brief legal wrngle, which he won.

"I'm really enjoying this treasure hunt," he said. "If we find the gold, great. But even if we don't I'll still look upon it as an adventure."

Hindus Have Hard Time in Pakistan

HARIDASPUR, India (AP) — Makhan Lal Biswas, 48, and his brother farmed together in Faridapur district of East Pakistan for many years. Members of the minority Hindu community in that Moslem nation and their existence always somewhat uneasy, they packed up and made a painful four-day trip to a refugee camp in this border village 90 miles east of Calcutta.

"About a month ago the Moslems forced my brother to sign a document handing over our house to them," said Biswas. He stood near a makeshift hut, clutching his baby son. "They came and took over our house. Because I took the matter to court, they tried to kill me. I had to flee."

Biswas and his family are among an estimated 85,000 Hindus who have fled to India since January. The migration is another chapter in the long tragedy of Hindu-Moslem strife in the subcontinent.

This year it was set off largely by near-famine conditions and a seeming breakdown in law and order in East Pakistan. Dispatches from Dacca, the East Pakistan capital, indicate crop failures have led to severe shortages of cash and rice and a third of the work force is jobless.

The resulting flow of refugees has embarrassed the Pakistani government and strained relations between the two nations.

Paru Roy, a young wife of 18, said she and her farmer husband decided to leave because of "oppression of women" in her village in Jessore district, a two-day walk from the border.

Bhirm Chandra Mandal and his wife came with eight other families "because the Moslems made us work but didn't pay."

The refugees here wait to join about 52,000 who have been resettled this year in refugee areas in Orissa and Maharashtra states. The government maintains four border centre with doctors and personnel who handle initial screening.

Indian government figures indicate 3,900,000 persons migrated to India from East Pakistan between 1946 and 1969, including 1,100,000 in 1950—three years after partition of the subcontinent to create the separate countries of India and Pakistan.

Western diplomats in New Delhi admit they are uneasy about the large migration and the tension which has sprung up between India and Pakistan. A spokesman for Pakistan said: "There is no question of treating this as a Pakistan-Indian dispute or a religious issue. To us it is very clear it has become a human problem."

Asked about oppression as described by the refugees, he said: "If there is any insecurity in the minds of Hindus in East Pakistan, the blame lies squarely on the shoulders of the Indian government which permits communal riots to take place."

Hindu-Moslem rioting took place in India's western Gujarat state last September and in middle Maharashtra state in May. In each case several hundred Moslems died.

Indian government officials say the refugees indicate that police indifference in a growing climate of lawlessness, an increasing effort to squeeze the Hindus out, and troubles at harvest time such as theft of crops are driving the Hindus into India.

Young Former Drug Users Push Bible, Not Pot

EDMONTON (CP) — An army of long-haired "freaks" is on the march to conquer the world—with Bibles.

The army is made up mainly of former drug users with deep roots in the hippie sub-culture, who have cast aside the chemical trips for what they call a "Jesus trip."

"If you're on Christ, you don't do drugs," one girl said. "Trips on drugs are nothing compared to Christ."

The Jesus People Army, otherwise known as Jesus Freaks, are mostly between the ages of 18 and 22. The movement had its beginnings in Seattle, Wash., but members of the Edmonton branch are not sure how or when things got started and they are not particularly worried, concentrating instead on what is happening now.

In the hippie culture a freak is a drug-user. A Jesus Freak refers to a hippie stoned on Jesus.

Armed with Bibles, Christian ethics and a lingo filled with words like "heavy," "trip" and "stoned," the young army is determined to bring the word of Christ to mankind.

They like to think of their movement as a revolution minus any physical force—just a peaceful takeover.

The local chapter of the army has rented a small, cramped building littered with well-used furniture and mottos on the walls. The buildinng is on one of the more sleazy streets in a run-down district.

The mottos include: "Praise the Lord, and leave the building by midnight"—the landlord doesn't appreciate anyone remaining past that time. And: "When Jesus fed the 6,000 he picked up the scraps afterwards. Let's keep this house clean."

Seven days a week the Edmonton Jesus House opens about 10 a.m. and closes at midnight. Mornings begin with the full-time workers cleaning up the premises followed by Bible studies and prayer meetings.

Preaching to people on the street and to those who drop into the house continues all day.

Full-time workers are members of the group who don't hold outside jobs. They spend all their time being evangelists The number of such workers averages about 10.

When 16-year-old Charmaine—last names are rarely used—was asked how she manages to eat with no salary, she said, "The Lord provides."

While the Jesus People do not say manna falls from heaven, they do believe that all the gifts of food and shelter donated to them by group members and outsiders are gifts of God.

"We're always sitting here saying thank you, Lord," said Charmaine.

Some members of the army do hold regular jobs, providing food and lodging to those without jobs. Some of the other full-time workers live with their families.

The group's operating costs are limited to building rental, printing of tracts and small amounts for charity.

Ray Bassett, 20, has long hair and wears the uniform of today's youth—faded blue jeans and other clothes with that lived-in look. He has been a member of the army for about two months.

"I joined through a revival meeting," he said. "They had a lot of good things to say. At first I didn't go for the whole trip, but eventually got involved."

Before joining the group Ray said he was doing "absolutely nothing." He now is a full-time evangelist with the army.

Evangelism is usually directed at youth but, as Charmaine said, she will approach and begin talking to anyone towards whom she feels God is directing her.

The army does not believe the spirit should always be fed before the body and will offer a cup of coffee to a cold drunk on the street before coming out with lines like "Jesus loves you."

Sometimes the army goes to high schools for revival meetings or addresses church or youth groups.

If we only start one person thinking at such a meeting, it is worth it, said 22-year-old Eve, the unofficial leader of the unstratified group.

Because of their past, their looks and their youth, they face a good deal of cynicism.

"People sometimes say, 'Oh I know your kind . . . shacking up upstairs,' " Charmaine said.

However, premarital sex is frowned upon by the Edmonton army, most of whom are unmarried. In their discussion of two people in Vancouver living together, a "Praise the Lord" was heard when it became known the relationship had been dissolved.

"The Lord broke that up," said Ray.

While they had praise for the police and the help they have offered the army, some quiet rumblings are also noticeable in most discussions.

One recent Saturday night Eve was handing out pamphlets on a street corner. She apparently became over-zealous and a policeman threatened to throw her in jail under the War Measures Act.

Most hassles are caused by "people judging us by our looks, rather than words or actions," Ray said.

Some of the people from the established churches worry about the Jesus Peoples' lack of alignment with a denomination.

Ray said they don't want to become part of a denomination because that involves believing in man-made doctrine. "For some people, church is their trip," he said, "but we won't put them down just because it is not our trip."

Farmhand Is Tycoon

ST. ALBERT, Alta. (CP) — The agricultural economists doubted if a penniless hired hand could become a successful farmer, but Tony Raven has proven them wrong.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Raven, an immigrant from England, ws earning $145 a month on the Jeff Bocock dairy farm near St. Albert. Today he is known as the Birdman of St. Albert and owns a 2,600-bird poultry operation which grossed $130,000 in 1969.

It all started when Mr. Raven asked Mr Bocock for the use of an abandoned building on the farm—just a small place where he could raise a few chickens.

"He said 'Sure, go ahead.' So I started on my own with about 50 chickens."

Mr. Raven and his wife, June, began selling eggs at night after their farm chores were done and within one year the flock of chickens ha expanded to 1,000.

The Ravens needed more money to enlarge their little business, but the banks considered a farmhand a poor credit risk. The much-needed capital finally was obtained through Mr. Bocock and the fledging operation soon was able to stand on its own.

Mr. Raven says marketing is the key to his success. He has never increased egg production unless he was assured of markets.

His major market now is a chain of supermarkets in Edmonton, only a few minutes drive south of St. Albert.

The chickens alone are valued at $250,000 and the Ravens also own three large laying buildings, with a fourth and even larger one under construction.

The St. Albert man also is a believer in automation. Feed is mixed in an automatic feed mill and distributed by an electric feed cart.

"Since I got automated," he says, "I can look after 26,000 birds as easily as 1,500."

Mr. Raven's philosophy of business and farming is simple.

"Farmers have to get bigger and fewer to be practical and economical. There's no hope for the man with a few cows, pigs and 100 chickens. He'll never starve to death, but he'll never make a dollar either."

Vancouver Is Mecca for Young Vagabonds

VANCOUVER (CP) — The backgrounds of British Columbia's young unemployed vary from upper middle class to well below the poverty line.

Educated or not, they live off unemployment insurance, welfare or spare change panhandled in front of a downtown department store.

There are 30,400 of them, under 25 years of age, in the province. Hundreds of young vagabonds came to B.C. last summer looking for the good life but found a jobless rate of 8.6 per cent.

"B.C. has a migration problem no other part of the country faces," says Murray Perry, information services adviser for the Pacific region of the department of manpower and immigration.

"Vancouver is the mecca, the magnet. Fifty-three per cent of the province's labor force lives in Metropolitan Vancouver and when you have that many people looking for a job, it's bound to be tough."

John, 22, is bilingual and bitter.

He needs two courses to complete the arts degree program he started three years ago at McGill University in Montreal. Today, he's not sure he'll ever go back.

"All my life, I was told if I worked hard and stayed in school, I'd have it made," he said.

"Well, the work ethic doesn't mean much when you can't get a job and all you hear is 'I'm sorry, you're over-qualified.'

"I'd be better off if I'd quit in high school. At least then, I could work as a swamper or a stock boy."

Mr. Perry says John and others with similar educational backgrounds are probably in the toughest position in a buyer's job market, especially at the low end of the wage scale.

"Like it or not, employers look on them as potential troublemakers," said Mr. Perry.

"They have no rapport with their fellow workers because they've had the benefit of a university education and foremen see them as a threat to their own security."

Dale would probably be considered "safe" by most industry employers—if he wanted to work.

Barely 18, he left Scarborough, Ont., last spring to get away from the "hassles . . . you know, parents, school, the whole number."

Since then, he has worked 17 days, most of them here-today-gone-tomorrow jobs like door-to-door distribution of advertising flyers.

He and three others rent a dilapidated house on the fringe of skid road for $55 a month.

"I haven't looked for a job for six months, maybe eight.

"Look man, I get $80 a month cash from welfare. So does Eddie and the two chicks get some too. We take care of each other and nobody tells us what time we have to punch in and punch out."

Dale is one of the kids the manpower department is trying to reach with programs such as Outreach, in conjunction with the YMCA.

Sixty youths between the ages of 17 and 24 will spend six weeks this winter at Camp Howdy, the YMCA summer day camp on Indian Arm northeast of Vancouver, where Mr. Perry says "we can teach them what it is to work."

Dave Adair, research director of the Inner-City Service Project which among other things operates it own youth hostel, sees the current large pool of unemployed young people as a permanent situation.

"It's not simply a matter of inflation and a bad employment year," he says.

"It's becoming more and more apparent that the traditional job market is not going to accommodate young people, leaving aside questions like their life style, hair length or whether or not they take drugs.

"The economy is simply expanding more slowly than the number of people on the job market."

Adair says what Canadians are seeing now are products of the post-war baby boom, kept off the job market until recently by pushing universities to capacity.

Youth Program Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says federal planners are putting together proposals for a new $50 million youth program this summer that would include provisions for a fleet of 25 buses to carry young transients across the country without charge.

The newspaper says in a report from Ottawa that the program is prompted by predictions that more than 250,000 students may be unemployed this summer.

It says the proposals are under study by an inter-departmental committee of officials, and has not yet received cabinet approval.

Another proposal calls for creation of a youth village, probably in Ottawa, at a cost to the federal government of $100,000.

The newspaper says other ideas include a major campaign to boost student employment, the establishment of youth information kiosks in major centres, and a new and more comprehensive hostel scheme.

Last year, federal armories were made available as youth hostels. But the scheme created friction with local authorities who had no control of the armories. This year, the newspaper said, planners hope to avoid the problem by involving each community in the management of the hostels.

Although the bus scheme remains undefined, the newspaper says planners envisage regular runs by the fleet, using hostels in cities along the route as overnight stopover points. Each bus would have its youth leader, employed by the government, to provide information and advice.

Young persons wishing to see the country need only to register at a hostel to qualify for a ride with the fleet.

Ottawa spent $28 million last year on a youth program.

Students Seek To Make Choice Of Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Students in universities across Canada are adopting a potent tactic in their struggle to gain control over what they are taught, and by whom.

Following the lead of the University of Toronto, a growing number of university student councils are spending thousands of dollars each year to compile and circulate critical evaluations of their professors and courses.

"The aim is to get structural changes that will bring students into the decision-making process at an equal level with faculty; to get control over the positions that are going to be affecting students," says Craig Heron, education consultant to the Student Advisory Council at University of Toronto.

Reaction from faculty members to the evaluations has been mixed. While many professors agree they serve a valid purpose, almost all disagree with the way students gather and process their data.

A survey by The Canadian Press showed that student groups or student councils in at least 17 Canadian universities either have produced or plan to produce booklets evaluating course material and professors.

Among those who have produced evaluating programs are Memorial University, St. John's Nfld.; Saskatchewan, Alberta, Calgary, Victoria and the Ontario universities of Windsor, Western Ontario, Trent and Carleton. No student evaluations have been done in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, or Manitoba. Loyola is the only Quebec university to consider such a plan.

Diane Hebert, secretary of the University of Saskatchewan student union at Regina, says the guide was not well received by students who found it too complicated.

While some university administrations subsidize production costs, a number of student councils refuse financial help.

Many faculty members, although realizing the value of some form of evaluation, fear that the unprofessional approach taken in some of the grading systems results in inaccuracies which may be harmful to students—and to the careers of some professors.

A random sampling of the University of Toronto booklets produces the following comments:

—"If the professor can be found to have a bias or worldview, it would have to be defined as liberal marshmallowism. He agrees with just about anything, unless pressed."

—"I am tired of hearing the professor repeat: 'I really don't know what it's like in Canada, but this is how it is in the U.S., so by and large it must be the same in Canada.' "

The evaluations usually are based on questionnaires containing from 20 to 65 multiple-choice questions pertaining to the specific course. Students also are asked to comment on the course in general and on the professor.

David Gallop, professor of philosophy at Trent University in Peterborough, Ont., is concerned about the adverse effect evaluations might have on professors' careers.

"Potentially they're very harmful," he says. He notes that the Canadian University Faculty Association plans to make a detailed study of how evaluations are being made.

John Beattie, associate professor of history at University of Toronto, considers student evaluations essential, but warns they do not provide the final answer.

"If there is going to be any evaluation of the faculty by faculty, one of the criteria must be a man's teaching ability," he says. "We can discover his scholarly ability ourselves but there is no way we can make a judgment of his teaching ability."

Student evaluations currently provide "the only instrument for getting some kind of opinion of the man teaching."

However, he adds, "it's just too big a job to leave to the students." Some professional help in opinion taking is needed.

Broadbent Is Getting Support

TORONTO (CP) — A 14-member committee, including two members of the House of Commons and two from the Ontario legislature, will promote Ontario support for Ed Broadbent, member of Parliament for Oshawa—Whitby, as new leader of the federal New Democratic Party.

Co-chairmen of the committee are James Renwick, legislature member for Toronto Riverdale, and Cliff Pilkey, NDP MPP for Oshawa.

John Gilbert, NDP MP for Toronto Broadview, will be finance chairman, and Arnold Peters, MP for Timiskaming, is one of 11 committee members.

Mr. Broadbent told a Queen's Park news conference he has the support of about one-third of the federal NDP caucus, including three of its five Ontario members.

The national party's deputy leader, David Lewis, has the declared support only of Max Saltsman of Kitchener and only Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood) has not declared his support, Mr. Broadbent said.

He said he expects Frank Howard, an NDP MP from British Columbia, to enter the leadership race before the party's April convention, and there also may be one or two candidates from Saskatchewan.

Already seeking to succeed Tommy Douglas in addition to Mr. Broadbent are Mr. Lewis, John Harney, a former secretary of the Ontario party, and Jim Laxer of Kingston, a representative of the NDP's Waffle group of economic nationalists.

Mr. Renwick said he decided to support Mr. Broadbent and not Mr. Harney, who is an old friend, because in his statements "he does not seem to communicate clearly with me."

Mr. Broadbent said he became a candidate to create a debate over what he believes is the NDP failure to show itself as the "only real alternative" to the Liberal government at Ottawa.

The federal NDP, unlike the party in Ontario, has "not presented this kind of alternative," he said.

"All too often they have criticized Liberal legislation and have then, inconsistently, voted for it."

Hormone Find Key to Growth

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Faced with inflation and budgetary cuts, the scientists who synthesized human growth hormone had to borrow a $30,000 instrument to finish their work.

Announcement of the synthesis, a breakthrough in hormone research, was made Wednesday at a news conference by Dr. C. H. Li, professor of biochemistry and director of the hormone research laboratory at the University of California.

Li's career studying hormones, the chemical messengers that regulate the body's functions spans 32 years.

The instrument borrowed from the Children's Cancer Research Institute in Boston, Mass., was used in the step-by-step construction of the hormone, which is a chain-like protein molecule of 188 amino acid links.

Li and his colleagues borrowed it when they were unable to buy their own because of financial pressures on the laboratory caused by inflation and cuts in federal funding of scientific research.

Synthesis of human growth hormone (HGH) gives scientists a powerful new tool for probing many diseases, including cancer, arteriosclerosis and dwarfism.

Human growth hormone is secreted by the pituitary, a gland the size of a pea located at the base of the brain. The pituitary secretes more than a dozen hormones that in turn control secretion of still more hormones by other glands.

In the past, HGH was available only from pituitaries taken from cadavers. The small, expensive supply was enough only for study of its structure and function and treatment of a few isolated cases of dwarfism in children It was found to be effective in overcoming dwarfism caused by pituitary problems.

But scientists discovered that HGH and growth hormone from sheep and cattle when administered to laboratory animals caused other effects besides stimulating growth. The hormone appears to hasten the healing of fractures and wounds, enhances the effectiveness of the sex hormones, aids the body in production of antibodies to fight disease and lowers cholesterol in the blood.

"If you can synthesize a growth molecule, as we have done, then perhaps you can synthesize an anti-growth molecule and then an anti-cancer molecule," Li said. "Not only normal tissue growth, but abnormal tissue growth, like cancer, may depend on this molecule."

Since HGH affects cholesterol levels in the blood, and cholesterol is a factor in coronary heart disease, perhaps a slight change in the HGH molecule could lead to a chemical to control the arteriosclerosis-producing cholesterol, Li said.

Don't Buy, Rent

Vancouver architect Dick Mann says ownership of land is "a monstrous, pagan religion." Mr. Mann believes it would be much better if people rented their homes and invested their money in areas that need development, instad of buying homes. (CP Photo)

Pack-a-day Smoker Is Hundred

HOUNSLOW, England (AP) — Annie Jones, who says she has puffed a pack of cigarettes a day for as long as she can remember, celebrated her 100th birthday Wednesday in a haze of tobacco smoke.

"Smoking's never done me any harm," Annie told friends and relatives celebrating her centenary.

She said she wasn't in the least concerned by the latest warning from the Royal College of Physicians that people who buy cigarettes have a stake in a "lottery of death."

"I'm feeling fine," said Annie, who only admits to poor eyesight and partial deafness as a result of her age.

Counselling for Indians Rather Than Punishment

CALGARY (CP) — An Indian social worker says Canada's natives "need counselling rather than ineffective punishment behind bars."

Russell Smith, an Ojibway Indian, said the two levels of government spend millions of dollars in apprehending, judging, sentencing and keeping natives in jail.

Mr. Smith, a counsellor at the Calgary Indian Friendship Centre, said that if only a fraction was spent on rehabilitation, it would help in getting people functioning in society again.

Mr. Smith made the remarks in an address to the annual meeting of the Elizabeth Fry Society, an organization which helps women who have been in jail.

Alcoholism was the No. 1 destroyer of Canada's native people and was a frightening disease "which is desecrating the very cultural structure" of Canadian Indians.

Although native people constitute only five per cent of Alberta's population, they made up 53 per cent of prisoners in jails.

In 1968 a study in Alberta had found that of all persons committed to correctional institutions in the province, 44 per cent of the men, 88 per cent of the women, 31 per cent of the boys and 75 per cent of the girls were Indian or Metis.

Although their committal rate was at least seven times greater than that of society in general, natives seldom were involved in serious crimes. In most cases they went to jail for offences associated with use of liquor.

The Indian mortality rate between the ages of 20 and 39 was three to five times greater than the national rate, and this was due in no small part to accidents and suicides while intoxicated.

Other undesirable effects of alcoholism on native society were malnutrition of alcoholics and their families, fires and other tragedies, loss of jobs due to hangovers and absenteeism, and loss of dignity.

Mr. Smith, a director of a proposed home in Calgary for alcoholic Indian women, said governments should spend money for Indians the right way and the money would be well spent if only a small amount was given to projects such as the home for alcoholic women which will attempt to break the cycle of addiction and get women with this problem functioning in society again.

U.C.W. Meeting

BRIDGE ST. UCW

The final meeting of Bridge Street United Church Women for the year 1970 was highlighted with a visit by three members of the local International Club who each displayed articles of interest from their native countries. They were also attired in native dress.

Mrs. B. M. Hegdekar from India told of the Hindu Festival of lights as celebrated in her country. She outlined the traditional customs and described the various types of food. An Indian dessert gajar halva was supervised in its preparation by her and was later enjoyed by the gathering.

From Greece, Mrs. John L. Zikopoulos told how Easter was considered a most important Christian event there, and described how it was observed. Mrs. W. J. Yeotes supervised the baking of a Greek dessert which was also served to all present.

During the meeting there was a timely devotional in charge of Miss Olive Root assisted by Mrs. P. Kitcher.

WEDDING

VALLANCE — PYM

December 26, 1970 was the date when Violet May Pym, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pym of Belleville was united in marriage to Charles Garry Vallance, son of Mrs. Lucille Vallance and the late William Vallance of Whitby. The ceremony which was conducted by Monsignor J. P. Sullivan took place in St. Michael's Church, Belleville. Miss Dorothy Grant provided organ music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white street-length crepe dress with a shoulder-length veil. Her bouquet consisted of white 'mums and red roses.

Mrs. Olga Dano, the matron of honor wore a blue lace dress with a matching headpiece.

The bridegroom was attended by Paul Dano as best man while the ushers were Arthur Pym and Ted Sutherland.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister-in-law. Guests were greeted by the bride's mother who was in a mauve crepe dress and wore a corsage of yellow carnations.

For the wedding trip to points west, the bride left in a pink two-piece suit with matching accessories. Upon return the newly married couple will reside in Belleville.

ONLY IF NECESSARY

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Girton College, largest and oldest of Cambridge University's three women's colleges, asked permission to admit men but said it would do so only "if it becomes educationally desirable and necessary." Three of the university's 20 male colleges have announced they will take female students.

Authority Says Canadians Are Just Average Readers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although reading is nearly universal in Canada, we don't read as well, on the average as Americans, says Dr. Edward Summers, a leading authority on reading and a member of the faculty of the University of British Columbia.

The basic reason, says Dr. Summers, is that Americans now are doing more research and using newer techniques in teaching children to read.

Dr. Summers returned to Vancouver recently from Washington, D.C., where he served as chairman of a presidential committee on children's reading.

He is convinced Canadians don't read well enough on the average.

"Too many children here in B.C. don't read as well as they might. Without this ability they are handicapped throughout their school careers and after.

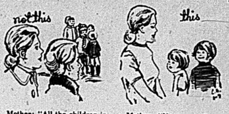
"The child who doesn't read well is always struggling to keep up with the others. He is often the dropout in high school. In today's complicated world, a good reading facility is essential."

Dr. Summers says new methods directed at pre-school children are important. Kindergarten, pre-school and "head start" programs were were valuable, and TV learning programs, such as Sesame Street, were producing a general of articulate three-four-and five-year-olds.

"We have to educate the children of today, and they need to read to learn — and will continue to have to do so for a long time."

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "All the children in the neighborhood congregate here every day. I feel as if I'm running a free day-care centre. I want Judy and Joan to have friends, but I wish the other mothers would do some of the entertaining."

Mother: "You are welcome to have your friends here often, but we do need a few rules. You must ask me in advance if you want someone to stay for a meal, and the children must not come before 9:30 in the morning. Also 1 to 4 in the afternoon is quiet time here."

A hospitable mother is likely to have a house full of young neighbor children from morning to night, unless she makes some definite visiting rules. Apply the rules consistently and the children (as well as their mothers) soon will follow them.

Successful Living

20th Century Threatened Doom of Bachelors

By DORIS CLARK

The new century opens with a gloomy outlook for bachelors. It has always taken talent to enable an eligible young man to remain single. In the future nothing short of absolute diplomatic genius will keep his neck out of the matrimonial halter.

More portentous still is the fact that the twentieth-century woman is going to take a hand in the love-making. She is going to be wooer, as well as wooed, and when one reflects on how thorough, and scientific, and determined the modern woman is in everything she undertakes, it is enough to send the cold chills down the backbone of every man who cherishes a preference for personal liberty . . .

A hundred years from now we may look forward to the Barnum - of - the - future advertising, as one of the attractions of his unparalleled side show, a genuine, bald-headed bachelor. — Dorothy Dix, January, 1900.

• • •

Dear Doris: You talk about the importance of loving gestures, hugs and kisses. In my family no one ever held out both arms in welcome or hugged one in farewell. Until one has received it one never really realizes the hunger for it which has always been there, in the inner reaches of the heart.

The only time I can ever remember spontaneously reaching out and putting my arms around a friend (when I was a child at school) I was coldly rebuffed. "Oh, Peg," I said, "I like you". She threw off my encircling arms, and said, "Well, I don't like you. Next time make sure someone likes you before you try touching them!" I never did it again.

Oh sure, now I reach out — in answer — but I never initiate such a gesture. How I envy warm people with poise, who are able to do this! — Trying to Reach Out.

Dear Trying: A rebuff like that takes a lot of overcoming. I think you did well to go as far as you did, when you had no such example at home.

With your sympathy for people, you can become aware of another person's need. You can also reach out in affection to your own children. Try again!

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am a girl in grade 9, and I'm 14 years old. I would like to be popular. I'm friendly with the girls in my room, and some of the boys.

But at every dance the only partner I get is my girl friend. I'm not athletic, and I'm not a swinger, or pretty. I've got nice clothes, and I try to be friendly and myself, but nothing positive happens.

I mean, the boys — a few of them — talk to me a little, but none of them seem to like me especially. What should I do or not do? — Unpopular.

Dear Unpopular: I am printing your letter, because many girls your age feel the same way, and needn't. You don't have to be athletic or a swinger or pretty to have people like you.

But most boys your age just don't swing into it. Haven't you noticed that they still stand on one side of the dance hall with the girls on the other — as if never the twain should meet?

Dancing with another girl is not a bad way to perfect the new dance steps. Just keep on in your own friendly way and one of these days the situation will change.

Ann Landers

Student Annoyed By Many Propositions

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a sophomore at the University of Arizona. Age 19. Height 5' 10". Weight 160. I dress like most of the guys around here — and I look like a normal 19-year-old kid. I like girls but I don't date much because I'm too busy working a part-time job and hitting the books. For some unknown reason I've propositioned by queens three times since September. This bothers the living daylights out of me.

ANN LANDERS

Last night I was having a bottle of pop at the Student Union and this creepy kid came up to me and said he was a photographer. He handed me a card with his name and address on it and asked me if I'd like to model for some pictures. He said he'd pay me well for my time because he worked on commission for a couple of advertising agencies.

Of all the cornball junk this has got to be the crummiest line yet. I was so doggone mad I nearly punched him in the mouth. Please tell me why a straight guy would attract these kooks? What can I do about it? — SHOOK IN THE DESERT.

DEAR SHOOK: If you'll check with your buddies you'd discover that almost all of them get a few passes now and then. You seem to be getting more than your share, however, and it's probably because you are prettier than most guys.

My advice is to keep your cool. Tell the crusiers to shove off. You don't need to punch anybody in the mouth to get the idea across that you're not interested.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am still burning from your lousy advice to that poor girl whose in-laws hounded her so unmercifully to have a baby that she finally decided to fake it by putting a pillow under her dress. Why in the world did you tell her to see a psychiatrist? It's her in-laws who are nuts. The girl was merely seeking a solution to her problem.

I know what I'm talking about, Ann, because my crazy in-laws were the same way. They were so obsessed with the desire to be grandparents that they drove my sister-in-law to the divorce court and they pressured me into having four kids I didn't want. It was the only way to shut them up and get them off my back.

So please, Ann Landers, get with it or turn in your typewriter. I'm beginning to think you are the one who should see a psychiatrist. — MONTREAL.

DEAR MON: You had four kids you didn't want just to shut your in-laws up and get them off your back? And I should see a psychiatrist? Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's how I solved the non-stop-barking-dog dilemma: After three sleepless nights I got out of bed (at 3:00 a.m.), drove my car out of the garage, parked in the driveway right under our neighbor's window and leaned on the horn. I kept the horn going for 15 minutes without a let-up. The neighbors came out wild-eyed — screaming threats about having me arrested for disturbing the peace. I told them I was not making any more noise than their dog. Within three minutes they took the mutt in the house. Since that night we've never heard a sound out of man or dog. — BEAUTIFUL DREAMER.

DEAR BEAUTIFUL: Thanks for writing. You're lucky the neighbors on the other side didn't call the police!

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Applesauce Lime Jelly

By MARY MOORE

Today's recipe was sparked by some flat, fizzless ginger ale in my refrigerator.

My cousin Daisy, basking in the sun in Florida, included this idea in her Christmas greeting card to me and I added a few touches and think our reducers and our thrifty cooks will like it. To say the least it is different.

APPLESAUCE LIME JELLY WITH YOGURT
(4 generous servings)

- 2 cups slightly thin unsweetened applesauce (3 apples plus 2-3 cup water)
- One 3-oz. pkge. lime jelly powder
- 1 cup fresh or stale ginger ale
- Apple spice yogurt for topping

Wash, pare, core and cut apples in eighths, add water and cook covered until apples are tender. Beat with rotary beater to break up apples. Measure. You should have 2 cups. Add jelly powder to hot applesauce and stir until dissolved. Add ginger ale and pour into four stemmed glasses and chill until set.

Serve topped with yogurt instead of whipped cream or whipped topping. We found the new apple spice yogurt particularly appropriate for this dish but some of our testers tried banana and apricot flavored yogurt and rooted for them.

Nudged on by our readers I put five different flavors of yogurt in the refrigerator to compare. Vanilla: good for all-purpose uses. (One of our readers eats a 6-oz. plastic containerful for breakfast nowadays instead of her usual poached egg for she is constantly reducing and her doctor says seven eggs per week provide too much cholesterol.) Prune: good just as is for a light dessert or of course as a topping on canned fruit; Pineapple and Strawberry: lovely on plain rice or tapioca or blanc mange puddings; Spiced Apple: good on cottage pudding or jelly — see above.

Dinner Menu

THURSDAY

SUNDAY

Glazed Baked Ham; Niblet Corn with Green Pepper; Braised Red Cabbage; Waldorf Salad with Blanched Almonds; Vanilla Ice Cream with Hot Pineapple Sauce; Tea.

Pickering Bans Night Use

Proposed Restrictions Dismay Snowmobilers

TORONTO (CP) — An outright ban for 10 hours a day on snowmobiles in one Toronto-area township and snowmobilers' outcries against further restrictions on their sport Wednesday pointed up the dilemma of public officials in dealing with the winter vehicles.

So far 46 Canadians have been killed this winter in snowmobile accidents

On a sombre note, a five-man coroner's jury at Keswick, Ont., all of them experienced with snowmobiles, called for greater restrictions and the mandatory wearing of safety helmets by drivers.

Meanwhile, at a Toronto seminar, snowmobilers and Ontario safety officials disagreed Wednesday over what steps to take to curb the mounting snowmobile accident rates.

In other developments:

—Vic Waring, president of the 15,000-member Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs, opposed further restrictions against them on public roads.

—Marie Curtis, secretary of the Ontario Federation of Mayors and Reeves, said many of Ontario's rural townships and counties hesitate to ban snowmobiles because they haven't enough police to enforce such restrictions.

—Pickering Township banned the use of snowmobiles between 10 p.m. and 8 a.m. and restricted their use at other times, effective immediately.

—The president of North America's largest snowmobile manufacturing company said that more than half of the 46 killed were operating on the road "which is illegal in most parts of Canada."

"What we need is not more legislation but enforcement of the present laws."

Pickering Township, just east of Toronto, is eight miles wide and stretches north about 10 miles from Lake Ontario and the outskirts of the town of Whitby. The southern quarter has a heavy urban rural population and the north is largely rural.

A bylaw passed by township council bans snowmobiles from all sidewalks in the township. It also prohibits their use on all township controlled roads south of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

They also are restricted to the right side of highway rights of way on all township controlled roads north of the freeway—the bulk of the township roads—and prohibited from use on private property without the consent of the property owner.

Infractions of the bylaw call for fines ranging from $20 to $300

"This is awful," said Don Pearson, an executive of the Pickering Snow Rovers Snowmobile Club. "Most of us don't get out on our snowmobiles until 9 p.m. because we have to work and it's sure to the kill the sport out here"

The Keswick inquest was looking into [illegible] mond Steven Wright, 28, who suffered severe brain damage on a golf course Dec. 20 when his head hit a protective wire around a green while snowmobiling. The death was ruled accidental.

The jury recommended that golf clubs use colorful snow fences on their courses rather than single wires, that snowmobile lights be battery-operated and that the machines have dual head, tail and brake lights and that they be equipped with tow hitches.

It also called for an 11 p.m. curfew on snowmobile operation in built-up areas and recommended that a safety booklet be published.

MPs Will Face Hectic Month

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs trooping into the Commons Monday after their three-week Christmas recess will face a hectic month, especially in House committees.

And one opposition spokesman says they'll "raise hell" if the government doesn't ease the committee load. There are 18 standing House committees, two special committees and one special joint committee shared with the Senate.

Government sources say about 10 major government bills will be introduced in the Commons in the coming weeks, all but a few to be studied by committees. These include a measure to control air pollution, bail reform, and establishment of the long-promised Canada development corporation.

Opposition MPs, who have complained for months that it is impossible for them to attend all the committees to which they belong, have reached the end of the complaining stage, says Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin.

He says opposition MPs are members of about three committees each.

He wants one of the committees—procedure and organization—to sort out the scramble. But it is up to the government to allow the committee to start that chore.

Seven bills now in committee are hold-overs from the pre-Christmas rush. Among them:

—The agriculture committee is studying the farm products marketing agencies bill that would establish a national farm products marketing council and authorize establishment of national marketing agencies for specific commodities.

—The finance committee is studying a bill to rename the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as Statistics Canada and allow the body to gather tax information from the revenue department.

—The welfare committee is studying a bill to introduce the metric system as a legal measuring standard in Canada and allow the government to set accuracy standards for various meters and scales.

These three committees, along with the special committee on election expenses, the public accounts committee and the special committee on pollution, will all meet next week.

The special joint committee on the constitution travels next week to Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria, Kamloops, B.C., Lethbridge, Alta., and Calgary for public hearings.

The agriculture committee starts a cross-Canada tour Jan. 20, with hearings on the marketing bill in Halifax, Quebec City, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver.

Eight other committees will resume work this month, on issues ranging from the white papers on external affairs and unemployment insurance to a petition from 13 Glace Bay, N.S., employees of the Cape Breton Development Corp. urging a better retirement plan.

Snowmobile Patrol Planned in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government is forming a snowmobile patrol to act as both a policing and training program for snowmobile drivers, Youth Minister Gordon Taylor said in an interview Wednesday.

"The concept, which is evolving slowly, is based on the ski patrol," Mr. Taylor said.

"They will have no power to arrest, it is a self-disciplining thing.

"It's impossible to have policemen chasing after snowmobiles everywhere in the province."

The youth department has started a training school, Mr. Taylor said, and plans to issue certificates identifying trained drivers as patrol members.

Some of the patrol members will be attached to clubs to enforce already stringent snowmobile regulations.

"We want to keep it a sport and not have a few people spoiling it for everybody," Mr. Taylor said.

Canada Started Something by Recognition of Red China

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada really started something when it recognized the Communist government of mainland China last Oct. 13.

Since then four other countries—Italy, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia and Chile—have done the same, bringing to 57 the total number that now have diplomatic relations with Peking.

Others still, including Turkey and Iran, may follow suit.

The latest to join the bandwagon is Chile, which Tuesday became the first South American state to establish ties with the Peking regime.

A comparison of the recognition formulas used in each of the five cases reveals some significant points of difference and political nuance.

It shows particularly a variation between the approach of the Western world, as represented by Canada and Italy, and the so-called third world as represented by Ethiopia and Equatorial Guinea.

The formula accepted by the new Chilean government under Marxist President Salvador Allende falls, interestingly enough, into the same category as the Canadian and Italian.

A file of the various bilateral accords with Peking, as outlined in official public declarations, was made available to The Canadian Press by the external affairs department.

Italy and Chile in their respective joint declarations with China followed almost word-for-word the format worked out earlier by Canada and China.

Like Canada, these two countries took note of Peking's territorial claim to the Nationalist-held island of Formosa without either endorsing it or opposing it.

Formosa's status was the most contentious issue faced by Canadian and Communist diplomats during their protracted negotiations at Stockholm leading up to recognition.

Canada acceded to Peking's demand that it sever relations with the Nationalists and vote for the supplanting of Nationalist representatives by Communist representatives at the United Nations. This last undertaking was not written into the Stockholm agreement.

Later, there were rumblings in the Italian press that Canada had given away too much at the Stockhilm talks, thereby undermining the bargaining position of Italy and other countries wishing to negotiate an accord with China.

The only real difference between the Canadian, Italian and Chilean agreements with China was a housekeeping one. Ottawa and Peking undertook to exchange ambassadors within six months, Rome and Peking within three, Santiago and Peking "within the shortest possible period."

Canada, Italy and Chile recognized the Communist government as the sole legal government of China. But they didn't go as far as Ethiopia and Equatorial Guinea, which recognized Peking as the sole legal government of "the entire Chinese people."

The Formosan question was not directly referred to in the formal agreements between the two African states and China.

On the other hand, the accords do contain a commitment by Peking to support Equatorial Guinea and Ethiopia in their "struggle against imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism."

And they do contain in unabridged form the five Bandung principles of peaceful co-existence which Peking says should guide international foreign policies.

Tape Will Give Facts to Doctors

OTTAWA (CP) — A new way to keep doctors abreast of medical knowledge and to get an advertising message to them at the same time is being launched by a Canadian company, Medifacts Ltd., of Ottawa.

The prospect of Medifacts starting operations in March is causing concern among established medical publications about a possible decrease in advertising revenues.

The new service will use tape cassettes mailed every two weeks to doctor-subscribers, each containing five paid lectures of about five minutes duration written by recognized medical authorities.

One-minute commercials from drug manufacturers and medical news items will be interspersed with the lectures.

All the busy doctor has to do is pop the cassette into his tape recorder when he has a few spare minutes—for example, when driving his car. The tapes will become his indexed medical reference library.

The doctor pays $2 a month for the service and the advertising drug firms pay for the commercials. Medifacts has projected earnings of more than $4 a share after the second full year of operation.

Dr. A. F. W. Peart, who resigned as secretary of the Canadian Medical Association last year, heads Medifacts as president. He said he first heard of it, after leaving the medical association, from Gerald Waring, Ottawa newspaper columnist who is Medifacts secretary-treasurer and operations director.

The decision to launch the service resulted from a survey paid for by Medifacts and undertaken by the College of Family Physicians which asked 2,500 doctor-members their views.

It produced nearly 94 per cent favorable response with 1,311 of 1,395 responding doctors saying they would like to receive the cassettes. Those who lack players can get them on special terms from Medifacts.

A number of audio and audio-visual medical education programs now are operating in North America but the Canadian firm says it will be the first to use the tape cassette approach with specially-commissioned lectures here.

Dr. Peart, president-elect of the World Medical Association, said that in addition to discussions with the College of Family Physicians, Medifacts also is negotiating with the Canadian Dental Association which wants a service for continuing education of dentists.

Argument Settled: Russ Jackson Not Free Football Agent

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Is Russ Jackson a free agent?

Argument on that point is the Teamtime Topic from Parliament Hill in Ottawa to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto and right out to Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

And the answer is no. The peerless pivot of Ottawa Rough Riders is still bound to that Eastern Football Conference club from which he retired after leading them to the 1969 Grey Cup.

When Jackson bowed out—carting off just about every trophy for which he was eligible—he was clear-eyed and adamant that he would give ear to no loud exhortations to return.

A year later, however, it was the quiet riffling of $100,000 by British Columbia Lions that caught his undivided attention. Then Toronto Argonauts said that if there was to be any bidding done, they might like to attend the auction.

Jackson admitted he would be a candidate for a buckled jersey if he was not interested in such wages, but insisted that anyone interested in him would first have to speak to the Riders.

That's when the arguments started—was Jackson, who had sat out football for a year, a free agent or not?

It was pointed out that the standard players contract calls for a club to give notice in writing to a player, on or before June 1 of the contract year, that they wish to retain him. Riders neglected to do this.

However, the club has an escape clause. Jackson went on the Ottawa voluntarily retired list in February, 1970. His contract did not expire until June 1. Therefore, should he wish to return to the game at any time, he owes the Riders about four months, which means that when he comes back, the Ottawa management has four months to get that form letter to him which will sew him up for another year.

His year or more out of football has no bearing—you can play out your option, but you can't quit and sit it out.

It's all there in Clause 23 of the standard contract—a 175-word sentence which has to be read to be believed:

"Should the player become a member of the armed forces of either Canada or the United States of America, or retire from football prior to the expiration of this contract or any option contained herein and subsequently be released from the armed forces or return to professional football, then, and in either event, the time elapsed between the player's induction into the armed forces and his discharge therefrom, or between his retiring from professional football and his return thereto, shall be considered as tolled, and the term of this contract shall be considered as extended for a period beginning with the player's release from the armed forces or his return to professional football, as the case may be, and ending after a period of time equal to the portion of the term of this contract which was unexpired at the time the player entered the armed forces or retired from professional football; and the option contained herein shall be considered as continuously in effect from the date of this contract until the end of such extended term."

Any questions?

Basketball Makes Canadian Comeback

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Canadian basketball fans have had a long wait for an NBA return match, but it could very well be worth it.

The Los Angeles Lakers and the Cincinnati Royals are slated to play a regular season game at Maple Leaf Gardens, Thursday, January 14.

Ironically enough the first NBA game ever played was in the Ontario capital between the Toronto Huskies and the New York Knicks on Nov. 1, 1946. The Huskies folded operations soon after, and the game has been absent from Canada for the ensuing 24 years.

Toronto promoters have succeeded in arranging the Los Angeles - Cincinnati hook up, giving rise to the rumors that the attendance-plagued Royals may be moved to Metro.

A major franchise in Canada would be only fitting, since it was a Canadian, Dr. James A. Naismith who invented the game in 1892.

While the first professional game drew a crowd of only 8,000 spectators, the promoters are expecting twice that number to be on hand for next Thursday's match.

Interest in the game is said to be running high, drawing fans from as far as Ottawa. To help promote the game among high school students a reduction of $1.00 per ticket is being offered to groups of 25 or more.

Tickets are available at Maple Leaf Gardens and their ticket agencies or by phoning the promoters at 226-2227 or 363-8364.

The Lakers will be led by their trio of super stars, Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor and Jerry West.

Chamberlain, listed on the roster as seven-foot-one and 275 pounds (but claimed to be much bigger by his NBA opponents) holds 19 season's records and eight lifetime marks.

His most impressive mark came against New York Knickerbockers in 1962 when he pumped in 100 points in a single game becoming the only player in professional basketball history to even approach that feat.

The Laker pivot holds 15 of 16 records for scoring over 65 points in a game with teammate Elgin Baylor recording the other. Chamberlain, who professes to be harboring plans to contest Muhammed Ali's heavyweight boxing title, has never fouled out of an NBA contest.

Baylor has been among the top point-getters in the league throughout his lengthy career in addition to being a strong rebounder and the NBA's most dangerous man-on-man forward.

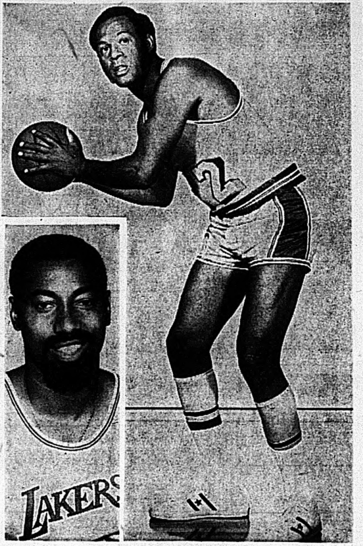
The third member of Los Angeles' super star trio is guard Jerry West, the greatest clutch player in the NBA.

The West Virginia graduate currently recuperating from a broken nose, holds eight different records for playoff competition and sports a scoring average of 30.9 for the post season pressure-cookers.

Coaching the Royals, who are reported to be contemplating a permanent move to Toronto, will be former Boston Celtic star Bob Cousy. The all-time great playmaker holds eight NBA records including a high of 13 all-star appearances.

Top player for Cincinnati will be guard Flynn Robinson, whom Cousy rated highly enough to trade superstar Oscar Robertson. The Royals employ a running type of offence that proved so successful for Cousy in his playing days with the Boston Celtics.

The Royal coach will give a basketball clinic at 6.30 p.m. Thursday, before the regular contest gets under way at 8 p.m.



Double Trouble

Two of the major attractions for next Thursday's NBA game in Toronto will be Los Angeles Lakers' stars Elgin Baylor and Wilt Chamberlain. Both players have been continually among the league's leading scorers and both have rebounded from serious knee operations which threatened to end their careers. Los Angeles is scheduled to meet the Cincinnati Royals in the 8 p.m. match at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Trojans Live Up To Name

"Working like Trojans" paid off for the Moira wrestling team last night as they easily won their tri-meet with Centennial and Napanee District High School.

Moira continued their domination of the Bay of Quinte section with a 54-10 win over Napanee and a 51-10 decision against Centennial. The Chargers took second place with a 41-20 edge against Napanee.

Brothers Bill and John Hinchey each had a pair of wins for Moira. Other double winners for the Trojans were Mike Kumpf, Dick Spencer, Stan Reston and Harold Brant.

Berry and Plevak of Centennial recorded two wins each for the second place finishers, while Babcock was the individual standout for Napanee.

In another meet held at BCI, the host Collegians took twin wins from Quinte and Picton.

BCI stopped the Saints 43-16 while downing Picton 55-10. Quinte took second place with a 35-20 victory over Prince Edward.

Godson Sets Point Pace

Change of Scenery Didn't Hurt

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

It seems all George Godson combinations show their worth on Senior hockey score sheets.

The nifty Peterborough centre was given a change of scenery by Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones earlier this season, moving from between longtime linemates Lorne O'Donnell and Al Ferguson to centre Ray Johnston and Wayne McConnell.

But latest club scoring statistics reveal that Godson is still the leading Mo-Hawk point producer, a title he also held the previous two seasons.

With six goals and 22 assists in 24 games, Godson is a notch ahead of Doug Senior, who sports a 12-15-27 record.

In third spot with 25 points is Al Ferguson, the Mo-Hawks' top goal-getter with 14. Ferguson led the club in goals last winter with 22.

This year's Mo-Hawk scoring picture is a much brighter one than last season's when the club managed 134 goals in the 40 - game schedule, and average of slightly more than three per game.

Just past the halfway mark this year, the club has connected 91 times, or slightly less than four per outing.

But what impresses Mo-Hawk playing coach Dave Jones is the defensive showing, largely on account of blueliners Lionel Botly, Greg Marchen, Lou Kazowski, Bob Wilson, and Mike Rexe, but also due to vastly improved checking by club forwards.

Winger Ray Johnston is a case in point. Johnston has only two goals and seven assists to show for 23 games. But his value is simply not revealed by statistics.

"In the past three weeks, Ray has been invaluable to us as a checker," says Jones. "I've never seen the club playing better defensively than they have been lately."

With only 87 goals against in 24 games, this marks the first time in the club's five-year history they have been on the plus side of the scoring ledger at this stage of a season.

Steve Rexe's goaltending hasn't done any harm, either. The redhead finished last season with a 3.89 goals-against average in 36 games. In 19 games he has played to date, Rexe sports a 3.41 average, fourth-best among OHA Senior A goaltenders.

Next chance to improve their statistical performances comes Friday night for the Mo-Hawks when they entertain Barrie Flyers in a 9 p.m. Memorial Arena game. Saturday the Mo-Hawks travel to Owen Sound.

Novices Stuck At One

Mulroney's Novice B all-stars couldn't get past the one-goal mark in a pair of OMHA games this week.

Sunday they were handed a 13-1 drubbing by Trenton. Mark Crawford was the lone Belleville goalgetter.

Tuesday night, it was Stirling pulling off a narrow 2-1 win. Crawford again scored Mulroney's only goal.

Abel Quits: Harkness 'No Coach'

DETROIT (AP) — "Well, did you make a trade? You're getting rid of Garry Unger aren't you?" old friend Frank (King) Clancy asked Sid Abel by telephone Wednesday.

"Sure, it's Unger isn't it?" the Toronto Maple Leafs vice-president asked confidently.

"No, it's not Unger," Abel responded somewhat laughingly. "I'm the one I'm getting rid of."

And sure enough, Wednesday afternoon at a news conference Abel announced his resignation as general manager of the National Hockey League's Detroit Red Wings, a post he has held since April, 1962. The announcement severed three decades of almost continuous service with the Wings in capacities as a player, coach and general manager.

SID ABEL

Abel, 52, minced no words in explaining his decision, made after a meeting with team owner Bruce Norris at Norris' Chicago office Tuesday.

"I said I cannot accept this hockey club the way it is run," Abel said with a hint of emotion. "And I said I can't accept the coach who's running it."

Then he laced into first-year Detroit coach Ned Harkness of Ottawa.

The Hockey Hall of Fame member, when asked to assess Harkness as a coach, said: "I can't because I don't think he is one. I might as well be blunt about it. He can't coach. I don't think he knows how to change lines or do other things necessary to win in this league."

Harkness, 49, became coach last April after a successful college coaching career at Rensellaer Polytechnic Institute and Cornell University.

He was hired by Norris on the recommendation of Jim Bishop, who joined the organization in 1969 with the title executive director. He and Harkness are friends and both are former lacrosse coaches.

"The Bishop-Harkness regime brought this whole thing to a boil and is the reason I'm leaving," Abel said in private later.

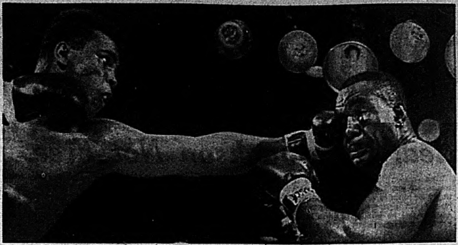
Harkness' reaction to Abel's slams were tempered but candid.

"I am very sorry that he has seen fit to demean me personally and professionally. I don't think anyone benefits by remarks of this kind, and I am more than willing to stand on my record as a coach."

That record is 176 victories, 96 losses and seven ties during 14 seasons at RPI in Troy, N.Y. The next seven seasons at Cornell at Ithaca, N.Y., his teams won 163, lost only 27, and tied two. The 1966-67 and 1969-70 teams were National Collegiate Athletic Association champions with 27-1 and 29-0 records respectively.

Abel broke into the NHL as a player with Detroit in 1938. In his 13 seasons—the first 12 at Detroit and final at Chicago—forward Abel scored 189 regular—season goals and 472 points.

His first year as coach was with Chicago in 1952-53, and he led the Black Hawks to their first playoff berth in nine years. The next season he also coached them, then moved to Detroit in 1957. His NHL coaching record is 379 victories, 418 losses, and 154 ties.



The Big Loss

Charles "Sonny" Liston, right, received a left to the eye from challenger Cassius Clay during third round of heavyweight championship fight in Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 25, 1964. Liston, who was found dead at his home late Tuesday night, according to sheriff's deputies, lost his title to Clay when he failed to answer the bell for the seventh round. Sinden Coaches Bruins Again

MONTREAL (CP) — The offensive power of Boston Bruins and the defensive strength of New York Rangers are much in evidence among the 12 East Division players selected by the National Hockey League Writers' Association for participation in the 24th annual NHL all-star game.

Six Rangers, five Bruins and one member of Montreal Canadiens make up the nucleus of the East Division team which will oppose the West Division all-stars at Boston Jan. 19.

There were three unanimous choices, with the Boston trio of Bobby Orr, Phil Esposito and John Bucyk each polling the maximum 105 points.

The team, with point totals in brackets:

Goal — Ed Giacomin, New York (84); Gilles Villemure, New York (36). Defence — Bobby Orr, Boston (105); Brad Park, New York (97); Jim Neilson, New York (39); J. C. Tremblay, Montreal (35). Centre — Phil Esposito, Boston (105); Jean Ratelle, New York (33). Right wing — Ken Hodge, Boston (87); John McKenzie, Boston (72). Left wing — John Bucyk, Boston (105); Dave Balon, New York (31).

These 12 players will be augmented by an additional eight to be selected from the other East Division teams by Harry Sinden, who will return to the NHL for the first time since guiding Boston to the Stanley Cup last spring to coach the all-stars. Sinden resigned from the Bruins four days after the team won the cup.

Alouettes Still Big Losers

MONTREAL (CP)—Despite their appearance in the 1970 Grey Cup and increased attendance during the regular season, Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference still lost money.

"All the final figures aren't in yet," said Alouettes' owner Sam Berger Wednesday night, "But in spite of the Grey Cup our losses will be in excess of $100,000."

The problem appears to be the Autostade where the team plays its home games. It is currently owned by the federal government and leased to the Als. The football team, however, is responsible for upkeep and renovations.

"We've been around and around this place trying to figure out what we could use it for in addition to football," said Berger, "but there just isn't much we can do without spending a lot of money."

Therefore, Berger acquired a franchise in the North American soccer league to help pay some of the bills.

Drugs Linked With Liston

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (CP) — Police say Sonny Liston was found dead with heroin in his home and needlemarks on his arms. But his former lawyer says the one-time heavyweight champion feared needles.

"In my experience he was afraid of needles," C. J. Murphy told reporters Wednesday night after new tests were ordered to learn what killed the big boxer. "He would do everything he could to avoid taking shots."

Murphy, a retired lawyer from Casper, Wyo., who had handled Liston's legal affairs since 1965, was asked whether the fighter used drugs.

"Not to my knowledge," he replied.

An initial autopsy Wednesday failed to uncover what killed Liston, 38. His wife Geraldine found him Tuesday night sprawled on a bed in their $60,000 home. Authorities said he may have been dead for 10 days.

Authorities said a quarter-ounce of heroin was found in a balloon in the kitchen of Liston's home in the fashionable Paradise Valley section of Las Vegas. They said a half-ounce of marijuana was in Liston's trousers pocket, but that no narcotics paraphernalia, such as hypodermic needles, was discovered.

Tissue and toxological examinations were planned by the Clark County coroner's office to pinpoint the cause of death.

Even as the former heavyweight king lay dead, plans were afoot in Europe to stage a fight between Liston and a European opponent.

Jim Wicks, trainer of European and British heavyweight titleholder, Henry Cooper, said in London he had been approached last week by Liston's manager, Howard Sheldon, on the possibility of Liston fighting against a European opponent.

Only an hour after learning of Liston's death Wednesday, Wicks said he received a telegram from Sheldon inquiring about a fight with the former European heavyweight champion, Jose Urtain of Spain.

"I'd just heard of Liston's death when the telegram came," Wicks said. "I'm absolutely staggered.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Not many years ago, John Ferguson and Ted Harris were considered the best one-two punch in the National Hockey League.

Injuries and age have mellowed them somewhat, but Wednesday night both served notice their reputations were well deserved.

Ferguson ignited Montreal Canadiens from a 2-0 deficit to a 7-3 victory over Vancouver Canucks and Harris stormed into anything wearing a Toronto Maple Leaf uniform, anchoring Minnesota North Stars to a 4-4 tie.

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3, Los Angeles Kings surprised Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 and California Golden Seals upset St. Louis Blues 6-3.

During Canadiens' glory years, Ferguson and Harris provided the muscle whenever the small, but fleet-footed Montreal skaters were intimidated by bigger opponents.

But years of dishing it out took their toll. Ferguson retired before the start of the current season and Harris, who matured into a rugged, effective rearguard, concentrated more on hockey. He later was shunted off to Minnesota in an off-season deal.

Ferguson returned to the Canadiens' lineup several weeks ago but until Wednesday nigh showed little inclination for the rough stuff.

Ironically, the Vancouver native was off for the first of his three minors early in the game when Canucks rookie Dale Tallon opened the scoring and 15 seconds later Paul Popiel gave the visitors a 2-0 lead.

When Ferguson and Vancouver's Mike Corrigan drew fighting majors at 3:44 for the first period, the pattern for the game was set and the Montrealers responded by tying the score before the period ended.

The Canadiens took a 5-2 lead during a relatively quiet second period before the roughhousing started again in the third stanza.

Fisticuffs broke out and again Ferguson was in the middle, this time lashing out at Corrigan on the Vancouver bench, a misdemeanor that earned him a misconduct penalty.

Montreal centre Ralph Backstrom, another early-season retirement who returned recently, was not dressed. The return of defenceman Jacques LaPerriere put Montreal one man over the player limit and coach Al McNeil decided not to dress the Kirkland Lake, Ont., veteran.

Backstrom, who did not learn until he arrived at the Forum he would not be playing, was reported to have stormed from the Canadiens' dressing room.

Harris, whose new-found maturity earned him the captain's job in Minnesota, turned most of his aggressiveness on the Leaf defencemen.

He mixed it up twice with Toronto's Jim Dorey and several times clashed with Bob Baun. His most serious offence, however, did not involve a Leaf player.

He argued profusely with referee John Ashley over a technicality involving the upsetting of the Toronto goal during a Minnesota power play and earned himself a 10-minute misconduct.

Toronto's Jim McKenny was credited with the goal that pulled them into a 4-4 tie. The goal was McKenny's first of the year and came off a scramble in front of Minnesota goalie Gump Worsley.

Bobby Clarke's second goal of the game snapped a 12-game winless string for the Flyers who had lost nine—five in a row—and tied two of their previous 11 games.

Clarke stole the puck from Pittsburgh defenders at 10:38 of the final period, skated in on Al Smith and deposited it for the winner after faking the Penguin goalie out of position.

The Black Hawks saw their unbeaten streak on home ice halted at 18 games, with Ross Lonsberry's second goal of the game going into an empty Chicago net in the final minute of play.

Los Angeles opened a two-goal lead in the second period before Jim Pappin brought Chicago back to a one-goal deficit, setting the stage for goalie Gerry Desjardin's removal late in the game for a sixth attacker and Lonsberry's insurance score.

Glenn Hall of St. Louis was the victim of all six goals scored by California. But California, ending a five-game los-Hall's relief, Ernie Wakely.

Musical Coaches Latest Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis Cardinals fired Charley Winner and Washington Redskins replaced Bill Austin with George Allen as the National Football League's game of musical coaches continued.

Wednesday's firings brought to nine the number of coaches to exit since the season began last September—and more departures are expected.

The others to be fired were Allen, a week ago by Los Angeles Rams, Clive Rush of Boston Patriots and Tom Fears of New Orleans Saints.

Phil Bengtson of Green Bay Packers, Wally Lemm of Houston Oilers and Blanton Collier of Cleveland Browns quit their jobs and Charlie Waller of San Diego Chargers stepped down when Sid Gillman returned.

And it has been reported that John Rauch of Buffalo Bills, Jim Dooley of Chicago Bears and Jerry Williams of Philadelphia Eagles also might be on their way out.

But a source close to the Eagles said Wednesday night that owner Leonard Tose has decided to retain Williams, who previously coached Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football League, at least through the last year of his three-year pact with the club.

Tose, dissatisfied with his team's 3-10-1 showing this year, said before Philadelphia's last game, against Pittsburgh, he would re-evaluate club personnel from general manager down.

Winner, who headed the Cards for five seasons—the longest coaching span in the club's history—survived a dismal 4-9-1 season in 1969 and appeared headed for the playoffs this season.

But his team managed to win only one of its final five games to finish at 8-5-1, third in the National Football Conference East.

Austin, who took over the Redskins upon the death of Vince Lombardi at the start of the 1970 season, piloted the team to four victories in its first seven games before a five-game losing skein saddled Washington with a 6-8, fourth-place finish in the NFC East.

Allen, also the Skins' new general manager, had a five-year, 49-17-4 record with the Rams, making him one of pro football's most successful coaches. He piloted them to a 9-4-1 mark in 1970, one game behind NFC champion San Francisco '49ers in the West.

Haywood Doesn't Help

Seattle's SuperSonics, who couldn't win with Spencer Haywood on the basketball court, didn't have any better luck with him 3,000 miles away waiting for another court to convene.

Boston Celtics, who officially joined the growing list of National Basketball Association teams protesting Seattle's signing of Haywood, exploded for 47 points in the final quarter Wednesday night and routed the Sonics 137-112.

In other NBA action, New York Knicks crushed Cleveland Cavaliers 127-94, Detroit Pistons nipped San Diego Rockets 100-99, Buffalo Braves beat San Francisco Warriors 115-108, Milwaukee Bucks clipped Chicago Bulls 119-106 and Cincinnati Royals tamed Portland Trail Blazers 133-128 in overtime.

The Celtics protested their home game before it began, contending Haywood was an ineligible player on the Seattle roster—even though he was on the West Coast, awaiting the opening of a court hearing to sort out the controversy.

He signed with Seattle after becoming disenchanted with his reported $1.9 million contract with Denver Rockets of the American Association. Other NBA teams argue that it violated a league rule prohibiting the signing of a player whose college class has not been graduated. Haywood turned pro after his sophomore year at the University of Detroit. His class will be graduated this June.

Boston broke a 90-90 tie by outscoring the Sonics 14-4 at the start of the final period, then steadily pulled away. John Havlicek's 32 points and Dave Cowens' 28 paced the Celts. Dick Snyder had 26 for Seattle.

NFC Dominates All-Pro Squad

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran quarterback John Brodie of San Francisco '49ers and linebacker Chuck Howley, a key member of the Doomsday Defence that propelled Dallas Cowboys into the Super Bowl, were named to the Associated Press All-Pro team Wednesday.

Brodie, who this season won his first passing title in a 14-year career, heads an offensive unit dominated by National Conference stars in the balloting of sports writers and broadcasters that for the first time encompasses every team in pro football.

In previous years, separate all-star teams were selected for the American and National Football Leagues.

Brodie led the offensive balloting with 59 of a possible 78 votes and was joined on the 24-man All-Pro team by two teammates—wide receiver Gene Washington and cornerback Jimmy Johnson.

Howley was the only member of the Cowboys or Baltimore Colts, who will meet in Miami, Jan. 17 in the Super Bowl for the NFL championship, to make the All-Pro elite.

In the backfield with Brodie were running backs Larry Brown of Washington Redskins and Ron Johnson of New York Giants while Washington, Dick Gordon of Chicago Bears and tight end Charlie Sanders of Detroit Lions took down the receiving spots.

Rounding out the offensive unit were centre Jim Otto of Oakland Raiders, guards Gale Gillingham of Green Bay Packers and Gene Upshaw of Oakland, tackles Jim Tyrer of Kansas City Chiefs and Bob Brown of Los Angeles Rams and placekicker Jan Stenerud of Kansas City.

The Chiefs, who finished second to the Raiders in the American Conference's Western Division, also placed hree men on the defensive unit. The total of five gave them more representation than any other team.

The other Chiefs landing berths were ouside linebacker Bobby Bell, cornerback James Marsalis and safety Johnny Robinson. Besides the Chiefs, only four other AFC players were named to the team while the NFC took 15 positions.

Middle linebacker Dick Butkus was the other member of the Bears to make it while defensive tackle Merlin Olsen was the other Rams' representative. The two Vikings named were defensive end Carl Eller and defensive tackle Alan Page, the leading defensive vote-getter with 52 votes.

Brodie Bests Blanda

NEW YORK (AP) John Brodie, the venerable San Francisco quarterback whose passing arm propelled the '49ers to their best finish in 25 years, was named Most Valuable Player in the National Football League today by The Associated Press.

Brodie, speaking as a passer and field general in his 14th season with the '49ers, beat out George Blanda, 43-year-old miracle worker of Oakland Raiders, in a two-man race.

The 35-year-old Brodie captured passing honors for the first time in his career, pacing the National Conference with 2,941 aerial yards and 24 touchdown tosses while leading the '49ers to the Western Division title—first of any kind in their history.

Wells Denies OHSIP 'Mess'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A cabinet decision on whether to include nursing home coverage in the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan (OHSIP) will have to wait until after the Progressive Conservative party elects a new leader next month, Thomas Wells, provincial health minister, said Wednesday.

Mr. Wells made the comment at a news conference in which he criticized conservative backbencher Dr. Richard Potter who has been critical of OHSIP's lack of nursing home coverage.

"I never quite understand by what he means as a 'mess'," Mr. Wells said in a reference to Dr. Potters statement in Windsor earlier this week when Dr. Potter termed provincial health insurance "a mess."

"As far as I am concerned," Mr. Wells said, "it certainly is not a mess."

The health minister said he did not disagree with Dr. Potter's contention that nursing home coverage should be included, and added the matter has been under consideration for some time but would have to wait until after the party's leadership race is settled.

Indians To Fight Bird Act

SARNIA (CP) — Ontario Indians indicated Wednesday that they plan to take another stand against the Migratory Birds Convention Act, saying it contravenes the British North America Act and Indian rights.

When Joseph Sands Jr., of Walpole Island appeared in court to face a charge of violating the Birds Act, he spoke in his native Chippewa tongue and needed an interpreter. He wore an Indian head band and feathers.

RCMP officers charged him Dec. 10 when they found him using a shotgun which did not have a plug in it to prevent use of more than three shells at one time. The case was remanded to Feb. 17.

In court as observers were Chief Donald Isaacs, dressed in full Indian costume; Kevin Park, a representative of the Ontario Human Rights Commission; Fred Plain, president of the Union of Ontario Indians; Omer Peters, president of the Canadian Indian-Metis Council, and 15 members of the Walpole Island Indian reserve.

In 1966, Calvin George of the Kettle Point Indian reserve near Forest, Ont., about 25 miles northeast of Sarnia, was charged under the same act and had his appeal was turned down by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The Indians maintain that the BNA act and individual treaties give the Indians the right to fish and hunt for a livelihood on the reserves.

They say the Migratory Birds Convention Act, passed in 1918 by the United States and Canada, should not overrule the BNA Act and the treaties.

Liberal Says House Annoys PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal backbencher Paul St. Pierre (Coast-Chilcotin) said Wednesday that Prime Minister Trudeau "does not treat the House with great respect" and became "soured on the House during the years of minority government."

He was speaking during a two-hour CBC television program on backbenchers in Canada, the U.S. and Britain entitled The Noblest of Callings, The Vilest of Trades.

"He strikes me as being impatient with its operation," the former journalist said of the prime minister.

Also on the program, Mr. Trudeau said he saw the need to redress the weakness of Parliament—and especially the executive—created by six years of minority government.

"The federal Parliament was losing its prestige and its relevance and because of this series of minority governments the executive itself was in a weak position."

Poor People Open First Conference

TORONTO (CP) — About 500 delegates from coast to coast are expected to register today for Canada's first poor people's conference.

Although delegates travel and living expenses at the four-day conference will be covered by a $50,000 federal grant, government officials and other observers will not be permitted to sit in on the discussions.

The conference planning committee headed by Peter Robinson, a student at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, says the conference is expected to open discussion among the poor, many of whom are members of minority groups.

Mr. Robinson says "for too long the destinies of poor people have been in the hands of welfare bureaucrats, slum landlords, exploitive employers and hypocritical politicians. For us, this conference represents the beginning of the end of such powerlessness."

The conference is the result of a discussion of the national council of welfare, an advisory body set up by John Munro, federal health minister, last January.

About half of the council's 21 members are persons with low incomes and the rest are community and welfare workers.

Vancouver delegates to the conference say it may become "a mere rubber stamp for the Liberal party's failure to cope with poverty," because no machinery has been set up to follow up conference recommendations to help poor people to communicate and organize following the meeting.

$800,000 Lift Bridge Doesn't Perform

PORT DOVER, Ont. (CP) — The residents of this small community on Lake Erie, 25 miles south of Brantford, were looking forward two years ago to the completion of a local showpiece.

So was the Ontario highways department.

It was a new $800,000 lift-bridge over the Lynn River—hydraulically operated, the first of its kind in North America, only the third in the world.

They got their local attraction but it's not all they had hoped for.

For 15 months the bridge has sat there, one side or the other gaping open—never both sides at the same time. Not a single one of the 3,500 cars an hour it is supposedly capable of handling has ever crossed it.

Downriver a narrow, creaky, 50-year-old lift bridge continues to laboriously wind itself up and down with an electric motor to allow fishing boats passage under Highway 6. For years it was hand-cranked.

The new bridge was complete in July, 1969. It was supposed to lift three-quarters of its length then coast slowly into a final upright position.

On the first test it shot into the air, stopping only when concrete abutments broke away and the hydraulic lifting mechanism was wrecked.

Every once in a while workers employed by the main contractor come around with a crane and haul up one side or lower the other. The rest of the time, until this week, it just sat there, an embarrassment to the highways department.

John Walter, director of planning and design for the department, admits his staff goofed. Deputy Highways Minister A. T. C. McNab agrees: The bridge was designed solely by his department and built by contractors to department specifications.

Mr. Walter said miscalculations were made as to what force would be necessary to operate the hydraulic system, and locking devices were both too weak and improperly placed. Counterweights were also positioned wrongly.

At the request of town council and several citizens' groups, the department started corrective work this week, with a target completion date of late March or early April.

Mr. McNab said in an interview the department is not unduly concerned, although the bridge was originally estimated to cost $750,000 and now is $50,000 above that figure.

Entertainment Roundup

LONDON (CP) — A West End theatre group says it is about to make the fastest transatlantic transfer of a play in London's history.

It maintains that when Noel Coward's comedy Blithe Spirit ends a six-month run at the Globe Theatre Jan. 16, the full cast and production will be ready to reopen in Toronto's O'Keefe Centre two days later.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Singer Elvis Presley won a court order Wednesday requiring a 21-year-old North Hollywood waitress, who says he is the father of her new-born son, to submit to a blood test. Presley also will undergo a blood test.

Lie detector tests of the 35-year-old singer and Patricia Parker were also ordered by Superior Court Judge William P. Hogoboom subject to approval by Presley, who was not in court.

Miss Parker filed suit against Presley in August charging he was the father of her unborn son. The child, Jason, was born Oct. 10 in a Hollywood hospital. She seeks medical expenses and $1,000-a-month child support.

Presley and his wife Priscilla have one daughter.

CALDWELL, N.J. (AP) — Singer Connie Francis will marry Las Vegas hairdresser Izzy Marion in church ceremonies here Jan. 16, it was announced Wednesday.

It will be the second marriage for each, the spokesman said.

NEW YORK (AP) — When the new musical Ari opens on Broadway later this month, Katherine DeJersey will be watching the stars—both kinds—carefully. She's the company astrologer for the play.

Miss DeJersey worked out the best time for opening the show, based on Leon Uris's novel Exodus, by checking the position of the various planets and the horoscopes of those involved.

For example, she explained in a telephone interview from her office in Chicago, on opening night, Jan. 15, the moon is in a favorable aspect for Saturn, representing steady growth and the sun is sextile—at a 60-degree angle—from Mars, representing energy and vitality.

The moon also is parallel to Uranus, representing that which is unusual, and favorable to the sun, representing the public, Miss DeJersey said. On top of everything, she added, Neptune, the planet of music, is in a favorable position.

The opening night was originally scheduled for Jan. 24, Miss DeJersey said, but was changed "partly because I didn't like the aspects" of the later date.

TEL AVIV (AP) — A new rock song on the Israeli hit parade is called Dr. Jarring. Sung by the Hopeful Good Timers, the song is dedicated to Dr. Gunnar V. Jarring, the United Nations envoy conducting peace negotiations in New York with Israel, Egypt and Jordan.

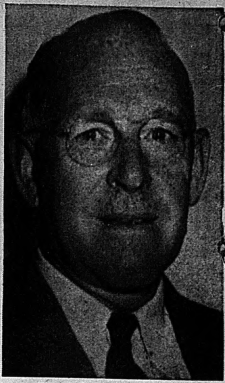
Canada Too Affluent

'Foxhole Christian' McClure Retiring to Aid Asian Lepers



Dr. Robert B. McClure

TORONTO (CP) — "Don't put wings on me. I'm no angel. I'm a gutter wallah."

In Anglo-Indian idiom, from the days of the British raj, a wallah is a person or thing employed about or concerned with something.

Bob McClure, for most of his life, has been a No. 1 wallah. He's been in many a gutter and he's going back to one.

He calls himself a "foxhole Christian—not an office Christian."

He seems to be genuinely surprised to be considered odd because at 70, an age when most men seek the well-earned armchair of retirement, he's going to Southeast Asia to treat lepers.

In a voice he apparently is constitutionally unable to lower below a low boom, hunching forward in the office-desk chair he hasn't sat in often in the last 29 months, he said in an interview:

"I'm doing what I want to do. I want to retire. I love to travel. And I can do it on the church."

Dr. Robert Baird McClure retires Jan. 26 as moderator of the United Church of Canada. While there is little doubt that he could be re-elected if he wished, not a few in and out of the church won't be sorry when he goes.

The impact of the red-headed whirlwind, as he is called in China, on the ponderous church establishment has not been light. In a time of social stress, religious beliefs under fire from many sides, a fair assessment of his term of office would be: refreshing, almost certainly beneficial.

Is there a note of relief expressed in the headline of the current issue of The Observer, the United Church publication, in its cover story on Bob McClure It says: "So long, Bob. It's been good to know you."

In announcing the other day what he plans to do in retirement, Dr. McClure said he had been asked by a number of churchmen to seek a second term. He won't go for it, though.

He wants to do his own thing and that's to go to Southeast Asia — he doesn't know or care where—to do what he was trained to do, to heal the sick, the wounded, the maimed and, specifically, lepers.

Leprosy is the biblical "unclean" disease, ugly, deforming, that since before recorded history has plagued mankind and still is prevalent today in the backward, undeveloped corners of the world.

Dr. McClure makes it plain that he does not consider himself a Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, the former Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal who a few years ago went to Africa to work in leper colonies.

Cardinal Leger's work concerns the spiritual welfare of the afflicted. The state of a leper's soul is secondary with medico McClure.

"Leger is denied some of the thrill that I shall get. Leger can't treat them medically. I get a tremendous thrill out of healing."

As 23rd moderator, Dr. McClure has set two precedents—first layman in the 45-year history of the United Church elected to the office and the first to sit for longer than two years.

He was elected at Kingston, Ont., in August, 1968, and should be out now. The general council meeting opening at Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 26, where his successor will be chosen, is six months behind its biennial schedule.

"I've set enough precedents," he said. "The general council has never elected a moderator for more than two years so why rock the boat?"

Unexpressed was the thought that perhaps he's rocked enough boats in 29 months to last the church for a while.

He has declaimed freely on such things as abortion ("Why bring an unwanted child into the world?"), euthanasia (he has let hopeless cases die peacefully), church sermons ("scrap the sermon and have round-table discussion") and Sunday worship ("It doesn't have to be on Sunday").

What hair the red-headed whirlwind has left is white and thin but with the energy, vibrancy and appearance a man of 50 would envy he expressed not long ago a desire to sail a boat alone across the Pacific to Singapore.

There, wife Amy, 69, would meet him and together they would set off for the lonely outposts where the poor, the unwanted, await his medical skill. They'll get it, along with a bit—not too much—of his religious philosophy (not necessarily Christian philosophy).

However they do it, it will be on his church and old-age pensions of less than $4,000 a year.

That's what the McClures have been living on for the last 29 months.

He didn't take his $16,000-a-year salary as moderator, receiving only the equivalent of his pension plus rental allowance for his Toronto apartment and $500 car allowance and expenses for his extensive cross-Canada travels.

Dr. McClure doesn't make airplane reservations. He goes to airports and waits for standby space granted to senior citizens.

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "I'm interested in money; not for myself—we don't need much—but when I get over there and find that I can't buy equipment and supplies, the churches had better come through, and handsomely."

Robert McClure was one of Canada's best-known medical missionaries in the foreign field for 45 years. He served in China, where he got his nickname, from 1923 to 1948, in India for 14 years and in the Middle East.

In the beginning, he was a gynecologist but that specialty became sidetracked when he was asked to go to China as a missionary doctor—he got the job when his predecessor was murdered—and ran into the facts of life among the poor and needy in a backward country.

If there was a specialty after that, it was treating gunshot wounds. During the Sino-Japanese war, after the Japanese moved into China in 1937, he had an average of one a day, from rifle shots, mortar bombs, home-made bombs—"you name it, we had 'em."

It's impossible to put a figure on the number of surgical operations he performed during his foreign service. "I figure it was about 1,000 a year."

Often his work was with refugees and it could be said that Bob McClure was a refugee himself. He was born in Portland, Ore., in 1900. His mother, wife of a medical missionary in China, had fled from the Boxer Rebellion and reached Portland.

After 45 years abroad, service broken only by infrequent visits home, Dr. McClure was almost a stranger to Canada when he came back to what he thought then was retirement.

He was appalled then at what he saw—grinding poverty and social unrest side by side with an affluent society spending too much on what he considers inconsequentials, split-up families, "momma and poppa doing too much for their kids," restless youth aimlessly seeking something without knowing what they seek He is still appalled.

In an interview as he steps down after almost 2½ years in the highest office of the United Church, Dr. McClure said Canadians would be better off with at least a touch of austerity.

"I don't extoll poverty," he said. "Poverty brings misery. I say we simply haven't adapted to affluence. Any moderately great degree of affluence almost seems to preclude happiness.

"I say let's study the problems that affluence brings, the same as we study the problems that poverty brings."

For one supposed to hold unconventional views about religion and the place of the church in the world of today —in the last 2½ years he startled many a churchman with oft-expressed opinions on matters a moderator might be expected to shy away from—Robert McClure sounds like any other churchman when he talks about the future of the church.

If the church ever was on the downgrade, as some skeptics say, it's making a comeback

Interviewed after he announced that he had declined suggestions to seek a second term—"that would be arrogance"—Dr. McClure, with his customary machine-gun-fire delivery, spoke freely on some of his experiences during his period as moderator.

About the church:

"There is a place for the church and people realize it. What I might call one of the good byproducts of the trouble in Quebec is that people now realize that morals have a place.

"We have to have cement to hold anything together and organized religion is the cement to hold people together.

"No culture has been able to survive without the corporate worship of God."

Back on the affluent society:

"Kids don't do anything for themselves anymore. Poppa and momma do it for them.

"Mothers are out working when there's no need for them to do so. And when the wife's cheque is larger than hubby's, boy!—that really means problems.

"Look at all the split-up families these days. . . .

"That's what affluence has done to Canada."

Canadians aren't doing enough, either at home or abroad, to help the world's needy and here his own church did not escape unscathed.

"As far as the church goes we are giving our small change to foreign aid."

Dr. McClure has called Christianity "the cheapest religion on earth" and has been critical of church members who put "their spare change" on Sunday collection plates. He wants to do away with collection plates and "hit" members substantially as do private clubs.

Most interesting to him as moderator were the opportunities to meet high school students and prisoners in penitentiaries and jails. He has visited almost every penitentiary and many jails during the last 29 months.

Digressing for a moment on "Stony"—Stony Mountain federal penitentiary near Winnipeg—Dr. McClure said he found too large a proportion of the prison population made up of Indians and Metis.

"Obviously there's something wrong with us. We're not doing enough for these people."

He had respect for high school students. They were the most aware and outgoing group in Canada.

What of university students?

"There's precious little idealism on the university campus today."

Britons Say European Cars Better Than Home-built Autos

LONDON (AP) — European automobiles are better than British-built models, two British surveys suggested today.

The surveys shocked the British motor industry, which employs 10 per cent of the country's work force and earns 10 per cent of Britain's export income.

Some British motorists, said one of the surveys, tend to ignore British cars and buy foreign models "because they believe they are getting reliability and durability—the qualities that they found lacking most often in the British cars they had owned before."

The surveys were published as import figures revealed foreign-built cars captured a record 19.4 per cent of the car sales in November. They also appeared as the British Leyland Motor Corp., the country's biggest manufacturer, reported a drop in profits of about £36 million ($90 million) to £3.9 million, mostly because of strikes..

Foreign car owners gave highest points for reliability to German Volkswagens, Swedish Volvos, French Renaults and Italian Fiats, the surveys said. One poll claimed that only Britain's luxury Rolls-Royce compared with some foreign automobiles for reliability, at least in car owners' minds.

The surveys were conducted by the Automobile Association magazine Drive and Motoring and by Which whose publisher, the Consumers' Association, said its polling of 30,000 car-owning subscribers gave the most detailed picture of automobile reliability ever compiled in Britain.

The British Ford Motor Co. countered the survey results with a statement that British motorists who buy foreign cars developed a "tremendous loyalty" and hesitated to criticize them, "while they would be happy to criticize home-made vehicles."

The Vauxhall car firm said the survey conclusions were far different from their own checks with Vauxhall owners. British Leyland said it doubted the survey results but would study them carefully.

The chairman of the House of Commons Motoring Club, Sir Gerald Nabarro, angrily dismissed the surveys as "drivelling rot." Sir Gerald, who owns eight automobiles and a motorcycle—all British—said he wouldn't be caught dead in a foreign-made car.

Indian Affairs Staff Will Be Pared to 200

OTTAWA (CP) — There could be as few as 200 employees in the Indian affairs department by 1978, says one of its top-level officials.

J. B. Bergervin, assistant deputy minister in charge of Indian affairs, said in an interview Wednesday a government proposal to shut down the department within five years has been abandoned at the request of the Indians.

"But I can see it will be a manageable objective that in seven to 10 years from now, there could be not much more than 200 or 300 persons spread across the country."

The department now employs about 4,000 persons—400 here at head office.

In the meantime the department is striving to place Indians in policy-making jobs.

Right now, said Mr. Bergervin, "the Indian participation at the policy level is minimal."

But it was a clear objective to have Indians in policy-making positions.

"I think we have about 50 trainees now in positions," he said. "In a year or two, they'll be strong competitors for the policy-making jobs."

When Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien revealed his proposed new Indian policy in 1970, a key proposal was to close down the department within five years.

This was tied in with another proposal that provinces would extend their services, such as education and welfare, to Indians.

"After all, the Indian affairs department has been attacked by everybody," said Mr. Chretien in a Regina speech last October.

"Who could complain if the government believed that the critics had meant what they said?"

Indian leaders, including Harold Cardinal of Alberta, were among those objecting to closing the department. But talks continue with the provinces to have them extend services to Indians, apparently now with Indian participation.

But the department will exist in skelton form at least for some time to come.

Presents Problem

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's booming economic picture is causing some inconvenience to major trailer rental companies who offer one-way service between Canadian cities. Trans-Canada Rent-A-Trailer says that 20 persons are moving west in Canada for every two moving east, based on the number of trailer rentals to carry personal belongings.

Fashion World Uses Color As Bait for Spring Trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The fashion world is fishing for spring customers, and clear color is the bait.

The bright-cheeked, dark-eyed face is strong in cosmetics.

The Bird of Paradise theme, shown Monday at the New York Couture National Press Week, was inspired by Cliff Nicholson's pheasant head dresses and peacock breast plate jewelry. Eyes are ringed with slate and blue. Cheeks are rose bronze.

If you want to carry color with you, there's Stanley Hagler's lipstick belt ($150), a takeoff on the already-famous cartridge belt.

The belt looks ready to be fed into a machine-gun, but retailers soothe upset customers by saying that it can be a symbol for doves as well as war hawks.

"Let's keep the bullet factories busy manufacturing blanks for peace instead of making real bullets to shoot," says Francine Farkas of Alexanders department stores. She brought the belt over from London in November.

However, the belt was snatched from Bergdorf Goodman counters last week.

"We can do without the macabre connotation of this," says Vice-President Leonard Hankin "We're delighted to have customers shop elsewhere for the belt."

Other stores are glad to accommodate them, including some in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Houston, Atlanta, Detroit St. Louis and Chicago.

"I'm not trying to mock the war; I just think it's a beautiful belt," said Caren Ross, a Philadelphia housewife who found herself in the Bang Bang belt manufacturing business in November—3,500 belts sold in one month—after her trip to Europe.

If plans work out, there will be a Bang Bang dress for Jonathan Logan and Bang Bang boots and blue jeans.

If that isn't enough, Tiny Town has offered a child's tunic and pants with gold bullet replicas in the white patent leather belt ($16-$18).

Junior Sophisticates has achieved the paramilitary spirit with "cartridge pockets" on a bright yellow jacket.

Inquest Is Ordered In St. John Deaths

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — An inquest was ordered Wednesday into an early-morning fire that raced through the crew's quarters of the 15,000-ton tanker Irvingstream, killing five men and seriously injuring three others.

Meanwhile, an investigation has been launched by the fire marshal's office in co-operation with city police and firemen and federal transport officials but cause of the half-hour blaze was not immediately determined.

Fire Chief Millard Clifford of Saint John, one of a number of investigators who toured the vessel, said the outbreak started in the companionway of the crew's quarters.

The tanker, docked at its loading terminal in Saint John harbor when the fire broke out, was still there late Wednesday.

Flames were confirmed to the crew's section and officials said there appeared to have been no great danger to the ship's cargo of 6.3 million gallons of gasoline and stove oil.

The ship, owned by the Irving Oil Co Ltd., was not heavily damaged.

Killed in the fire were crew members Robert Samuel Whynot, Coursetown, N.S.; Francis Michael DeCoste, Judique South, N.S.; Constanin Mongllas, Saint John and Charles Cameron, Saint John; and Howard Garland, Saint John, employed by the Saint John Iron Works Co.

In hospital, seriously injured, were crew members Philip McCormick and Robert Laffoley, both of Saint John, and Roger Gamache of Quebec. Three other iron workers were treated for smoke inhalation. The iron workers were aboard to make boiler repairs.

The vessel, skippered by Captain Harry Hubert of St. Catharines, Ont., had been scheduled to sail Wednesday morning for Halifax.

TV Specialists Urge Schools Get Color Sets

TORONTO (CP) — A team of specialists urged Wednesday that Toronto spend $5 million over the next five years on a color television system for its schools.

The proposal by the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education said the system would provide one color set for every 100 students.

Each school would have about eight sets a videotape library of 150 programs and access to a central library of 1,500 programs.

Dr. Leslie McLean, who headed the institute team, said the system would cost an estimated $9.27 per student each year. It would include teaching aid technicians, material preparation centres and film and television production facilities.

The Toronto board of education, to which the proposal was presented already has agreed to spend $120,000 to wire 25 public schools fully, and eight high schools partially, for cable television use

About 900 sets, mainly black and white, now are used in Toronto's 140 schools.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Complications Require Treating

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Everybody knows how to treat a cold but few know how to prevent one. Can you give us a little dissertation on this pesky critter? A year doesn't go by when I don't lose at least a week or 10 days from work because I've been laid up — Mr. B.

Comment: I'm not as sure as you are that everybody knows how to treat the common cold. There are all kinds of colds and all kinds of people. Most of us consider the cold nothing more than a nuisance. This was as true centuries ago as it is now.

For example there was a Roman saying that describes our present attitude: "There is only one way to treat a cold — with contempt." But the common cold is not dismayed by our indifference. It attacks young and old, rich and poor, robust and frail.

Forgetting about the few billion dollars that are lost yearly in work stoppage, forgetting the fact it causes job losses at least 20 times higher than accidents, let's keep remembering that the common cold can be potentially destructive.

You have undoubtedly heard of its most common complications. Such as tonsilitis, middle ear infection, sinusitis, inflammation of the trachea, bronchitis, pneumonia, and other infections.

How to prevent colds? I wish I knew. We are aware that it is probably a virus of some sort that initiates and spreads the infection. We also know that after the virus attack, the secondary invaders are bacteria. They are the ones that cause the familiar symptoms of sneezing, coughing, nasal discharge, indisposition, headache and other aches and discomforts.

Some experiments lately have reported that chilling and exposure to drafts are not at all responsible for the common cold From my own personal experience and what I have observed in practice, I must disagree.

It is undoubtedly true that many people are actually susceptible to sudden changes in body temperature, and are more likely to come down with a cold. Other predisposing causes in some people — and they vary — are physical fatigue, lack of sleep, exposure to irritating dusts and gases, overdrinking, overeating, and allergies. Any or all of these may cause lowered resistance.

Another important consideration is this: during the epidemics stay away from crowded places, and run from the careless fellow who coughs or sneezes in your face.

Treatment? As you say, everybody has his own favorite routine. But here's a tip: if a cold hangs on longer than you think it should, better call your doctor — especially if a child is involved. It's not the cold but it's the complications that deserve expert management.

Dear Dr. Molner: Twenty-two months ago I had a complete hysterectomy. About a year later the doctor said I had a small rectocele and small cystocele. Now my bladder has fallen and protrudes. I've been told to wait six months before another checkup. Meanwhile I'm uncomfortable, under a nervous strain, and can't rest well. What shall I do? — Mrs. M.

Comment: A weakness in the muscles and tissues in the "pelvic floor" often causes a condition similar to yours. Usually it is easily improved by an operation commonly called a "pelvic repair."

Why not ask your doctor to get another gynecologist's opinion? You may not have to wait six months before overcoming your difficulty.

Company Fired Old Employees

TORONTO (CP) — Former employees of Cadet Cleaners said Wednesday the company fired all workers with more than five years seniority just before new labor legislation became effective Jan. 1.

The former Cadet Cleaner employees said about 25 women were fired last week.

Company president Herbert P. Wahl said that although 15 employees were let go last week and a total of 71 were laid off during November and December, the dismissals were "not primarily" due to the new legislation.

He said a number of people with more than five years' service still have their jobs and that 12 of the fired employees had five or more years' seniority with the company.

Under the new legislation, workers with a minimum of five years' service qualify for four weeks notice or equivalent wages.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 8

Your birthday today: This is to be a year of experiments, new ideas, changing conditions. Your habits loosen up into more informal behavior, with less waste of motion. Emotional ties are apt to become more intense or, in some few instances, shunned altogether. Declutter your home and daily living of all that has outlived its usefulness, as quickly as you can. Today's natives experience special exposures to strife and limitations, may be very moody.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): An unorthodox approach pays off well. Take the initiative, gather lively minds about you, get new projects started. Repair and maintenance can be accomplished quickly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): An extra search will show you a line of action that pays better. An original idea brings you more responsibilities and, hopefully, increased earnings. Wait for nothing and nobody.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Fresh information comes to you, requiring serious attention. Take the time to do it justice. There are many petty irritations to ignore or take in stride.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Ideas, new schedules are in the planning stage. Wait for Tuesday or Wednesday before initiating serious changes. A pleasant, sociable frame of mind gets you through till then.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): State your position clearly; ask no immediate response. Consolidate your home arrangements, find new owners for things which no longer serve your purposes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Intuition brings you a new path to follow. Little time is available for exploration, as the day is full of details. Don't be upset if your family is at some phase of development other than yours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Some ideas arise for your own use next week, some are for experiment by others. If you speak out freely over the weekend you have a better chance to see things in perspective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Mechanical things put into service today should wear well, particularly if they relieve you of routine chores. Begin organizing new plans; remember they need thinking through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Close out the workweek neatly. Settle everything you can. Changes are coming in a few days. Travel is favored this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Experiment with new ideas and methods. Careful notes will help you figure things out over the weekend. Travel a bit, loosen up, try being a bit less formal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Get an early start to round up more resources, better financial arrangements. Gather friends about you for exchange of lively conversation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Bring your notebook, sketch as well as scribble. Organize your ideas for future application. It's a stimulating day, with everything near you, if you look.

Doctor Used Towel So as Not to Lose It

TORONTO (CP) — The doctor who performed emergency surgery on a man whose body was later found to contain a surgical towel told an inquest Wednesday he used a towel rather than a sponge because "you are less likely to lose it."

Dr. David Sokol, chief resident in cardiovascular surgery at Toronto General Hospital, operated on Wilfred English, 68, of Fort Erie, Ont., on Nov. 15 when an aortic aneurysm—a ballooning from the main artery of the heart—ruptured.

Mr. English died seven days later and doctors performing an autopsy found a green surgical towel folded or balled up in his abdomen. The unfolded linen towel measured 30 by 18 inches.

Dr. Sokol testified he used towels instead of sponges—gauze pads—to mop up blood because they are larger and have a rougher texture which helped to grasp blood clots.

He said even the largest sponges were "grossly inadequate" for this operation. He also used a towel because "you are less likely to lose it."

Dr. John Coles, chairman of the cardiac surgery department and clinical professor of surgery at the University of Western Ontario, told the jury he could find no fault with "anything Sokol did."

He described Dr. Sokol as a capable surgeon and said the operation had obviously been necessary and well performed.

"In my opinion it (the towel) had nothing whatsoever to do with the cause of death," said Dr. Coles.

He said a study at his university showed half the patients undergoing emergency surgery for repair of ruptured aortic aneurysm die. One third of the deaths were caused by kidney failure—the cause to which Mr. English's death was attributed.

In an ordinary operation, leaving a towel in a patient would be inexcusable but with a ruptured aneurysm all the organs were covered in blood making them hard to identify, and "I can understand how a foreign body could be left," said Doctor Coles.

FLQ Trial Dates Fixed

MONTREAL (CP) — Cries of "Vive le FLQ" echoed through a courtroom Thursday from four men ordered to stand trial on kidnapping and murder charges in the October slaying of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's foreign labor minister.

And two persons were found in contempt for swearing at Mr. Justice Antonio Lamer of Court of Queen's Bench.

Brothers Paul and Jacques Rose, Francis Simard, 23, and Bernard Lortie, 19, were sent directly to jury trial under preferred indictments, eliminating the usual preliminary hearing stage in courtroom proceedings.

Paul Rose, 27, will stand trial Jan. 25 while the others will appear in separate trials Feb. 8.

Their appearance was followed by a long parade of men and women, most of them picked up under the War Measures Act and facing charges of belonging to, or contributing to, the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Jacques Rose, 23, was found in contempt for shouting blasphemy and is to be sentenced Jan. 18. Francois Lanctot was cited for saying to Mr. Justice Lamer after being told his trial would not be held until the March assizes:

"You have to have orders from your big boss before you can set a date. You have to await orders from your damn big boss."

Labor leader Michel Chartrand objected vociferously when told he could not have a separate trial on charges of seditious conspiracy and FLQ membership.

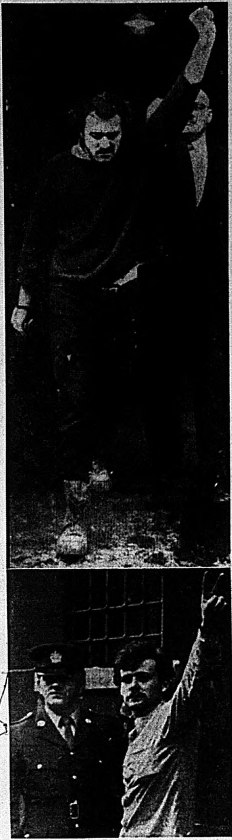
Chartrand is to stand trial Feb. 1 along with lawyer Robert Lemieux, teacher Charles Gagnon, writer Pierre Vallieres and Jacques Larue-Langlois, a former CBC radio producer.

All face the same charges of seditious conspiracy and FLQ membership and have been held without bail since Oct. 16, when the War Measures Act was invoked.

Another group of five facing identical charges will face trial Jan. 11: Jean Boisjoly, Gilles Cormier, Raymond Cormier, Robert Langevin and Come Leblanc.

A group of seven—six of them charged with being accessories after the fact of the kidnapping and murder—were ordered to trial Feb. 8.

They are Richard Therrien and his sister Colette, both students, nurse Francine Belisle, Louise Verreault, Denis Quesnel and her daughter Helene and Lise Balcer.



Defiant Pair

Top, Paul Rose raises his arm in a gesture of defiance as he is led to Criminal Courts building in Montreal Thursday. Below, Paul's brother, Jacques, gives a "V for victory" hand signal. Both had the dates fixed for their trials on charges of kidnapping and murdering Pierre Laporte.

Kingston Convicts Grab 3 Hostages

Officials Held Since Thursday

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A federal official began negotiations today with two Kingston penitentiary prisoners who have held three prison officials hostage in a workshop since about 4 p.m. Thursday.

Assistant Warden Edgar Babcock said John Maloney, regional director of federal penitentiaries, had entered the workshop and that some indication of the prisoners' demands might be forthcoming shortly.

Mr. Babcock said Warden Arthur Jarvis had not yet authorized release to the press of the prisoners' names, although the hostages have been identified.

Mr. Babcock said earlier he believed one of the prisoners was serving a life sentence for non-capital murder and the other a lesser term for armed robbery. The prisoners were believed armed with a knife or knives.

Earl Button, a penitentiary supervisor, identified the hostages as C. E. Turner, a senior correctional officer, and two instructors in cabinet making, L. D. Bramley and Allen Marsden.

Officials said the hostages were held in a carpentry shop and that there were plenty of weapons available in the form of tools.

"We're quite sure they have knives," one official said.

The first request made by the prisoners was for breakfast. Prison officials indicated the request had been refused.

Officials said any major demands would have to be referred to the commissioner of federal penitentiaries in Ottawa.

Frequent radio broadcasts by local radio stations brought shouts from other prisoners who also banged their cell bars with cups with each news bulletin.

Thursday is usually television night, but the prisoners were confined to their cells because of the abductions.

In an interview, Mr. Maloney called the abductions a "dangerous situation," comparing them with the recent kidnappings in Quebec.

"I'm sure that prison inmates are just as well informed of that situation as any others and let's face it, they figure if other people can do it they can do it."

He said any minor requests by the prisoners would probably be handled in Kingston but if any major requests were made they will be referred to P. A. Faguy, commissioner of penitentiaries, in Ottawa.

Mr. Babcock said the officials were abducted about 4 p.m., about the time the workshops are closed for the day.

The shop—a room 50 by 100 feet—is on the second floor of a two-storey industrial building separated from the cell blocks.

The seizure is the first at the prison since July 31, 1961 when two prisoners held five guards for 28 hours before releasing them unharmed.

British Envoy Seized

MONTEVIDEO (Reuter) — The British embassador to Uruguay, Geoffrey Jackson, was kidnapped today by Tupamaro urban guerrillas, police said.

He was apparently being driven to his office when his car was intercepted by two vehicles carrying members of the left-wing guerrilla organization.

Tupamaros are still holding hostage a Brazilian diplomat and an American agronomist.

The Brazilian, Aloysio Dias Gomide, was kidnapped July 31 along with American aid expert Daniel A. Mitrione, who was murdered Aug. 9, when the government refused to release more than 150 jailed Tupamaros.

Agronomist Claud Fly, 65, was kidnapped from his office Aug. 7

Four of the extremists were reported to have used clubs to batter Jackson's guard in today's kidnapping before making their getaway with the diplomat.

Jackson, who lives in a house in the western suburbs of Montevideo, was apparently being driven to the embassy on Alzaibar Street in central Montevideo when the attack occurred.

Welch's Viewpoint Opposite to Potter's

By HARRY MULHALL and KEN SMITH
Staff Reporters

Dr. Richard Potter and at least one cabinet minister contending leadership of Ontario's reigning Conservative party, are at variance on a basic issue.

None of the leadership candidates have yet been explicit on policy issues, complains Dr. Potter.

"I don't think they've told us very much," the Quinte MPP said yesterday as he arrived home after a four-day provincial tour telling fellow Conservatives not to choose a leader until they've assessed his policy commitments.

Meantime, in Toronto, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, became the latest cabinet minister to announce his leadership bid — and refused to talk policies.

Specific commitments by any leadership candidate could later harm cabinet solidarity, worried Mr. Welch.

"The delegates should make their decision on knowing something about the candidate and his party philosophy," he said.

"Ours is a parliamentary system and all issues that come before the government are discussed by the cabinet and caucus. If you get a candidate for this office (the leadership) who has all sorts of specific proposals you're beginning to break cabinet solidarity."

Dr. Potter was in Toronto today and not immediately available for comment on Mr. Welch's statements — which directly conflicts with what the Quinte MPP has been telling party members from Thunder Bay to Ottawa all week.

France to Push H-bomb

PARIS (Reuter) — France has decided to push ahead with rapid development of an H-bomb system expected to be operational within five years, official sources said Thursday.

The decision means postponing the longer task of developing multiple-warhead missiles (MIRVs) until after 1975.

It was made by President Georges Pompidou after discussion with Defence Minister Michel Debre following French hydrogen-bomb tests in the Pacific last year, the sources said.

The choice was based on Pompidou's judgment that the situation in the Middle East and other areas contains serious risks of broader conflict, they said.

He also considered the continuing Soviet-American arms race and the lack of any concrete sign that a disarmament agreement is near, the sources added.

The result of the decision is that France's thermonuclear strike system is expected to be more primitive than those of the super - powers but operational sooner that it would otherwise have been.

Poor People Limit Press Coverage of Their Toronto Parley

TORONTO (CP) — The first meeting of poor people from coast to coast erupted here Thursday night over the question of whether news reporters should be allowed to attend conference sessions.

After about half an hour of rapid-fire debate by delegates, news reporters were banned from the meeting while some of the poor people clapped and chanted "out, out." The reporters were ordered outside the church hall where the meeting was being held.

When delegates returned to their downtown hotel about an hour later, they still had to vote on the issue. The results of a preferential ballot showed a compromise: press coverage of general sessions but not workshops.

The four-day conference, a gathering of representatives of poor people's organizations, was planned by a committee of poor people. While the federal health department seems to have adopted a "hands-off" attitude to it, federal financial support for the conference totals more than $68,000.

Much of this was used for transportation for about 300 of the more than 400 delegates. The conference was to provide a forum for discussion problems and experiences of the poor, with the hope that it might lead to a stronger voice for them.

Today two general sessions were scheduled, with workshops in between. The workshops, along with some planned for Saturday, are designed to cover three areas: policy and issues, the organizing of poor people's groups around issues, and the learning of certain skills needed for communication within a group.

Both delegates and reporters had originally been informed that news coverage of the actual conference sessions would not be allowed. But at an afternoon news conference, reporters were told that the first session, where several people were scheduled to speak, would be open to them.

Evidently this surprised many of the delegates who appeared not to know of the change.

Peter Robinson, a Toronto student and chairman of the conference planning committee, told the meeting that the committee had favored barring reporters so that meetings could be free from "harassment" and misquoting.

He said many members felt that the press was sometimes misinformed and at other times had "red-baited" people.

But after one delegate said the issue should be discussed, others quickly took it up—some for and some against. Others occasionally clapped, booed or shouted.

At one point Doris Power of Toronto told the unruly delegates: "You are doing what the establishment always does to you. You are dividing yourselves and you are doing it in front of the press."

By the time the reporters had to leave, some delegates were also moving toward the door, although many of them stopped to listen again before they reached it. Some left, voicing disgust at the waste of time.

One of the first to reach the door was Paul De Bois of Montreal, president of the Comite des Assistes Sociaux du Quebec, an organization of more than 5,000 welfare recipients in Quebec. He said he was leaving the conference for good because the reporters were evicted.

Latr a few delegates expressed fears that the unexpected controversy might permanently dampen enthusiasm for the conference.

Flying Ace Is Killed

One of Canada's aerobatic flying aces, Harold Wannamaker of RR 1, Carrying Place, died Thursday when his light plane crashed in a field at Burketon Station, 12 miles northeast of Oshawa.

His passenger, Pat Crowley, 46, of Crawley Films, Toronto, received multiple injuries and is under intensive care at Oshawa Hospital following surgery.

He re-enlisted from 1951 to 1965 and was the first holder of the Canadian aerobatics championship, first held at Peterborough in 1969.

Mr. Wannamaker was a member of Trenton Branch 110 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his wife, the former Frances Smith, a son Ross Wannamaker of British Columbia, daughters Mrs. James (Wendy) Hatfield of Sudbury, and Mrs. Del (Sharon) Sather of Regina, Sask., and a grandson Ross Wannamaker.

Weather Delays Rink Building

Cold winter weather has delayed construction of the new Dick Ellis Rink on Harder Drive and completion is not now expected before February 15.

This was learned by members of the recreation-arena committee at a special meeting held this week when Kenneth Carr - Braint, general contractor, said protective covering would be necessary to allow for completion of exterior construction.

At the end of December Mr Carr - Braint said $1,550 had been spent for winter heat while another $4,600 would be required for protective covering to allow completion of block work at the north end of the rink. This figure would be reduced if warmer weather prevailed.

The committee authorized protective covering for the uncompleted wall and roof areas together with necessary heating to allow for completion of block work without freezing.

Weather Warming

A warming trend later today will blunt a sharp, cold - weather edge that sent overnight temperatures plunging around the Quinte district.

Coldest spot in the district was Bancroft, where the lands and forests ranger station reported an overnight low of 25 degrees below zero.

At Tweed, it was 13 below and at Belleville, three below.

At 9:30 a.m. today the CFB Trenton duty forecaster reported temperature at the base was still four below.

However, warmer air will waft temperatures higher in the next 24 hours, with a low tonight of 10 degrees above and a high tomorrow of 28, predicted the forecaster.

Sidney Council Meets Monday

Inaugural proceedings will highlight the first meeting of the 1971-72 Sidney Township Council, to be held Monday, Jan. 11 at 1:30 p.m.

Joining council as a councillor will be Hadley Richardson, who was elected to the position vacated by ex-councillor Art Carleton.

On the same day, a special Ontario Municipal Board hearing has been called to handle an appeal from George Ketcheson concerning a land split of his three lots in the hamlet of Wallbridge.

Industrial Milk Producers Wait for Federal Relief

Ontario producers of industrial milk are going to have to wait on Federal government approval before the Ontario Milk Marketing Board can increase the price of milk going into the manufacture of cheese, butter, and ice cream.

This was one of the big producer disappointments at this week's annual meeting of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board when an increase of 20 cents per hundredweight for fluid milk was announced.

The increase, however, was for fluid milk only and did not cover industrial milk.

"It was a big disappointment to industrial milk producers," stated Harold Elliott, owner of the Foxboro Cheese Factory north of Belleville.

Mr. Elliott said producers expected that the price of industrial milk would be increased before that of fluid milk which goes into the bottle trade.

At the Toronto meeting, however, milk marketing board officials explained that industrial milk prices were tied to federal export subsidies for cheese and could not be increased without federal approval.

An official of the federal dairy council attended the Toronto convention but would make no commitment on what his government's action might be.

The Foxboro cheese factory said, however, that industrial milk producers are hopeful there will be federal approval for a price increase by April 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

The 20 cent increase for the fluid milk will give producers $6.85 per hundredweight, as compared with the present $3.60 price for industrial milk

The last increase for industrial milk, about two years ago, was for six cents per cwt

At the Toronto meeting, George R. McLaughlin, chairman of the Milk Marketing Board announced the price for fluid milk would go up 20 cents per cwt. on Feb. 1 with a further increase of about 15 cents in September.

At the time, Mr. McLaughlin denied published reports that dairies would increase the retail price of bottle milk by two cents a quart.

"The two cent increase will probably apply only to home delivered milk," he said. "Store prices, especially for jug milk, will probably be increased by a much smaller amount."

William Langdon, chairman of the dairy committee of the National Farmers Union, told the meeting the two-stage approach gives "processers a chance to increase the price twice and blame both increases on producers."

He also criticized the board for its decision to increase the fluid-milk price without increasing the industrial-milk price, thus widening the gap between prices for the two types of milk.

Warden Favors More Industry

PICTON (Staff) — County warden Allen Anderson said yesterday that the introduction of additional industry in Prince Edward could cut local welfare costs. "We've got to be able to bring in new industries and new types of vocations so there is work for those who want to work," asserted Mr. Anderson.

The Bloomfield reeve who was acclaimed Prince Edward County warden at county council's inaugural session this week admitted that welfare costs have been "a bone of contention" for him during council discussions. In the past year he frequently questioned the number of welfare recipients arriving in Prince Edward from other areas. Yesterday Mr. Anderson observed, "I understand it (the moving) is province wide."

Warden Anderson commented that a narrow margin often separates employable welfare cases from unemployables. He suggested that new legislation eventually might be introduced encouraging employable welfare recipients to find jobs. "I don't see any letup," he said, referring to welfare costs in 1971. He added that "people have to eat" and indicated that he supports welfare assistance for citizens in need.

County council's proposal to erect a new home for the aged is endorsed by warden Anderson who remarked yesterday. "They are the citizens who helped in building this county; we owe them a pleasant place for the sunset of their lives."

He suggested that senior citizens should enjoy attractive surroundings, a pleasant atmosphere and a program of activities. The efforts of the local senior citizens club and projects for county home residents sponsored by the Picton Kinsman Club were applauded by Mr. Anderson. He referred to the Prince Edward County Home for the Aged as "one of the finest in Ontario."

Alert to the dangers of pollution, the new county warden feels that springs located in conservation areas should be opened and allowed to flow instead of lying stagnant. He pointed out that the carelessness of the individual can contribute significantly to water pollution when desirable controls are ignored. Warden Anderson observed that the Canadian International Paper Company's kraft mill proposed for Hillier township would be subject to controls making it "as pollution-free as possible." He expressed confidence in the Ontario Water Resources Commission and related commissions concerning the control of industrial pollution. "Look at your neighbor — look around anywhere you like," he remarked, noting that many citizens can be individually responsible for pollution.

Prince Edward's newly acclaimed warden feels that local economy will be bolstered this year by the development of the Ontario hospital complex at the former Camp Picton. Mr. Anderson recalled the phase-out of military personnel at Camp Picton and stated, "You can't take that many out of the economy and not feel the effect. By the time things get rolling at the hospital it will be very very good." Mr. Anderson again mentioned local economy stating, "I have enough faith in this county, the people in it and the industrialists to believe that things will improve."

He noted that more industry is needed in Prince Edward to keep young residents from moving to other communities to find work. "I am pleased with our industrial commissioner William Duggan. If we work with him we might be surprised by what we'll have," said Mr. Anderson.

As he assessed suggested projects for 1971, Mr. Anderson remarked, "As warden of this county I am very pleased to learn that radio station CJBQ will jump its power. It's beneficial to have good liaison with Belleville and the surrounding area."

Warden Anderson who took office last Tuesday has been a member of Bloomfield village council for the past ten years. For three years he has served as village reeve and is now beginning his fourth year in county council.

Canada's Burglary On Rise

REGINA (CP) — It's a dark Saturday night on a deserted residential street. A young man looks about him carefully, then slips into the shadows of a darkened house.

He creeps around to the back door. The owners are away for the weekend, and the house is his target for the night.

The back door is locked, but a basement window has been left open carelessly—just enough so he can force it open and crawl into the cellar.

Upstairs, he looks around the kitchen with a flashlight and finds the cabinet where the lady of the house keeps her grocery money for the week. He takes the $30 in cash and pockets it.

In the bedroom, his first target is the jewelry box. Inside are two watches, a jade ring with a gold setting, a silver necklace and assorted other jewelry valued at $300. He scoops it all into his coat pockets.

Scouting around for other loot, he spies and takes a camera worth $200, silver place settings worth $120, a small portable radio worth $50 and a piggy bank belonging to the children containing more than $20 in change.

He'd like to take more, but the $150 television set, the $300 fur coat and the $80 record player are too bulky for him—this time.

Well, $720 isn't too bad for a night's work.

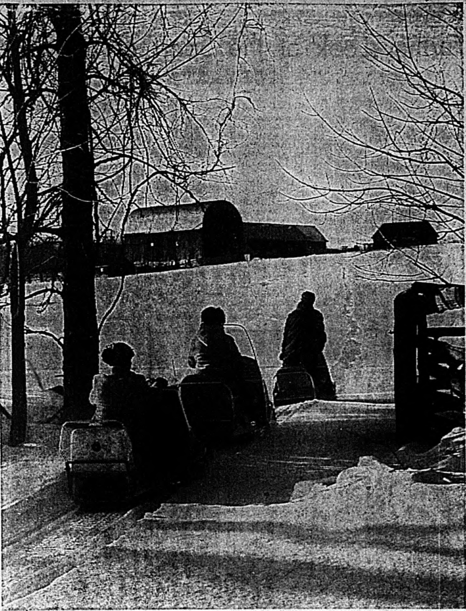
Thieves find housebreaking a popular occupation. Regina police report the number of breaking-and-entering crimes in private homes in 1969 showed an 89-per-cent increase over 1968.

Police Chief Arthur Cookson said housebreakers generally use windows to get into a house, but in some cases doors have been left open—conveniently for the thief.

Police recommend that because of the increase in housebreaking, home owners and apartment dwellers help identify goods that might be stolen. This can be done by making a list of serial and model numbers of all goods for which this is possible, and by making an identifying mark on the items.

It is also a good idea for people to notify police if they plan to be away for a long period, and to arrange for a neighbor to keep an eye on the house for newspapers and other items which may indicate that the owner is away.

And they should lock up tight before they leave, even for a short time. There's no point in making it easy for the thief.



Winter Wonderland

Soft woodland shadows add to the highlights of this winter scene as snowmobilers enjoy the trails through Ontario fields. In many cases, the sleigh rides of old have been replaced by these motorized machines, but the brisk air, the warm fire, hot chocolate and pot of beans are still around for the finding.

Canadians Are Striving For Greener Thumbs

Canadians are sprouting green thumbs and investing $30 million a year in their hobby gardens.

The growth of the nursery industry in Canada was revealed in a Dominion Bureau of Statistics report for 1969 which showed that the number of garden supplies firms has doubled in the last ten years.

But in the Quinte district, interest in gardening and home landscaping has about tripled in the last 10 years, a seed company spokesman estimates.

After a post-war period of neighborhood togetherness, home owners are learning from their rural friends that good fences make good neighbors. They are spending heavily on hedging their homes — making the sale of hedging shrubs second only to the sale of bulbs. More than 2.5 million hedging bushes were sold in 1969. Canadians bought and planted 5.3 million bulbs.

"Hedging is coming into its own," agrees a local nursery stock retailer. "Fences cause bad feelings, but a hedge doesn't."

TAKE 2

In addition, hedges can grow over the neighbor's lot line unimpeded by legal restrictions, but the placement of fences is rigidly controlled.

William Bos, Trenton nurseryman, says privet is the favorite hedging material in the Quinte district.

"People are finding out that Chinese elm grows too fast and evergreen hedging is too expensive," he says.

When a homeowner does decide to invest in evergreen hedging, he usually buys white cedar, Mr. Bos says. Yew, the most popular hedging material in metropolitan areas, is more expensive than cedar and seldom is planted as a hedge in the Quinte area.

Although the Bureau of Statistics didn't mention it, the most striking trend noted locally is the return to home vegetable growing. The backyard vegetable lot disappeared after the war, but it's making a comeback now.

"People are slicing up little hunks of lawn and putting in seed," notes a garden retailer. "They have more time on their hands and gardening is becoming a popular hobby. They don't eat the stuff they plant but they like to see it grow."

Gardening is even going vertical — into the living rooms of high-rise residents.

"Apartment people are growing plants under lights and the competition is fierce to see who can get the first bloom and the largest one," recounts the same merchant.

According to him, local apartment dwellers even plant vegetable seeds in their indoor gardens, "just to watch the stuff grow".

William Bishop of Bishop Seeds says general growth in the Belleville area and the interest stimulated by the Belleville Horticultural Society accounts for the growth of the nursery industry locally.

"There are more real hobby gardeners now, and they are competitive," he says. "The Trilium award for home beautification has contributed to the interest locally, and so have the Horticultural Society's flower shows." More and more people are competing for the prizes.

But Mr. Bos added another factor in explanation. — European immigration.

"Fifteen years ago you hardly saw anything around here in the way of home landscaping," he says. "Then Europeans moved in and they have always taken a deep interest in beautifying their home grounds. Canadians began to follow suit."

Mr. Bos believes bulbs are becoming too expensive for the home gardener. There has been no increase in bulb sales locally, he says. The peak in bulb planting was reached seven or eight years ago.

A spokesman at Thrasher Feeds also observed that bulb sales are levelling off, and so is the planting of rose bushes

"Specimen evergreens and trees are taking the biggest part of the market," he says. Bedding plants, and perennials are also selling well locally.

On a Canada - wide basis, plants, bulbs, bushes and trees constitute a major part of the nursery business, worth $18 million a year.

Landscaping and maintenance services brought in almost $9 million. Sales of gardening equipment and aids rang up about $4.5 million — $1.4 million in flower pots alone.

Dayliner's Run May Be Cut

A Canadian National Railways proposal to shorten the run of its Dayliner will not affect service to Belleville.

The CN proposes to eliminate Brockville and Gananoque from the eastern end of the run and originate the Dayliner in Kingston starting Feb. 1.

However, train schedules will remain the same, a spokesman at CN's Rideau Area offices in Belleville said today.

The Dayliner departs Belleville daily at 8.07 a.m. returning at 8.57 p.m.

The proposal has provoked angry political reaction in Brockville.

Brockville mayor John Broome said the city would use all the pressure it could muster to fight the move.

"We strongly resent this dictatorial action by the railway company and we will fight it to the end," he said.

"The railway is subsidized by the taxpayer and the taxpayer should have the right of appeal."

Ontario Tourism Minister James Auld, a Brockville resident, has said the provincial government would oppose any move to eliminate the Dayliner service from Brockville.

A CN spokesman said an average of four to six passengers daily boarded the Dayliner at Brockville and the move was necessary "simply because of economics."

Canadians to Get Exposure

TORONTO (CP) — A new excitement is building in the board rooms of Canada's recording industry over regulations to increase Canadian content in radio and television.

The industry, which includes firms that produce cassettes and pre-recorded tapes as well as record discs, has had little success in the last decade marketing Canadian talent, although they claim the talent has always been there. Long before Bob Goulet became a star in the United States, Columbia Records of Canada Ltd. recorded a series of singles by him but, as one company executive says, "at that time you couldn't give the bloody things away."

But spokesmen for most of the major recording companies say the new federal restrictions, effective in January, will change all that, perhaps dramatically.

"From the point of view of record companies, it's not a regulation but a new encouragement to promote Canadian talent, and that's all I need," says Jack Robertson, Columbia's vice-president of marketing. "It means also that we're going to take a lot less risk with Canadian talent."

"Anything that makes people play Canadian has got to be a healthy sign," says Joe Pariselli, national sales manager for Ampex of Canada Ltd. in nearby Mississauga. Mr. Pariselli predicts 50 per cent more recording by companies in the first six months after the regulations come into force.

"Instead of Canadian artists having to go to the United States," says Arnold Gosewich, executive vice-president of Capitol Records (Canada) Ltd., "now they have an opportunity to make it here first."

A. L. (Bert) Betts, executive secretary of the Canadian Record Manufacturers Association, says the regulations could have the effect "of popularizing or exposing Canadian talent, thereby creating a demand."

Although it falls short of providing a maple leaf label on every turntable, the regulations recently outlined by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission call for 30 per cent Canadian content by Jan. 18, with another increase a year later.

Mr. Betts estimates that between 65 to 80 record producers own record labels in Canada. His association represents 22 firms, about 90 per cent of the records produced in Canada.

Canadian talent records accounted for between 10 to 20 per cent of sales in 1969, which included 16.1 million singles and 25.1 million albums. About 70 per cent of the singles sold in Canada are rock music for the young set. Ninety-five per cent of records sold in Canada are manufactured here, and represent a $100 million retail business.

Sales of cassettes, rapidly mounting in popularity, account for 25 per cent of the total record-tape retail industry. Most of this is new business—cassettes for cars—that does not bite into the record sales.

Role of the MP

Maybe it was just coincidence, but there in the midst of the CBC's Wednesday night documentary special on the governmental process, as seen through the eyes of Canadian, British and United States MPs and Congressmen was Michigan Congressman Don Regel sounding off about the war in Vietnam and pointing out what could be done at home with the money being spent on the conflict.

As we suggest, the maverick republican congressman's views might suit the CBC's own leftist political concepts very well, particularly under the camouflage of a program dealing not so much with political ideology as with the problems MPs and Congressmen face in getting aross to the public.

To be fair though, the film also presented vehement denunciations of Regel's words from members of an audience he was addressing, in one case from a man who said his family background was from behind the iron curtain. Aside from that the U.S. congressman came over as an energetic and hard-working man sincerely interested in the people he represents.

The film also showed how much better off is a U.S. congressman with regard to advisory staff — Regel runs an office with a staff of about 12 — compared with his Canadian and U.S. counterparts.

Overall, it was an illuminating presentation, showing MPs and congressmen of the three countries in action in their respective habitats, meeting their constituents and helping them with community problems.

Shown touring his far-flung riding in British Columbia was Liberal MP and former newspaperman Paul St. Pierre. His and the work of every other dedicated MP is never-ending and often tedious. One came away from the program realizing that MPs really do need more money to enable them to do their job more adequately, as well as more staff and better office space, and that one of their greatest problems is public apathy toward the democratic process.

There was one curious element in the program — the introduction of a "mod" young man, long-haired and seated on the floor of his "pad," apartment or whatever, and pontificating cynically on the democratic process in the manner of our latter-day pseudo intellectuals, and finishing it all with a four-letter reference to the bureaucracy. Granted some of the ordinary MP types on the program expressed similar sentiments about the civil service, but they did so in less picturesque language.

We missed the young man's first appearance on the screen so are uncertain of what his part in the program was supposed to be, other than the apparent role of cynic and dissenter. Our final admiration was not for him or his kind, but rather for those hard-working parliamentary representatives who perform an arduous and necessary task in the service of society and democracy.

Middle East's Troubles

We wonder what is to be gained by the continued sabre-rattling of Egypt's new president, Anwar Sadat. At a recent mass rally in the Nile Delta town of Tanta, Sadat predicted that Egypt would fight an all-out war against Israel.

Such bravado is preposterous in the light of Egypt's disastrous defeat by Israel in the six-day war in 1967, and even allowing for the subsequent re-equipping of the Arab nation's forces by the Soviet Union.

We can understand Egypt's concern over territory still held by the Israelis as a result of the 1967 confrontation, but then Israel has sound strategic reasons for holding on to it. It was from the Golan Heights, for example, that Arab gunners used to shell Israeli communities and snipe at farmers in the fields. Other than that, the captured hill country is of little value to either side.

Apart from its dangerous implications in the context of world stability and peace, the continuing Arab-Israeli confrontation represents a monumental waste of money and material which would be better directed (and particularly in the case of Egypt which knows more of poverty than Israel) toward improving social and economic conditions in the country.

Blood Lust

Just as we have sadists who kill in the name of nationalism, or more precisely to satisfy some inner primeval lust, so we have in Canada some who must use snowmobiles to run down small and helpless members of the animal world. A letter on this page tells a sad tale in this regard ;such conduct is despicable, beneath contempt, and anyone caught should be dealt with in the courts.

A Further Look at the Sport of Snowmobiling

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Why are snow vehicles permitted on public streets and highways? Every snow-vehicle owner knows that these vehicles are completely unsafe when operated on public thoroughfares used by automobiles. Their lighting is insufficient both front and rear. They have no brake lights, no signal lights, no high and low beam, no horn, no rearview mirror. The steering is designed for deep snow and is almost useless on a light snow-covered roadway.

This is why snow vehicle drivers get off their machines and lift the rear end of the machine around when they come to a corner. The machine simply will not turn by itself. The braking system is completely inadequate. In short these machines simply were not designed for road use as the rapidly mounting fatality statistics verify.

The government of the Province of Ontario must accept much of the responsibility for these dreadful accidents. It would have been a relatively simple matter to ban these machines from the roadways when they first started to gain their appeal. With the large numbers at present this would be difficult and of course few politicians will take a stand. It is really quite amazing when one thinks of the Breathalyzer law introduced to prevent carnage on the highways, the strict safety requirements regarding automobiles, the stiff penalties for minor infractions under the Highway Traffic Act, the millions spent to keep our highways safe; all these with a view to traffic safety — and then allow snow vehicles on the highways. It simply does not make sense.

I won't comment on children driving 60 mph on these machines, the noise, the smoke, the limited visibility etc. I will mention that I own a snowmobile and that I have driven it in the City of Belleville. I am not repeating hearsay.

As you are aware, one of the more popular winter pastimes in Canada is snowmobiling. Clubs are being formed for snowmobilers and lately against snowmobilers.

I have nothing against snowmobiling per se, but I feel obligated to add my voice to the thousands of people who are against it for one reason or another.

The fields immediately North of West Park Village are used quite frequently by snowmobilers for leaving and entering the city. While enjoying a walk there during this last weekend, I was sickened at the evidence of the slaughter of eight cottontail rabbits. Each of these creatures was chased until exhausted and then run over by the "sickies" who enjoy playing God on their grown-up toys.

This is a prime example, of Man, the superior animal, using his abilities to torture and maim the animals who are supposedly his inferior.

Our whole family managed to get to Zwick's Island Park several times during the holidays at Christmas. The hill was excellent for little children trying out their skis, and for tobogganing. And having toilet facilities right there that were clean and not drafty was just great.

Many people were there enjoying the slopes, the flats and the ice. There seemed to be lots of room for skiing, skating, tobogganning and snowmobiling.

Lots of us enjoyed the Park immensely. So, thanks to the committee that does the planning, and the men who do the maintenance.

War-Ravaged Suez Deserted by All Except Army

SUEZ (AP) — Ruin reigns in this once-bustling Egyptian city at the southern outlet of the Suez canal.

Deserted by almost all its inhabitants, Suez today roughly resembles some tomb city of the ancient pharoahs. Practically nobody lives in Suez save workers who run the power and water supply plants for the benefit of the Egyptian army.

Unclaimed cats and dogs roam the streets. Howling dogs emerge from tumble-down houses, demolished mosques, churches and disfigured government buildings.

Parks are blemished with trenches and piles of sandbags. Soldiers march through the streets and army trucks rumble past the city hall, which overlooks part of the Gulf of Suez.

Police Chief Fathi Hammouda says the Middle East ceasefire which took effect last August prompted only 300 Suez residents to return to their bomb-ravaged homes. The authorities sent them away.

Hammouda said fierce shelling and air raids in the last 42 months killed 483 people, and that nearly 2,000 houses have been ruined.

Hammouda added that virtually all the district's 250,000 inhabitents had moved eastward. Some still dwell in nearby villages to supply the army with vegetables and fruits.

The government has shifted the El-nasr oil refinery from this city to Alexandria. On its old site, nothing is left except a few shelled storage tanks and rusty pipes.

The 57-year-old refinery, subjected to concentrated shelling, was nearly crippled in October, 1967, when Israeli guns pounded the compound in retaliation for the sinking of the destroyer Eilath by an Egyptian vessel.

Crime, Politics and the Law

The Trentonian

Strange things are happening to our concepts of law and justice.

No longer do we try people merely for the crimes they commit. We now introduce matters of race, religion and politics, on the doubtful theory that crimes are justified if one happens to belong to the FLQ, to any group dissenting against government, or to those who can claim that they are being persecuted instead of prosecuted.

In this strange atmosphere, we negotiate with murderers and kidnappers. We regard as heroes people who believe in killing and violence. We plead for clemency for those who have demonstrated a will to commit crimes.

On the one side we cry for tougher laws to make it safe for us all, but as soon as any action is taken to impose tough sentences on those who commit crimes, we raise an outcry about the sentences.

It is no small wonder if, in the circumstances, hijackers, kidnappers, bombers, train destroyers, and other practitioners of violence are encouraged to think that we lack the will to do anything to resist those who would break down all law by adopting an old and vicious philosophy that the end justifies the means.

Quebec politicians do not seem to discern this difference, and invite some of their own troubles by treating offenders as political prisoners, instead of people charged with crimes. One does not negotiate with criminals. One does not give them clemency they do not merit. One lets the law deal with them.

Does the Shoe Fit?

Kingsport (Tenn.) Times

Some one has said that when everybody is angry at the press it is a fairly good sign that the news is being told wihout regard to who likes it or who does not like it

The basic thesis of good reporting is to give the facts and let the chips fall where they may. It is true that there is today a great deal of "interpretive" writing so that the reader who reads casually, will not be misled.

It is possible that in some cases this is overdone and it is not particularly complimentary to the average reader or listener. But the purpose is good. And it is far better than trying not to step on any toes and trying to please the most people.

The Shoplifting Phenomenon

Peterborough Examiner

Of all the men and women who appear in court, some of the most difficult to understand are those charged with shoplifting.

If a man steals a loaf of bread because he has no money and hasn't eaten for two days, you can at least understand, if not condone, his actions.

But many people walk out of stores with trivial items which they really don't need or which they could afford to buy even if they did need them.

What possesses them to do it? Did they start in childhood and never get over the thrill of getting something for nothing? Do they have some compulsion to take something that does not belong to them?

Perhaps, people who shoplift equate it with cheating on income tax returns or other activities which are wrong but which are practised by large numbers of taxpayers.

What they should realize is that a conviction for shoplifting will give them a criminal record because shoplifting is an offence under the Criminal Code. A criminal record can cause all kinds of problems. Men who must be bonded in order to work at a certain job will find they cannot be bonded. People wanting to travel to other countries will find that a record could thwart their plans.

The standard penalty for first - offence shoplifting is a fine, but the amount of shoplifting in Peterborough has reached the point where judges are threatening to jail first offenders.

This is no idle threat. It was done in London, Ont., last year. Suburban housewives and businessmen found themselves serving three - day terms in the local jail for having walked off with a $1.98 bottle of perfume or a $3.00 pair of gloves. Next time you're tempted, think about the possible consequences. One piece of stupidity could ruin your life.

Dissidents Reprieved

Spain and Soviet Union Bow to World Opinion

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The reprieve of dissidents condemned to death in Spain and the Soviet Union has set the stage in a particularly happy way for the world's entry into 1971.

Prior to the reprieve announcements, the year 1970 had been notable primarily for eruptions of political violence in countries as far apart as Canada and Jordan, while natural disasters added to the generally depressing train of events.

Then came the show of mercy by Spanish and Soviet authorities, although the prisoners concerned still must endure harsh prison sentences and great doubts remain about the outlook for minority groups in the two countries.

The reprieves indicate that world opinion, if sufficiently impassioned and well mobilized, can sway the actions of even the most authoritarian governments in the direction of non-violent behavior.

Economic considerations, too, seemed to play a significant role in the outcome of the Spanish affair.

Some observers are suggesting that fears for the country's all-important tourist trade were among the considerations shaping the decision against the execution of the six Basques sentenced to death at Burgos.

Tourism in Spain has mushroomed in recent years, to the point where three million visitors from Britain alone went to Spanish centres in 1970.

Shooting the six condemned Basques might have caused upheavals in Spain comparable to the events preceding the great civil war of 1936-39 and this certainly would have ended the lucrative tourist trade.

Moreover Spain, traditionally isolated from the rest of Europe, is currently mounting efforts aimed at gaining solid ties with the European Common Market

The dreaded rattle of a firing squad's fusillade would hardly have helped this campaign and indeed would be likely to compound the stigma of strongman Francisco Franco's early associations with Hitler and Mussolini.

In similar fashion, the Soviets have been trying to deny any involvement with the kind of anti-Semitism which forms an integral part of Eastern European history and inspires memories of Adolf Hitler.

The death sentences pronounced against the Jews accused in Leningrad of plotting to hijack a plane led to a revival of charges in the outside world that the anti-Semitic tradition lives on among the Soviets.

Official as well as unofficial pleas for mercy, voiced around the world, obviously had their effect on the Russians, embarrassed as Moscow was by the renewed allegations of anti-Jewish bias.

But in London, the pressure for restraint brought to bear on the Spanish authorities by the British government in the Basque case caused gadfly MP Enoch Powell to question the correctness of official protests in such matters.

Unless British persons or interests are involved, the London government has "no standing to advise other governments how to manage their internal affairs." Powell argued.

Thus the worldwide controversy aroused by the fate of condemned men has also revived an argument over the extent to which nations can seek to influence one another's internal policies in a world made small by the workings of modern communications.

New Deal Before Commons

Veterans of Ill-fated Hong Kong Expedition to Get A Break

OTTAWA (CP) — Survivors of the disastrous 1941 Hong Kong military expedition will get a new deal under veterans legislation now before Parliament.

Introduced just before Christmas by Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube, the legislation provides a wide range of additional benefits for war veterans and their dependents and improves administrative machinery.

But it came as especially good news to former prisoners-of-war of the Japanese, represented almost entirely by those captured when Hong Kong fell Christmas Day, 1941. Nearly 2,000 Canadian troops had been assigned to Hong Kong in what has been called a tragic episode.

Several hundred veterans and widows stand to gain financially.

The bill incorporates a new principle: That any Canadian serviceman held by the Japanese more than a year and who has a disability is entitled to a minimum 50-per-cent disability pension.

In effect this means that practically any married Hong Kong veteran who has applied will receive at least $2,232. Single men will get at least $1,752.

These rates become effective April 1, and represent a 10-per-cent increase on current disability rates for pensioners.

Those with disabilities assessed at more than 50 per cent may receive a maximum of $4,464 for a 100-per-cent disabled married veteran and $3,504 for a 100-per-cent disabled single one.

At present, 368 Hong Kong veterans—of 1,197 drawing pensions —receive less than the 50-per-cent rate.

Medical experts recognize that the exceptionally rigorous conditions under which prisoners of the Japanese lived caused lasting nutritional disorders and psychological stresses in almost all cases.

"As they grow older their disabilities are aggravated," Mr. Dube said in a statement when introducing the new legislation Dec. 2.

Because of the exceptional circumstances, and recognizing the enduring potential for medical complications posed by the years in prison, the government is moving to raise the pension base for this category of veteran.

At the same time, Hong Kong veterans who have already died are considered to have died as a result of the physical toll taken in their prison years and their widows become automatically eligible for full widow's pension.

This means $2,400 a year at current rates, rising to $2,640 April 1.

Of 1,975 Canadians who sailed from Vancouver Oct. 27, 1941, for Hong Kong—members of the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Rifles of Canada—557 did not return.

About 1,200 Hong Kong veterans are living. Since the end of the war, about 200 have died. As of last Nov. 30, 209 dependents—widows, orphans and parents—were receiving pensions.

Canada sent the expedition at the request of the British government, to help British troops garrison the Crown colony in face of rising Far East tension. The Pacific war broke out three weeks after the Canadians landed.

Col. C. P. Stacey, in his history of the Canadian army 1939-45, called the Hong Kong venture a tragic episode.

The sudden Japanese attack caught the Canadians in "very unfavorable circumstances.

Dispatched to the Far East at a time when immediate hostilities were considered improbable, "they found themselves plunged abruptly into action without having undergone the concentrated and rigorous battle training which later fitted Canadian soldiers for operations in Italy and northwest Europe."

Gambling Casino in Toronto's Future?

TORONTO (CP) — Now that lotteries are legal and betting shops have a quasi-legal status, is a casino in this city's future?

Suggest that the city open a casino to help pay for civic projects and you'll get a strong reaction from just about anybody in Ontario in a position of influence.

City residents are already patronizing about 200 charity casinos a year, says Bob Terry of Beasley Amusements Novelty Co., a firm which runs games of chance at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Most of those casinos turn handsome profits. One casino this year raised $3,000 in two hours for a hospital charity.

No official consideration has been given to undertaking such an operation, but one city politician calls it "a terribly exciting idea."

"It's funny you should ask," said Alderman June Marks. "I've just received a letter from a citizen who has a background and experience in such matters, requesting us to consider the old city hall as a site for an international gambling casino.

"She's the first person who has asked me."

On the other side of the fence is Phil Givens, former mayor and now a Liberal member of Parliament, who calls it "a bizarre idea."

"An underworld element always seems to move in—I don't think you can control it. Sooner or later some politicians get involved."

Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon's reaction to the idea was "negative."

"I don't believe Toronto would prosper by becoming a wide-open town like Las Vegas."

"A gambling casino and (Mayor) Bill Dennison in the same town?" cried Ontario NDP leader Sephen Lewis in mock shock. "It boggles the mind!"

Inspector John Wilson of the morality squad said security would be a concern. "I visualize Las Vegas and see similar problems. And as far as the criminal element is concerned, the attraction is there."

"A casino is not much different from a racetrack," said Father Edward Boehler, chancellor of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Toronto.

"People will gamble as much as they want anyway. It's just a different species, and there'd be no moral objections to it, under proper circumstances and properly run."

Anti-pollution Research

Bottle Makers Seek Solutions

NEW YORK (AP) — American bottle makers are trying ways to reduce the role of non-returnable bottles in the country's pollution problems—from "self-destruct" containers to new uses for crushed glass.

On the test market now are soft drinks bottled in plastic, research is under way on material that melts on contact with water and glass manufacturers are experimenting with using old glass bottles to make new bottles, paving compounds, landfill material and roadbeds.

Although glass accounts for only some six per cent of the solid waste problem, says the National Academy of Sciences, it creates a larger problem because once it winds up on the garbage heap, it stays there, virtually indestructible.

And the glass disposal problem has prompted four bills in Congress and legislative action in 21 states to tax or ban non-returnable containers, many of which are glass.

Many pollution experts have seen one of the answers to the problem in plastic bottles, but their use has been held back because they gave off toxic fumes when burned.

But now Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola are test-marketing their soft drinks in plastic bottles they say can be safely burned.

The plastic bottles are priced the same as glass, non-returnable bottles and have the added advantages of being lighter than glass and able to withstand drops of eight to 10 feet without breaking, the companies say.

The bottles can be burned in incinerators.

Another solution to the glass disposal problem is being studied by ceramics engineers at Clemson University in South Carolina. They're working on a glass bottle that can be washed down the kitchen sink.

The bottle consists of an outer skin of metal oxide or plastic and an inner layer of water-soluble glass. When the consumer is finished with the bottle, he breaks the outer skin, exposing the middle layer to water, and down the drain it goes.

But Dr. C. C. Fain, one of the researchers on the federally-financed project, admits that this particular bottle could become a cause of pollution itself.

For one thing, the outer coating doesn't dissolve. Also, the inner layer could become a source of water pollution if enough bottles get washed down the drain or thrown into rivers and lakes.

"If you have too much of anything," says Fain, "you can have pollution."

Fain adds that the bottle is still several years away from completion and that marketing preparation would take several years more.

OVERWEIGHT- Is it Too Late to Control Your Weight?

Recent research reported in January Reader's Digest indicates that overweight people may be that way simply because they ate too much as children. After maturity, it may be too late to control weight. This study shows that an adult who has been significantly overweight since childhood can keep his weight down only by incessant self-denial. The guilt and self-hatred associated with chronic failure to stay on a diet may be more psychologically damaging than the overweight is physically damaging. Read OVERWEIGHT? A Fresh Look at the Problem in January Reader's Digest.

Canadian Automotive Exports Equal Imports

OTTAWA (CP) — A revised system of calculating automotive trade figures shows that for the first time in more than 40 years Canadian export sales of motor vehicles and parts were about equal in value to imports through most of last year.

Since the 1920s, Canadian trade figures have shown that vehicle and parts manufacturers imported more than they exported.

The revised calculations, published Thursday by Dominion Bureau of Statistics, also point to the possibility of a 1970 surplus in such trade with the United States alone. That would be the first recorded by Canada since the swift growth of the Canadian industry began with the U.S.-Canada auto trade pact of 1965.

The revisions cover the first 10 months of last year and go back five years.

The alterations are significant in the context of current debate between U.S. and Canadian authorities about the future of the auto pact.

The United States is pressing for relaxation of protective measures for Canada under the pact, saying they are no longer needed because Canada has been running a surplus in two-way trade.

For the first 10 months of last year, total value of vehicles and parts exported to all countries is shown as $2,941 million and imports as $3,025 million, for a deficit of about $83 million.

Exports to the United States alone in the period are valued at $2,733 million and imports at $2,742 million, for a deficit of about $9 million.

However, a footnote shows that certain categories of parts included in the import totals are excluded from the export tallies. The bureau said the understatement of exports would amount to about $100 million in a normal, recent year.

Thus, the bureau says, trade with all countries could approach a close balance when the uncounted exports are added. Similarly, there would be a surplus in trade with the United States.

In the same way, the recorded 1969 deficits of almost $290 million in vehicle trade with all countries and $172 million with the United States each would be reduced by about $100 million if the value of exports were fully stated. The special-parts exports are to the United States.

At the same time, the new method of counting has stopped well short of confirming previous U.S. calculations that Canada actually ran up a surplus in two-way automotive trade during 1969.

Other revisions raise the value of 1969 exports of vehicles and parts to the United States by $26 million to $3,338 million, but they also increase the value of imports by $50 million to $3,510 million.

That widens the 1969 Canadian deficit to $172 million from the originally-calculated $148 million, before the subtraction of the $100 million worth of uncounted exports.

In sporadic negotiations that began in 1969 and are due to resume this year, Canada has denied the U.S. contention that Canadian manufacturers were running a trade surplus.

In any case, the Canadians argue, some safeguards must be maintained in the auto pact to guarantee Canadian manufacturers a fair share of the total North American market.

The revisions to past figures and the $100-million footnote apparently constitute the extent to which Canadian authorities were willing to compromise on the statistical issue.

Historically, the revised figures show that Canadian automotive exports to all countries expanded to more than $3.5 billion in 1969 from $358 million in 1965, not counting the special category of parts.

Imports from all countries grew in the same period to more than $3.8 billion from $1.1 billion. The deficit, officially understated, thus shrank to about $290 million from $758 million.

In trade with the United States alone, exports rose in the period to about $3.3 billion from $231 million, imports to $3.5 billion from $968 million and the deficit narrowed to $172 million from $737 million.

Horses Left at Large By Vacationing Owner

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A London Humane Society official said Thursday the search for dead or starving horses which began Wednesday at the Muncey Indian Reserve 12 miles southwest of London has spread about 15 miles further west to Alvinston where a horse was found dead.

Insp. James Sharman said two other horses found in the Alvinston area were destroyed and belonged to the same herd of about 150 riding academy horses believed to belong to a Windsor area man.

Five horses were found dead Wednesday on Muncey reserve farm land two others had to be destroyed because of their condition. About 107 other horses, all in poor shape, were founded up and driven to a nearby farm where they are being fed and cared for.

Insp. Sharman said the horses were wintering on farms at the Muncey reserve and near Alvinston. He was unsuccessful in contacting the owner believed vacationing in the United States.

Chief Harry Miskokoman of the Muncey reserve criticized the society Thursday for not allowing the "Indian people to look after the horses."

He said the reserve has a high rate of unemployment and that the care of the horses should have been given to his men.

One Humane Society spokesman said it seems the horses were put into the fields and left to forage for themselves and he knew of now one hired to look after them.

Eastern Construction, general contractors for the Mall project, has commenced erection of steel for the 91,000-square - foot Simpson Sears store at the extreme north of the project, while a building permit for the foundation for the enclosed mall section of the complex has also been taken out at city hall.

The permit value of the Simpson Sears store is $950,000.

Foundation permits for 212,500 feet of floor space at the mall have now been taken out. Still to be taken out is the permit for the Steinburg Miracle Mart food store which will be the grocery supermarket outlet at the north end plaza.

Welch and Potter Differ

While counselling against premature commitment to any candidate, Dr. Potter also called for specific policy statements from candidates on a wide range of political issues.

"I'm still waiting to have them answer some of the questions that I'm asking," he said on his return yesterday.

Earlier in Ottawa he claimed some indications of success for his one - man campaign. He told reporters that some Conservatives — who will vote at a mid - February leadership convention— had come to his press conferences to tell him that they will not choose among the candidates until policies are spelled out by the leadership contenders.

Among areas where Dr. Potter wants clear-cut definitions of policy are education costs, the legislatures committee system, government bureaucracy, unemployment and other socio-economic issues.

Dr. Potter said that in more than half the centres where he held press conferences, he was asked to stay over and speak to delegates who will vote at the leadership convention.

In three centres — London, St. Thomas and St. Catharines — local Conservatives were "anxious for me to come back and talk to the delegates," he said.

Ann Landers

Baby's Name A Source of Grief

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our son is four months old. Before he was born my husband and I decided if we had a boy we would name him Gregory Dennis. My husband's name is Gregory and my father's name is Dennis. My brother's name was also Dennis. He was killed in Vietnam in 1965.

ANN LANDERS

We started to call the baby Denny from the day he was born. He looks very much like my brother. I thought this would please my folks but it has just about killed my mother. She says we must call our son by another name because she can't stand the constant reminder of her own boy who died so young.

I think this is selfish of my mother. After all, we selected the name because we like it and we wanted to honor the memory of my brother. This problem has reached the point where my mother refuses to come to our home unless we abide by her wishes. My husband and I need a non-relative to decide whether or not we should bow to Mother's demands? Will you help us, please? — MOM VERSUS MOM.

DEAR VERSUS: Call the boy Greg. Your mother's wishes should be respected.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married Larry five years ago. I was 21, he was 31 — divorced with a 10-year-old son by his first wife.

We now have two little girls of our own. Larry Jr. has always been a problem when he visits us, He is a mixed up kid, moody, terrible temper and no one can get along with him. I have bent over backwards to be pleasant but I have failed to get the boy's confidence and I am through knocking myself out. I've tried to be nice and it doesn't pay, so now I ignore him and he ignores me.

Last July Larry's ex-wife told him she can't manage the boy, that he is too much for her — he needs his father. So we took Jr. for the rest of the summer. I had a headache the whole time. All the while the boy's mother was having a ball, dating like a teen-ager and travelling all over the country.

Last weekend Larry told me we must take his son into our home. It seems Jr. has gotten himself in trouble with the law. The judge agreed to drop the charges and place the boy in his father's custody. If we don't take him he'll have to go to a detention home. I can barely stand this kid for a weekend. What will happen if he's here permanently? Larry says he can't abandon the boy now and I'll just have to put up with it. Please tell me what to do. I want to keep my marriage together. — A WRECK.

DEAR A W.: You have very few options. You'll have to take the boy or separate from your husband. I urge you to get counselling and learn how to cope with the situation. Later the boy should get professional help. Jr. sounds like a disturbed kid who has had a rough time and is showing it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a young woman with three children. I have been living with a divorced man who promised he'd marry me before the first baby was born but somehow he never got around to it. I am sure he loves me and I know he adores the kids but I hate to go on living this way. His big hang-up is that he is afraid the marriage might get into the paper. Any advice? — SINGLE MOTHER.

DEAR SINGLE: In Cook County when a couple files for a marriage licence, if they request that the record be kept out of the paper, their wishes are usually granted. Check with the Bureau of Vital Statistics in your county. If you tell them you wish the item left out the newspaper they will propably co-operate.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Ernie and I went together for nearly five years. We were planning to get married. Last February Ernie got into a jam and I lent him $1,000. In June I caught him cheating on me. I later learned he had been sneaking around with this tramp for almost a year. When we split he owed me $500. After the bust-up, he stopped making payments. I learned yesterday that Ernie has applied for a job that he wants more than anything in the world. I happen to know a few things about his past that could ruins his chances. Should I drop the louse a note and tell him if he doesn'e come across with the $500 I will tie a can to his little red wagon?

After the dirty trick he played on me I believe I have every right to get my money back any way I can. Do you? — USED.

DEAR USED: I'd say Ernie has done enough damage. Are you going to let him make a blackmailer out of you, too? Revenge is not sweet — it is bitter. Don't debase yourself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What's the matter with people? For the zillionth time it happened again. I met a friend at a meeting. He was someone I hadn't seen in about five years, a former neighbor. Of course I asked about the kids. He immediately whipped out his billforld and started to hunt for pictures. After going through a bunch of debris he handed me a ratty looking photograph of the family, with the following comments: "This is really an old picture, and not very good of the two youngest. Sorry it's torn. The oldest boy was on the end. He's a great kid, too bad he got ripped off."

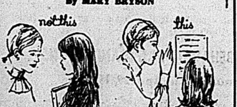
Why do people carry pictures they need to apologize for? If a person wants to show off his family, or his new baby, or his wife — why doesn't he carry a decent photograph or forget it?

You have a way of getting things across in a very frank way. Help! — BOCA RATON.

DEAR BOCA: So do you. You don't need any help from me. Thanks for writing.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I asked you to come home early today so you could stay with Timmy while I went to the tea at Mrs. Smith's house."

Jane: "I forgot all about it. You asked me way last week, but you didn't remind me."

Mother: "I've put up my schedule for the week. Will you mark down your after-school meetings on this calendar? I've put a circle around the days I would like you to come home early. If you can't make it, let me know so I can get a babysitter."

A bulletin board with the family's schedules listed will save tempers and confusion. Make it a family custom for everyone to check the board and to put down plans and appointments.

Three Ways to Cook Parsnips for the Family

By MARY MOORE

Question: Please give some ideas for serving parsnips. They are cheap and I love them but I have to coax my family to eat them. Zelda

Answer: Good question.

CRUMBED PARSNIPS

Scrub and pare parsnips. Cut into ½" slices, cutting wide slices in half crosswise. In saucepan barely cover with boiling salted water and cook not more than 10 min. Let them dry off and then dredge them with flour — it takes ¼ to 1-3 cup. Beat one egg with 1 tbsp. water and ½ tsp. salt. Have ready about 1½ cups very fine dry breadcrumbs. Line the three dishes up from right to left: the floured parsnips, beaten egg and crumbs. Dip parsnip pieces in egg, then in crumbs. Transfer to large frying pan in which you have generous amount of butter and fry until golden on both sides.

CREAMED PARSNIPS

To serve 5 or 6 wash and pare 9 medium size (not large) parsnips. Cut into strips and then into ½" cubes. Boil in salted water to barely cover until tender — about 25 to 30 min. Drain and add to cream sauce: Heat 1 cup milk. Heat together 1½ tbsps. each butter or margarine and flour and when blended stir in the hot milk until thick. Taste. If they require salt add a little and a shake of black pepper.

PARSNIP PUFFS

2 cups pureed (pushed through coarse strainer) cooked parsnips
2 tbsps. melted butter
1 egg — yolk and white separated
Salt and Pepper
¼ cup milk or cream

To the pureed cooked parsnips add the melted butter, seasonings and milk or cream. Beat the egg yolk and add it. Beat the egg white until very stiff and fold it in. Spread on platter and chill. With buttered palms shape into rolls 1" x 3". Roll in buttered very fine cracker crumbs. Place on buttered baking dish and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until puffy and hot. These are delicious with Swiss steak.

Personal Remarks Are in Bad Taste

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I would like to state: Fat people know they are fat — they don't need to be told! — but we are told, not just by advertising, but by friends and even strangers, that we are "putting on a little weight, eh?" — a fact we already know, especially when trying to buy a dress for age under 60 and size over 16, or shoes that slim (NOT FATTEN LEGS!

No one would say to an acquainatnce who was less than attractive, "My, you've gotten ugly lately," but the same person would surely be reminded if weight had been gained. We see on TV that it takes gumption to tell someone that they have bad breath — if only the same would apply to us!

People must remember that inside that thick skin is a soft heart, and often a rather deflated ego.

Please — all you non - fat, poly-unsaturated, low cal thin people — please try to be kind and considerate as well, and don't remind us that we are — Fat

Dear Fat: Right! If we can button up our lip when we see a good friend light up a coffin nail or take a couple too many cocktails, we should be able to leave the plump ones to their indulgence. Personal remarks are still in bad taste.

Now if a person wants help in slimming down, that's different. Just write to me.

• • •

Dear Doris: This is to let you know how I am getting along. I played out on my dishwashing job last month. About that time, Manpower called to say they had an opening for me to take an aptitude test, if I was interested. You can believe I was!

The results showed that in motorization, mechanics and in matching figures for size and shape, I was barely average. But in general my ability to learn, my vocabulary and grasp of words and their meanings were all quite a bit above average. So in two weeks I start grade nine and 10 upgrading.

I feel that I am being given a chance and the rest is up to me. If I don't make it I will have no one to blame but myself. I am going to find it hard work as I have been away from studying since 1934.

I truly appreciate the trouble you went to for me, in making inquiries of the provincial department of education and all the rest of it. — Mrs. M. H.

Dear Mrs. M. H.: So out of the desperation which came of a lack of physical stamina, you have found promise of a new kind of career—one closer to your heart's desire and natural talents. Hurrah!

Of course the going will be tough; but you only have to manage one day at a time. Simply don't let it get you down. If you begin to falter write me again and I'll think of something to cheer you up.

• • •

Confidential to Wondering: Get a mutual friend to introduce you casually to the boy you like. Then you can speak to him whenever you see him. Beyond that, the moves are up to him!

• • •

Dear Doris: I am newly arrived in a rural community where the big boast is: "The whole gang dropped in for dinner last night and I wasn't expecting them!" The ladies in the community love to play hostess to unexpected guests, apparently, and their invitation is usually, "Come over sometime."

Now I wouldn't think of dropping in unannounced for dinner and I'd probably have heart failure if the "whole gang" dropped in on me. I've always thought that if you wanted guests for dinner you gave them a special invitation — and when someone asks me to "come over sometime" and doesn't specify time and date, I don't take the invitation seriously. What is proper etiquette — Town Gal

Dear Town Gal: If you go by the books you don't risk dropping in at dinner - time. "Pot luck" might not be so lucky that night.

To drop in on a good friend during the evening, or for an hour in the afternoon when a hostess would likely serve tea — that's different! But the tossed off come - for - dinner - sometime is usually an excuse for an invitation. If you really want a special friend to be present at your dinner table you name the day and hour.

Rev. Bunner Speaks At Prayer Week

Rev. John Bunner spoke at the Week of Prayer Service on Wednesday night at the Salvation Army Citadel. His theme was, "United by the Spirit through Prayer." He regretted that the prayer meeting has gone from so many churches. "If the vigil lights have gone out, the altar flame is low."

It was a challenging message. People left with a determination to give a larger place to prayer in their lives, privately and publicly.

The band and choiristers provided the special music. Captain Gurney conducted the service and led in a happy time of song.

Pioneer Styles Are in Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Designer Marion Digney presented a prairie-inspired collection of ginghams and ruffles Wednesday that could easily have stepped off a covered wagon.

But pioneer women never had it so good or so pretty and feminine. Many of the dresses were easy-care polyesters that never need ironing.

The designer, a recent bride, said her collection was inspired by the old West when girls wore nipped-in waists and ruffles, not holsters, and by her own wedding.

In fact, one of the prettiest dresses was a pink polyester crepe mididress with a small matching smocked muff which was worn by her bridesmaids. There were ruffles at the neck and the hem and tiny covered buttons down the back.

Her going-away outfit, a beige sleeveless V-necked dress with buttons down the front and a petal-inspired opening up the front of the skirt, was also in the collection.

The prairie dresses all had tiny ruffles at the neck, ruffles at the hem and many had gingham ribbon on the bodice or skirt or both.

In marked contrast to her demure ginghams, was a bright red mushroom pleated dress with gold ribbon trim around the slightly lifted waist and in three rows on the skirt.

The Marion Digney fashions are priced from $80 to $100.

Week of Prayer Series Continues

Continuing in the Week of Prayer series on Tuesday night, Rev. E. Gritter spoke on the Lord's Prayer in the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church. "In praying for our daily bread, we must include the unemployed. There is no point in praying for forgiveness unless we are willing to forgive others, even our enemies. In our affluent society, we may need to ask for forgiveness for being more concerned about things, than about people. There is nothing selfish about the Lord's Prayer."

Pastor S. Tilley led the service. Harry Dulmage, read the Scripture and led in prayer. Another layman, Owen Thomas, played the piano and joined with Mrs. Tilley in singing, "Near To The Heart of God."

The concluding service in the series will be held in Christ Church Anglican on Thursday at 8 p.m., with Rev. L. Dean of Tabernacle United Church bringing the message.

Flower Power Takes Over in Hat Fashions

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the hemline controversy has receded, the head may get some extra attention.

Hats are shown mainly with simple clean lines for this spring: roll brim straws, stitched denims. However, watch those hat people.

The tailored crowd might take alarm at a heading from the Millinery Institute of America's showing Wednesday. It was called The New Nostalgia, with hats "often trimmed with the most nostalgic of flowers, like poppies, roses and buttercups."

Sure enough, there appeared a quivering array of green fern leaves studded with tiny flowers, a whole clump of white ostrich plumes, a flat red straw extending into dog ears on each side, a patchwork snakeskin cap with veil tied across the face and an assortment of big, flower-drenched wide-brims.

Will designers tire of clean lines and inch into a crazy era again? They started with the gaucho as a good answer for longer skirts, but this fall, some hatters were already ho-humminy stiff brims and touting softer felts. What's next?

If you can't drum up enthusiasm for hats-tailored or "nostalgic" — you could join the women who spent $1,000 million on wigs last year, says Armando Ghedini. He designs the wiggiest wigs around.

Zanuck Departure Ends an Era

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The departure of Richard Zanuck as president of 20th Century-Fox marked the apparent end of the most notable dynasty in the film industry today.

It also brought further erosion of family control of the movie business, which once was the most important factor in the film hierarchy.

"There's nothing wrong with nepotism—as long as you keep it in the family," Samuel Goldwyn was alleged to have once said.

Goldwyn knew. He came into the film business because his first wife was the sister of Jesse Lasky, a vaudevillian who started making flickers.

Many another pioneer entered film-making because of relatives Harry Cohn was brought into Universal because his brother Jack worked there. Later the brothers formed Columbia, which Robert Benchley termed "the pine tree studio" "because it has so many Cohns."

Carl Laemmle, founder of Universal, filled the company with relatives and established his son Junior as production head.

MGM employed a host of persons who bore the names of Loew, Schenck or Mayer or were related to those founders of the company. Late in MGM's history, a production unit composed of company scions was formed.

Studio wags referred to the unit as "sons of the pioneers."

Louis B. Mayer was frustrated in his hopes to establish a dynasty at MGM. He had no sons. His two daughters married David O. Selznick and William Goetz, both of whom became heads of studios. But not MGM. They declined to work for their father-in-law.

The Warner brothers offered a formidable family for control of their company, yet no Warner remains in control today. Jack L. Warner, the surviving brother, became estranged from his own son. For a time Warner established his son-in-law, William Orr, as production head. But that didn't work, and Warner later sold his interest in the company.

Other Warner sons-in-law were Mervyn Leroy and Milton Sperling both important film makers Once when Sperling produced a notable flop, a studio wisecracker commented: "That'll set the son-in-law business back 10 years."

With the deaths of the founding fathers and economic shakeup of the industry, relatives have been disapearing from studio payrolls.

The split of Richard and Darryl Zanuck came as a surprise. Young Richard had been well thought of by the film crowd. But Fox had made some costly errors and someone had to take the rap. Not father Darryl, who remained chairman of the board.

Two major companies continue to follow the familial pattern.

After the deaths of the Cohn brothers Abe Schneider took over control of Columbia. He now is chairman of the board, and Leo Jaffe, who had been related by marriage, is president of the parent firm, Columbia Industries Son Stanley Schneider is president of Columbia Pictures, and son Howard Jaffe is a producer.

Oddly, another Jaffe son, Stanley, is president of Paramount Pictures.

The Disney studio, founded by brothers Walt and Roy, still retains the family touch. Walt's son-in-law, Ron Miller, is production head, and Roy Jr. is a producer at the studio.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose sharply higher in brisk mid-morning trading today on the Toronto stock market.

On index, industrials were up .73 to 176.16, golds 3.50 to 168.64, base metals .88 to 92.57 and western oils .58 to 199.05.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 771,000 shares, up from 721,000 at the same time Thursday.

Trading Thursday was the heaviest since Nov. 30.

Gains outnumbered losses 178 to 84 with 171 issues unchanged.

Biggest advances were in beverage, chemical, industrial mining and merchandising sectors.

Fourteen of the exchange's 17 sub-groups were higher.

Among rising issues, Four Seasons was up ¾ to $11, Union Carbide ⅝ to $16¼, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ⅝ to $39¼, Canada Cement LaFarge ½ to $39, CPR ½ to $69½, Aquitaine ⅜ to $25¼, Alcan ¼ to $24⅝, Placer ½ to $32, Kerr-Addison ⅜ to $10⅛, Sherritt ⅜ to $16¾, Chieftain 25 cents to $7.75 and Ranger ⅛ to $12⅜.

Massey-Ferguson was down ⅝ to $10⅝. The company said it will omit its first-quarter dividend, usually payable Jan. 31.

Among other declining issues, Supertest common was down ¾ to $16, Northern and Central Gas ⅛ to $15⅞ and BP Oil and Gas five cents to $5.85.

On index, industrials gained .66 to 175.43, golds 1.64 to 165.14, base metals .25 to 91.69 and western oils 2.28 to 198.47.

Volume was 2.72 million shares, up from 1.99 million and highest since Nov. 30.

Gains outnumbered losses 350 to 167 with 245 issues unchanged.

Fifteen of the exchange's 17 sub-groups were higher.

Observers said the market continued strong in the wake of speculation of prime rate reductions soon by Canada's chartered banks.

Several large U.S. banks have recently announced reductions in their prime rates.

Englebert's Show No Match for Flip

NEW YORK (AP) — A comedy-variety special these days in television needs more than the mere pre-emption of a couple of situation comedies. There are, after all, comedy-variety hours in the regular schedules six nights a week.

Changing Scene on ABC Thursday night, was just another forgettable hour of lively dancing and pleasant music, hymn. Barbara Eden, still dressed as if she just popped out of her genie bottle, was there for a couple of numbers. There were hordes of young dancers and singers.

And, alas, there was the comedy. It started with weak jokes about the name Engelbert Humperdinck, hardly legitimate since it's not his real name but one he chose because it sounds funny.

But the blackouts and sight gags were the worst. Don Adams, for instance, introduced a fearless lion tamer, saying he would thrust his arm in the animal's mouth. There was an off-camera scream and Adams's line was, "Lets hear it for Lefty!"

The funniest performer was a country style yarn spinner named Jud Strunk—maybe he thinks that's a funny name, too—who rambled through some Down-East stories. It was a change, anyway, from the usual Down-South accents of yarn spinners.

Earlier on NBC, Flip Wilson, with Bing Crosby as a guest, maintained his high standard of comedy. His show is really special. Funniest bit of that hour was Flip playing Geraldine, this time an untouchable bunny in a Playboy club.

Ottawa Actors Get Reaction

OTTAWA (CP) — The experimental theatre company at the National Arts Centre has proved you can do almost anything if you have persistence, acting talent and a firm hold on professionalism.

The seven-actor company Thursday evening opened its second improvised production of a short season with a funny, scary, sophisticated performance that insisted that even the most picky in the audience should respond.

Among other things, the company managed for perhaps the first time by anybody to exploit effectively the elaborate options that come with the Centre's 250-seat studio theatre.

The Evanescent Revue justifies the determination of NAC management to score in the realm of experiment if only to efface a fat middle-class image.

With any justice, however, it will not blot out the company's obligation to the ideas and imagination of its absent resident director, Michael Bawtree.

Mr. Bawtree, 31, directed the first production, an improvised in-joke entitled How The Company Went To An Island, What Happened And Who Came Back.

His residency was interrupted with a holiday after the play left Ottawa's literati affecting various postures around it, moved local critics to yawn and imparted rueful thoughts of other tax-paying theatre-goers.

In The Evanescent Revue, guest-director Joel Miller, a native of Los Angeles, has added a smoother sense of humor to Mr. Bawtree's original concept of a contest among the actors.

Moreover, he has unleashed his actors to let themselves go at their best in their favorite, maddest roles.

The first reward for the audience is a treat from Jackie Burroughs of Toronto, winner of a Canadian film award in 1969.

Miss Burroughs manages to outfox the defensive irreverence of the evening as a sinuous, whimsical, outrageous, undeniable lady of many emotions. She ends a psychological travelogue by sinking reproachfully on an elevator built into the stage, leaving two frustrated lovers in dismay.

Matching that are two turns by Maureen Fitzgerald putting together plump-girl prudery with insidious manipulation.

The other actors—Richard Donat, Beth Ann Cole, Dominic Hogan, Neil Munro and James Timmins—respond with a clever mixture of humor, terror and indifference.

Soccer Star's Image Tarnished by Night Out on Town

LONDON (AP) — The golden image of Bobby Moore, England team captain and one of the world's top soccer stars, appeared badly tarnished today—stained, perhaps for life, by a night out on the town.

Soccer fans and sportswriters bitterly attacked the handsome player they have idolized since he led England to victory in the 1966 World Cup.

His offence was to dance and drink at a night spot in Blackpool until 2:30 on a Saturday morning before leading his club West Ham into a vital afternoon Football Association Cup match.

West Ham, eager to make a run in the contest because of its rock-bottom showing in the First Division of the English League, lost 4-0 to Blackpool.

Moore and three other club players—including former England star Jimmy Greaves—were fined by West Ham management Thursday. The amounts were not officially disclosed, but sources said Moore had to pay up at least one week's wages, about £180.

"I think Bobby Moore must really be finished with West Ham fans now," said William White, leader of a militant group of West Ham supporters.

White said his group planned to picket West Ham Stadium at the club's next home game to rub in their protests against Moore.

An unnamed West Ham player not involved in the night out was widely quoted as saying:

"There is nobody at the club who doubts Moore's ability. He is a great player—but sometimes we wonder if he sets the right example as captain."

Moore's name became a household word for glittering soccer success with England's rise to the pinnacle of world soccer four years ago.

The flaxen-haired skipper, who has played 85 times for his country, was feted and honored. The Queen bestowed him with the Order of the British Empire. His earnings from soccer and connected business enterprises soared to a reputed £25,000 a year.

But things began to go wrong in 1970, when England was eliminated in the World Cup in Mexico by West Germany.

A suspicion of stealing a gold bracelet in Colombia still hangs over Moore's head. Colombian police cleared him—but that country's courts have not yet done so.

West Ham has been losing regularly and is in danger of slipping to the Second Division. Critics have recently been suggesting Moore's leadership is not good enough to get West Ham out of the trough.

Outlook Worst Ever For Wings

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Probably at no other time in their 44-year history in the National Hockey League has the future of Detroit Red Wings been more clouded.

When the Red Wings lost 7-4 Thursday night to Buffalo Sabres, one of the NHL's two new expansion clubs, it was their ninth loss in 11 games and increased the average number of goals scored against them in those 11 games to more than six.

In other action, Boston Bruins defeated Vancouver Canucks 6-4 and Philadelphia Flyers and Los Angeles Kings played to a 5-5 tie.

At Buffalo, veteran Phil Goyette paced the Sabres with four assists and a goal while Paul Andrea scored a pair of goals.

The Sabres, like a shark sensing blood, scored three goals in each of the first two periods to overwhelm the Red Wings.

At Boston, the powerful Bruins allowed the Canucks a 3-2 second-period lead before they unleashed a four-goal barrage to take control of the game before 40 minutes had elapsed.

Centre Phil Esposito ended a mild scoring slump with his 35th and 36th goals of the season. The 28-year-old Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., native also had an assist as he increased his NHL scoring lead to 75 points, 11 more than team-mate Bobby Orr, who holds down second spot. Orr notched his 16th goal and picked up an assist.

Esposito nearly esablished a modern-day scoring record when he appeared to have completed his fifth three-goal game of the season. However, referee Wally Harris disallowed Esposito's third goal, ruling that play had been stopped before the puck went into the net.

The Bruins tied the NHL's record for most shorthanded goals in a season by a team when Dallas Smith connected with Boston's 14th this season while the Canucks held a man advantage late in the first period.

Chicago Black Hawks set the mark of 14 shorthanded goals in the 1964-65 season.

The win increased Boston's grip on first place in the East to three points over idle New York Rangers, who have 58 points.

Rookie Dale Tallon counted twice, his ninth and 10th, for the Canucks, the league's other expansion team.

Vancouver remained in fifth spot in the East, with 31 points, seven points back of Toronto Maple Leafs and three ahead of Detroit.

At Philadelphia, Bill Flett's goal at 12:11 of the final period capped a Los Angeles rally that brought the Kings back from a three-goal deficit midway through the second period.

Flett fired from the boards to the left of goaltender Doug Favell, who attempted to sweep the puck away with his stick. But the puck deflected off the Philadelphia goalie's stick into the net.

Esposito Regains Touch

The Esposito-Orr combination of the Bruins continued their rampant scoring pace as Boston defeated Vancouver Canucks 6-4 in National Hockey League action Thursday night.

Phil Esposito notched goals No. 35 and 36 and assisted on another to remain on top in the individual scoring race with 75 points.

Team-mate Bobby Orr picked up a goal and an assist to improve his second-place position to 64 points, 12 ahead of Bobby Hull of Chicago who has 52 points.

KITCHENER (CP) — Jerry Forier announced Thursday his resignation as coach of Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series. Forier directed the Rangers to a seventh-place finish last year, his first season as coach. The team is tied with Hamilton Red Wings for eighth place in the 10-team league this season. General manager Walter (Punch) Scherer of the Rangers said he would take over as coach tonight when the team meets St. Catharines Black Hawks here.

'Other Guy' Answers Abel

DETROIT (AP) — "That other guy" accused by resigned general manager Sid Abel Wednesday of being the root of all Red Wing hockey evils, answered his chief critic reluctantly Thursday—and blasted the Detroit press.

"I don't want to get into any mud-slinging," said Jim Bishop, executive director of Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

"I like the man (Abel). I've eaten with him, drank with him, been to his home.

"I'm somewhat bewildered and perplexed by his decision. There's been no apparent friction between us in 18 months, with the exception of the first week I was here.

"We had an argument then, but that was cleared up by a handshake. He never said anything about this to me before. If he felt this way, he should have said so in a personal conference. We've had nothing but amiable relations."

The argument referred to took place when Bishop first joined the Red Wings organization. Abel said the two men almost got into a fist fight when Abel said Bishop had no business at a club meeting. "Gadsby stepped between us and broke it up," Abel said, referring to former coach Bill Gadsby.

Although his reaction to Abel Thursday was relatively mild, Bishop, a onetime lacrosse coach from Oshawa, Ont., had harsh words for the Detroit press corps:

"I'm not the hockey expert," he said, "but it looks to me like the club's main problems have been injuries and vicious hints in the papers about division.

"This team's not loaded with depth, so the injuries hurt badly. But the division hinted at constantly in the press had to hurt the team. We (Bishop and coach Ned Harkness) have been maligned since we arrived here. I don't think we can win in this thing."

Asked about Abel's contention Wednesday that Harkness was "not a coach," and that "all problems" with the Wings date from Bishop's arrival.

"I would have to say that Ned Harkness has been placed in the role of a scapegoat for anything and everything that went wrong. I think his record speaks for itself.

"The team has been out of the playoffs for three of the last four years. It needs a lot of work and Harkness has worked hard. I don't know how he (Abel) could blame us for the team missing the playoffs for three years prior to our coming here.

"There are a lot of things that could be wrong with the team. Anything's possible. It could all be my fault, although I don't think it is."

Schinkel Breaks Monopoly

MONTREAL (CP)—The dominance of Chicago Black Hawks in the West Division of the National Hockey League this season was emphasized today in the results of the voting for 12 berths on the division's team for the 24th annual NHL All-Star game Jan. 19 at Boston.

The Hawks, who currently hold a 10-point lead over second-place St. Louis Blues in Chicago's first season as a West Division entrant, placed eight players on the team.

This is the most members a team has ever had voted into an all-star game. St. Louis, which had three players named in the poll conducted among West Division members of the NHL Writers' Association, had eight players in the 1969 all-star game, but only four were named in the voting, the other four being added by St. Louis coach Scotty Bowman that season.

The only unanimous choice in the voting, which was based on the system of five points for a first-place choice, three for a second and one for a third, was Bobby Hull, Chicago's great left winger. Hull polled 21 first-place votes for 105 points. Right winger Ken Schinkel of Pittsburgh Penguins was the only player to break the Chicago-St. Louis monopoly.

The team, with point-totals in brackets:

KEN SCHINKEL

Bowman was coach of St. Louis in the Stanley Cup final last spring in which Boston defeated the Blues in four straight games. He will name the other eight players to round out the West Division team which will face the East Division all-stars, coached by Harry Sinden, who was Boston's coach last season. It will be Bowman's third straight appearance as coach of the West Division club.

Four of the players named—Wakely, Magnuson, Martin and Ecclestone—will be appearing in their first all-star game. Bobby Hull is the veteran of the 12 players chosen, having been in nine previous all-star games.

The selection of the Hull brothers at left wing and goalie Tony Esposito means that there will be two brother combinations in this year's game. Centre Phil Esposito of Boston was a unanimous choice in the East Division voting announced earlier.

The only position in which Chicago did not have a player named was right wing.

Schinkel, who played in two previous games as a Pittsburgh representative, led the voting for the right wing position, but he will be unable to play because he underwent surgery earlier this week for a broken collar bone, suffered in a game at Montreal against the Canadiens, Dec. 30.

He is not expected to be back in the lineup for at least eight weeks. Bowman will name another player to take Schinkel's place.

The poll was taken to name 12 players from the West Division for the all-star game only. It is not connected in any way with the balloting at the end of the season for the official first and second all-star teams for the 1970-71 season.

Olympic Committee Member Begins Education After 18 Years

LONDON (AP) — Lord Killanin, a vice-president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), says he has learned more about the problems encountered by various sports from three days of talks than he had in his 18 years as a committee member.

Killanin headed a committee of two other vice-presidents—Count Jean de Beaumont of France and Jonkheer Van Karnebeek of The Netherlands—which met with international federations in London. The session ended Thursday.

The IOC group moves to Paris for meetings Jan. 11-12 and then to Lausanne, Switzerland, for further talks Jan. 13-14.

Object of the talks is to work out Olympic rules of eligibility in all sports.

Representatives of all 26 international federations are discussing their problems with the IOC committee.

At the end of the talks, the three vice-presidents will meet at Lausanne, Jan. 15, to work out a report to the executive board, due to meet in the same city in March.

The most troublesome sport as far as the Olympics is concerned is skiing.

Avery Brundage, IOC president, recently disqualified 10 skiers, including Canadians Rod Hebron and Peter Duncan, for alleged violations of Olympic rules of amateurism.

Since Brundage's announcement, Hebron retired and Duncan was not named to Canada's national team.

Marc Hodler, president of the International Skiing Federation, and other top FIS officials talked over this matter with IOC committee in London Thursday.

Afterwards, Hodler said: "I'm confident all 10 skiers broke no rules—either IOC or FIS. IOC rules say that skiers can teach—not coach—athletes in the elementary principles of the sport."

"We believe that is what happened. . . . I feel sure that FIS will be backed by all national associations."

It was said that the 10 skiers had been paid $50 for attending a United States ski school.

"The case of the skiers involved is that they are allowed under IOC rules to take money to teach elementary skiing. The fee is governed by the money paid to local teachers," Hodler said.

Killanin said: "Speaking personally, I believe FIS has given a satisfactory explanation."

The IOC committee will talk with the skating, volleyball, fencing, field hockey, canoeing, modern pentathlon and biathlon, equestrian, luge, bobsled and tobogganing federations in Paris.

It will meet soccer, gymnastics, shooting, basketball, handball, rowing, cycling, and wrestling officials in Lausanne.

Liston Ranked No. 8

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Liston still was a ranking heavyweight when he died at 38.

Ring Magazine, in its monthly ratings, listed the former heavyweight champion as the No. 8 contender in the December ratings, behind George Chuvalo of Toronto, the Canadian heavyweight champion.

The list, released Thursday, was compiled some time before Liston's body was found Tuesday night in his Las Vegas, Nev., home.

Muhammad Ali was ranked the No. 1 contender to heavyweight champion Joe Frazier. They will meet on March 8.

Donato Paduano of Montreal, No. 3 in the welterweight division and Edmonton's Al Ford, No. 5 among the lightweights, are the only other ranking Canadians.

Hawley Stands Pat

TORONTO (CP) — Jockey Sandy Hawley said Thursday he intends to complete his contract with horseman Tom Hays even though he is dissatisfied with the arrangement.

The Whitby, Ont., jockey, who now is riding at Tropical Park Racetrack in Florida, said in a prepared statement issued by his Toronto lawyer, Tony Hendrie:

"My interest is in my work as a professional jockey and my performance is a matter of record. I do not presently intend and have not instructed my lawyer to take any action in the courts or to ask the Ontario Racing Commission to intervene in any difference with Tom Hays over my apprentice contract." The contract lasts until June 1971.

Hawley's differences with the Oakville, Ont., horseman hinge on the horse owner's insistence that Hawley retain Francis Mesite as his agent at Tropical Park.

Hawley has said he is unhappy with Mesite's services and would prefer to have Sandy Arden as his agent.

Hawley went to Tropical with a total of 451 winners late last year and a chance to catch Willy Shoemaker's record of 485 winners in North America in one year's riding. But with Mesite as his agent, Hawley managed only three winners with 49 rides.

Big O Eases Burden

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Foul trouble isn't such a burden when the Big O is around to lighten the load.

With Lew Alcindor on the bench for much of the game because of foul trouble, Oscar Robinson, the Big O of the National Basketball Association, scored 35 points to lead Milwaukee Bucks to a 116-106 victory Thursday over New York Knicks.

OSCAR ROBERTSON

Alcindor also found time to score 24 points and the Bucks beat the Knicks for the first time in three meetings this season. Dave DeBusschere topped the Knicks with 22 points.

Los Angeles Lakers took Cleveland Cavaliers 110-115 and Baltimore Bullets downed Atlanta Hawks 110-102 in other NBA games.

Cleveland held a 43-42 lead with 5:22 left in the first half, but Los Angeles moved to a 13-point halftime lead and went on to send the Cavaliers to their seventh straight loss. Hapy Hairston scored 25 points and Jerry West 23 for Los Angeles. Bobby Smith led Cleveland with 23.

Baltimore overcame Atlanta by outgunning the Hawks 30-8 in the final quarter for the fifth straight loss. Earl Monroe paced Baltimore with 32 points, 10 in the big last quarter. Lou Hudson hit 36 for Atlanta.

Sports on All Fronts

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bobby Tolan, star centre fielder for Cincinnati Reds, tore the Achilles tendon in his right heel while playing basketball Wednesday and Reds' officials said he probably will not see any baseball action until about June 1. Tolan was to undergo surgery here.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Nick Skorich, named Thursday as coach of Cleveland Browns, said the three-year contract given him by owner Art Modell would be long enough to prove his ability. "I don't think we're too far from being champions," Skorich said. He replaces retired Blanton Collier and inherits a team that posted a 7-7 record in the National Football League last season.

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Press says the FBI has seized evidence indicating that three professional football players either were betting on games or were providing information to an interstate gambling ring that specializes in football betting pools. The FBI here said Thursday it had no comment on the report.

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Ken Fulton, a 27-year-old Canadian making his second try on the pro golf tour, set a record for the year-old Laguna Seca Golf Ranch Thursday with a five-under-par 66 to lead the first round of the $10,000 Salad Bowl Golf Classic. Fulton, of Montreal, attended PGA school to requalify after his player's card was picked up last year. His 32-34 gave him a two-stroke lead on the field and included six birdies

Series Going Under Lights

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time in history, a World Series game will be played at night—unless Chicago Cubs win the 1971 National League pennant.

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Thursday that the fourth game of the 1971 World Series would be played under the lights—in the park of the NL champions unless it's the Cubs' Wrigley Field, the only major league park without lights. In that event, the game scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 13, to be televised nationally by NBC, would be played in the afternoon.

Bengals' Brown Coach of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Brown the 62-year-old taskmaster who guided Cincinnati's three-year-old Bengals to a startling divisional conquest, was selected Thursday by The Associated Press as the National Football League's 1970 Coach of the Year.

Brown, who captured American Football League coaching honors in 1969, won the NFL award with a 2-to-1 margin over runner-up Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins in the balloting, which for the first time encompassed all of major league pro football

He received 39 of the 78 votes cast by a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters who covered the 26 NFL clubs. Shula, who directed the Dolphins to a playoff berth in their fifth season, picked up 19 votes. Dick Nolan of San Francisco 49ers finished third with nine.

Brown's Bengals beat out his former club, Cleveland Browns, for the American Football Conference's Central Division title by winning their last seven regular-season games.

The 1968 expansion club did it with Brown calling all the offensive plays from the sideline, as he has done throughout a pro coaching career that began 35 years ago in the old All-American Conference.

Shula, who played for Brown at Cleveland in the early 1950s and coached Baltimore to one NFL championship before moving to Miami last season, brought the 1966 expansion club up from a 3-10-1 finish in 1969 to a 10-4 mark.

Casper Playing Hot, Feeling Cold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billy Casper had a share of the lead, Arnold Palmer had a mental lapse and three players had yet to finish in the first round of the $110,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles open golf tournament.

Casper, battling a heavy cold and hand-numbing chill, fired a five-under-par 66 Thursday and tied a pair of 28-year-olds—Tom Shaw and Bob Smith—for top spot in the opening round of the first tournament on the 63-stop pro tour this year.

BILLY CASPER

The start of play was delayed for about 30 minutes to allow frozen greens to thaw and early darkness caught Bill Brask, Bobby Greenwood and Jack Montgomery still out on the Rancho Park Golf Club course.

They were scheduled to play their 18th hole before the start of the second round.

Palmer had a shot at it, until he took a three-over par seven, including a two-stroke penalty on the fifth hole, his 14th. He pulled his drive into the left rough near a tree with the ball resting against a beer can. Palmer moved the can and the ball moved slightly. He played the ball, hitting a three-iron into some trees and the ball richocheting back to the fairway.

He was on in three and down in five, then called the penalty on himself for playing the ball after it moved. He finished with a 71.

Bob Payne was one stroke off the lead at 67 with eight others at 68.

La Rush Reins Upset Win

TORONTO (CP) — Guy La Rush drove Keeter Bing off the pace at the head of the stretch in the fifth race at Greenwood Raceway Thursday night to post a $48.50 upset win over Himmy, driven by Ron Feagan.

Keeter Bing is a 6-year-old pacer owned by Bob Peters of Havelock, Ont. The gelding was sired by Johnny Bing, a nine-year-old stallion, also owned by Peters and driven by La Rush.

Johnny Bing was the odds-on favorite in the sixth but finished second behind Cabonga Bert, winner of 11 of 22 starts last year for owner-driver Cecil Pollard of Kincardine, Ont.

A pair of 4-year-olds teamed up to provide a $32.40 daily double, when Easy Living won the first and the second was captured by Andrew Pizale's Power Dares from St. Catharines.

Jim Holmes of Milton, Ont., directed his Bluejay to a half-length decision over even-money-choice Golden Scamp to set up a $31.95 quinella in the fourth race.

A crowd of 6,081 wagered $498,443.

Moira Secondary School basketball player Murray Dales keeps the ball away from his Prince Edward Collegiate check in a junior Bay of Quinte basketball contest Thursday night. Moira took a 58-39 decision to prevent a clean sweep by Picton, which captured the midget and senior contests.

Picton Impressive In Move to Top Spot

Picton seniors moved to the top of their division in the Bay of Quinte high school basketball league with an impressive 64-32 win over Moira last night. The Prince Edward midgets also moved into contention for the league lead, while Moira's juniors gave the Belleville school their lone win.

Barrett with 27 points and Quinn with 25 paced the Picton seniors to their third victory in four games and moved them two points ahead of Nicholson.

For the losers it was Jim Wiggins hitting for nine points and Dave Pulver following with an eight point effort.

Moira's juniors saved face for the host school by stopping Picton 58-39 after a close first half of play.

Ken Lapalm hooped 18 points for the winners with Bill Henry finding the mark for 13. Prince Edward was led by Dave Culmer, who scored 13 points.

In midget play Picton moved to within two points of the league leading BCI team by taking the 50-40 decision.

Barrett had 17 points and Tripp 15 in a winning effort. David Sullivan and Mike Maher scored 12 points apiece for Moira.

Kingston Increases Race Pace

KINGSTON (CP)—Harness racing here went major league Thursday with announcement that Frontenac Downs, a $400,000 project now under construction, has been guaranteed dates by the Ontario Racing Commission.

The new track, situated just north of here, has 48 racing dates for its extended meet. Construction of the half-mile track and a covered grandstand now will begin.

The treak is scheduled to open May 24 and, if it meets the deadline, will probably kill any chances of racing at the Kingston Memorial Centre track where the pacers and trotters have been in action for more than 50 years.

Ski Report

Freezing rain early in the week has left local ski conditions in less than top shape.

Batawa Ski Club will be open Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. - 4.30 p.m. with two tows operating. Conditions are poor.

Oak Hills Ski Club is also open Saturday and Sunday from 9.30 a.m.-4.30 p.m. with three tows in operation. The club reports fair skiing conditions.

Mo-Hawk Win Tonight Needed to Pass Hump

It has taken Belleville Mo-Hawks 24 games of their 40-game senior hockey schedule to get on an even footing.

But their 12-12 record is still good enough to keep the Mo-Hawks in fifth spot in the eight-team OHA Senior A standings, trailing fourth-place Kingston by only one point.

A win in tonight's 9 p.m. Memorial Arena game with third-place Barrie would not only put the local seniors over the .500 hump, but avenge the losses they suffered to the Flyers in their two previous meetings this season.

The Mo-Hawks blew leads in both games, the first a 7-4 home loss Nov. 1, and then a tough 4-3 overtime setback in a Friday the 13th Barrie game.

Going into tonight's game, the Mo-Hawks have three straight wins under their suspenders, two against Kingston and one over Owen Sound.

And it is precisely these so-called "weaker" clubs that the Mo-Hawks must beat for the remainder of the schedule.

"Of our last 16 games, 13 are against the bottom five clubs in the league," observed Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones. "Some people didn't realize it, but our first part of the schedule was pretty tough this year. We played most of our games with Galt and Orillia before Christmas."

Saturday night, the Mo-Hawks travel to Owen Sound and are idle until a two game road trip to Galt and Oakville next weekend.

Next scheduled home action after tonight's Barrie game is a Tuesday, Jan. 19 game with Kingston.

Pennington Joins Pack

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP)—Brent Sonny Pennington goalie with Woodstock As for four years, now is the property of Orillia Terriers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

He was released from Woodstock about three weeks before Christmas. Prior to the start of the season in Woodstock this year he reached an agreement with the club that if they were not in contention by Christmas he would become a free agent.

Woodstock is in the series happens."

Hornets Make Nest

GALT (CP) — Two Galt Hornets are at the top of the Ontario Hockey Association scoring race and another leads the goaltenders.

Bruce Reier heads the list: two points in front of a second-place tie between his teammate Vance Millar and Chuck Kelly of Oakville Oaks.

Reier has the most goals—26—closely followed by Orillia Terriers' Grant Moore with 25. Moore is seventh in scoring.

Kelly has 33 assists, most in the league. Barrie Flyers' Mike Dubeau, in eighth place, and Galt's Ron Hergott, in a tie for fourth, each have 31 assists.

Galt's Boat Hurley has a 2.17 average in goal, well ahead of Orillia's Gerry McNamara at 3.08. Belleville's Steve Rexe is next at 3.41.

Owen Sound Crescents' defenceman Gord Gallagher is the penalty leader with 109 minutes.

The leaders: G, Galt; Oak, Oakville; B, Barrie; Ori, Orillia.

Heath Arrives In Pakistan

RAWALPINDI (CP-AP) — While Pakistan's military government braced against the threat of more anti-British demonstrations, Prime Minister Heath arrived today to discuss arms sales to South Africa and other subjects with Pakistani officials before next week's Commonwealth conference in Singapore.

As Heath arrived for a two-day visit, Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau was to leave Rawalpindi for Karachi and a departure Saturday for India. He and Heath were not scheduled to meet here.

Jury Says Towel Not Factor

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Thursday a towel left in the abdomen of a man after surgery did not contribute to his death eight days later.

Wilfred English, 68, of Fort Erie, Ont., died Nov. 22 following an operation for a rupture of an aortic aneurysm—a ballooning of the main artery to the heart.

The ruling, which followed 2½ days of investigation, agreed with the coroner and medical evidence that Mr. English died of acute kidney failure brought on by shock.

The jury listed contributory causes of death as rupture of the aneurysm, blood clots in the aorta and arteries leading to the legs, plugs of fatty material found in the kidneys, fluid in both lungs, an enlarged heart and dead tissue in the kidneys, liver, spleen and intestine.

Coroner Dr. K. R. Baxter, in instructing the jury, said he hoped the "misadventure" would not damage the career of Dr. David Sokol, the surgeon who performed the operation.

"His experience is tremendous, his ability unquestionable and his dedication to his patient commendable," Dr. Baxter said.

The jury recommended that hospitals replace the 18-by-30 inch towels with white sponges carrying markers which would show up on x-rays.

It also recommended that hospitals become more strict in counting instruments used in surgery and that procedures for transporting a corpse to the coroner's office be reviewed.

This recommendation was a result of confusion at the inquest over the exact location of the towel in the body.

Evidence showed that at one point during the move the body was held in an erect position. Jury foreman Donald F. Fawcett said the jury felt holding the body vertically might have shifted the position of the towel.

Dr. Baxter denied this suggestion but told the jury: "I see your point. . . . Let's hope the occasion never arises again."

In his summation to the jury, Dr. Baxter criticized the hospital for failing to implement a 1963 recommendation by a coroner's jury that all instruments and material used in surgery be accounted for when surgery is completed.

Since then, he said, all Toronto hospitals have started to count instruments, needles and sponges used in operations.

But "what happened to the word material?"

"It was either forgotten or ignored.

"It has become obvious that these green towels must henceforth be counted," Dr. Baxter said.

In a telephone interview Mrs. English who was not present at the conclusion of the inquest, declined comment.

Hairy Convict Kept in Solitary For Ten Months

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bearded, long-haired convict says he has been kept in solitary confinement for 10 months because he won't shave or have his hair cut. He insists God gives him the right to stay shaggy.

"I have no reason for refusing to shave," said Steven Robert Winsby. "All I can say is it is God's will that I don't. A man has a reason for shaving. A man doesn't have to have a reason for not shaving."

Winsby, 28, spoke Wednesday in U.S. district court, where his lawyer has filed a petition for his release from solitary confinement at the federal prison at nearby Terminal Island. Prison officials refused to comment on the case.

Winsby, serving a three-year sentence for transporting marijuana without a federal tax stamp, entered the prison 14 months ago. He said he was put in solitary confinement after refusing a prison official's order to shave and have his hair cut.

Last July, he said, about 10 prison guards held him down and used clippers and an electric razor to remove his hair and beard, and "it was like being sheared like a sheep."

He said renewed solitary confinement followed when he still refused to cut his hair or shave.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Ulcer Sufferer Describes Pains

Case History: Doctor: How long have you been bothered with indigestion?

Patient: I remember that it began about four years ago, at the time I was preparing for my final exams. I was afraid I wouldn't pass and get my degree.

My stomach was tense and bunched up and painful. I used to take milk and crackers so I could sleep. The pain used to wake me up around three o'clock.

It was better for awhile after I graduated. But I've been under much pressure in my job as a supervisor in our office, and the pain has come back. I haven't been to a doctor because taking milk and antacid tablets has kept me fairly comfortable until lately. Now the pain comes and goes every day.

Doctor: What do you mean by "comes and goes"?

Patient: I've discovered that I feel all right until mid-morning. Then the pain comes on. I've learned to take some milk, and the pain goes away. I eat lunch and feel comfortable. But in mid-afternoon and late at night — and sometimes early in the morning while I've been sleeping — the pain keeps coming back.

Even milk and crackers don't seem to help as much as they used to. That's why I am here. I figure it's about time to learn what it's all about. Can it be my gall bladder?

Doctor: It might be gall bladder trouble or due to hiatal hernia, or to a chronic pancreatitis. But if you asked any doctor to make an educated guess, after hearing your story, he'd want to make sure that you haven't got a duodenal ulcer. The history of pain relieved by food always makes us suspicious.

Resume: X-rays confirmed the preliminary diagnosis. The patient had changes indicating ulcer of the duodenum (first part of the intestine as it leaves the stomach). There was no evidence of gallstones or of hiatal hernia.

He was put on milk and cream every few hours as a basic diet for a week, and advised to take frequent feeding of bland foods thereafter — rather than three meals a day.

He quit his two-packs-a-day smoking habit, cut down his coffee from seven or eight cups a day to one in the morning. Tranquilizers helped.

But what seemed most important was change of job — which he later admitted he hated. Within three months, his pains disappeared, and X-rays showed definite healing of the ulcer.

Comment: Many people self-treat themselves, completely unaware that the underlying cause may be ulcer. Early investigation might save them unnecessary suffering and prevent serious complications.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: No matter how my age increases, I still feel younger. I'm 65 and still do not feel old. When I was 21, I felt like a boy of 14. On reaching 40, I felt like a youth of 21. I've never had a serious illness. What is the mystery of this dilemma? I'm fearful of living to the age of 100. Am I being silly? — Mr. K.

Comment: Silly is the word for it. Why worry about reaching 100 when it's likely that you'll be feeling like a "young 50"?

Railway Peace Depends On Shopcraft Workers

OTTAWA (CP) — Chances for an early railway labor peace are poised to rise or fall on a decision by 22,000 shopcraft workers on whether to accept a settlement negotiated in December by their union leaders.

Voting by the shopcraft employees—machinists, electricians, repairmen and others—ends Jan. 15. Before them is an offer of a 15-per-cent wage increase in a two-year contract.

Should they accept the railways, and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, will be in a strong position in bargaining with another 80,000 non-operating and running-trades employees. The possibility is looming however, that they may not.

For one thing, there has been a break in the unity of the seven unions that make up the shopcrafts group.

The leadership of the International Association of Machinists, which has 4,700 members among the shopcraft workers, has recommended that the package be rejected. "It's just not adequate," says Mike Rygus, Canadian leader of the IAM.

Shopcraft workers are also being urged by members of the other railway unions to reject the offer from the railways.

The pressure was apparent Monday when some 400 representatives of all union locals in the four western provinces met in Edmonton and pledged not to be bound by the tantative shopcraft agreement. IAM officials were among those agreeing to encourage the shopcrafts to defeat ratification.

Only two weeks ago, the now-contested offer was being seen as a coup for Mr. Mackasey.

No one had given the labor minister much of a chance of repeating his 1968 miracle of winning a mediated contract settlement before expiry Dec. 31 of the old contract.

Yet, after less than a month of negotiations, his mediators produced an agreement between the railways and the smaller of the employee groups. If accepted by the membership it would almost certainly have to serve as a model for the rest of the industry.

Real Estate Business Crowded

TORONTO (CP) — The real estate business is becoming overcrowded with unqualified salesmen, the new president of the Toronto Real Estate Board said Thursday.

"We have a multitude of part-timers, the coffee clatch, the cocktail set, the semi-retired and the in-and-outers all knocking off the odd deal to take a commission or part of one out of your or my pockets," Joseph P. Abela told the board's annual meeting.

Mr. Abela added: "Something is surely wrong in an industry where the average age of its participants is approaching 50, to which few young people with university education are attracted, and where seven salesmen leave for every 10 that come into the business."

He said real estate leaders are aware of the problems and are trying to cope with them.

The Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards, for instance, is urging that the present 25 hours of pre-licensing lectures be increased to 90 hours, Mr. Abela said.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Soft Touches Need Help

Going over our charge-account bills the other night, with tears streaming down my cheeks, I wondered why nobody has ever started up a School for Soft Touches.

All over the country, salesmen are being taught how to break down the resistance of customers — but who has ever offered to help the customer resist? Especially people like me, who are always buying things they really don't want.

Take ties. I will go into a shop all determined to buy a snappy little number for $4. Ten minutes later I walk out with three $10 creations in my shell-shocked hand. Furthermore, I don't even like the darned ties — I was just bullied into it.

"Let me see a $4 tie," I ask the clerk casually. He stares at me with deep contempt. "Really?" he drawls, a world of derision in his tone. "A $4 tie?" Right off the bat he makes me feel like a refugee from Tobacco Road. You would think his own cravats are made of spun gold.

He takes out a box and flings a few meretricious pieces of cloth my way, with a perceptible sneer on his patrician lips. "Here are some things we've had lying around," he yawns, with the clear implication that nobody but a burlesque comedian would dream of wearing them.

I feel my Dun and Bradstreet rating rapidly zooming down to Z-Z-Z in his fishy eye, and a few minutes later I am walking out catatonically, clutching a raft of expensive merchandise I had no intention of buying.

We Soft Touchers are also suckers for gadgeteers, like pitches on sidewalk corners, selling thingamajigs to help your carburetor consume less gas. Rationally, I know that these items do nothing but dissolve your engine into fragments, but every time I hear that seductive spiel I go soft all over and begin to whimper yearningly.

My utility closet at home is loaded to the gunwales with six-way can openers that can't open a paper bag, windproof cigarette lighters that are actually afraid of fire, reversible raincoats that peel right down the back the minute you apply a drop of water to them, and even a contraption for keeping tennis rackets pressed that got so warped we are thinking of using it for an ornamental umbrella holder.

All this is stuff I have bought just because salesmen expected me to, and that isn't mentioning sundry items of wearing apparel that I am trying to unload on the New Orleans Mardi Gras. Like the two-tone plaid sport jacket I bought last spring — the one that makes me look like an orangutan in moulting season. I paid $85 for that job, and my youngest daughter gets hysterical with fear every time I shake the moths out of it. But it was reduced from $125, and who can resist a saving like that?

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 9

Your birthday today: A series of challenges and opportunities for mental stimulation is balanced by intermittent flashes of rising intuitive powers which help guide you. Material gain is not so important this coming year, but it does involve both work and concern. Emotional expression comes more fluently, and you are more willing to share experience. Today's natives are enterprising, self-reliant, and frequently prefer to live hazardously.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Schedules go to pieces; prepare for unexpected delays. Unfavorable comment is likely to be disproved very shortly, so carry on. Squabbles can drift into serious quarrels.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): A dramatic response, satisfying at the moment, is not the best answer to a story you hear. Wait for the rest. See that you get normal exercise.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Everybody has his own partisan ideas today. Friends differ among themselves; get out of the middle quickly. A break for meditation is your first priority.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Business deals become complicated; don't rush in without complete understanding. Relatives force issues in the family — keep your share of the discussion simple.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Everybody has some scheme brewing; avoid taking sides in the bickering. You see much that isn't correct, but beyond your reach to do anything about.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Doing things just to be active isn't quite the answer; call in skilled help, if needed. Changes are inevitable, abrupt; adjustment is up to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Complaint is common today; try to minimize it in yourself and others. Tact is not enough; stand on principle. Take on attitudes and dress according to prevailing conditions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Get out of the situation for a visit elsewhere. Friends are up to mischief in which you don't fit. Remember what you heard in recent days; see the discrepancies.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): All sorts of secrets pop out now. People are so full of their stories they have to talk, some not realizing what they're saying is not generally known.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Open your home to visitors, old friends. Bring home books and other sources of mental stimulus, news of the larger world. The evening is for fun and conversation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Make the rounds, check your favorite local speculations. You may revive some pleasant ancient customs. Younger people provide stimulation, distraction.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Get an early start, as there are many new things to consider. Your home should be open only to those you know very well today and tomorrow.

Dunlop Trying To Cut Wages

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of Dunlop Canada Ltd. and the United Rubber Workers met Thursday to discuss a company proposal to cut wages at its plant in Whitby, Ont., by 10 per cent.

Published reports quoted unidentified sources as saying the company had threatened to close down the Whitby operation unless the union accepts the pay cut for about 500 production workers.

Neither the company nor the union would comment on this report. The company earlier this year shut down its Toronto plant, putting 597 employees out of work.

Wells Decision Not to Seek PC Leadership Surprises Many

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario needs a new sense of direction and a greater use of human potential to "achieve bold new goals," Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said Thursday as he became the fifth announced candidate to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts.

Mr. Welch, a 42-year-old lawyer from St. Catharines, who has represented Lincoln riding since 1963, made his announcement at Niagara-on-the-Lake and later in Toronto.

He thus joined the other declared candidates: Education Minister William Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Bert Lawrence, financial and commercial affairs minister, and Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs.

A surprise to many observers was the announcement by Health Minister Thomas Wells, 40, that he will not be a candidate for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership, to be decided at a convention here Feb. 10-12.

Mr. Wells said he will support and work for Allan Lawrence, becoming the first cabinet minister to openly declare such support.

"Through a friendship spanning 20 years, Al Lawrence and I have shared an activist political philosophy and I have gained a great respect for him as a person and as a politician and I firmly believe he will be a great premier of this province," said Mr. Wells.

However, a total of 13 MPPs have said they will support Mr. Davis. His cabinet supporters include Agriculture Minister Charles MacNaughton, Highways Minister George Gomme, Labor Minister Dalton Bales and Revenue Minister John White.

One undeclared candidate who would be considered a serious contender is Energy Minister George Kerr.

Other possible contenders are Correctional Services Minister Allan Grossman, Leo Bernier, member for Kenora, Leonard Reilly, member for Toronto Eglinton and Arthur Maloney, a Toronto lawyer and former member of Parliament for Toronto Parkdale.

Mr. Welch has the support of Attorney-General Arthur Wishart and Ellis Morningstar, the member for Welland and Bob Johnston, St. Catharines.

Bert Lawrence is supported by Fernand Guindon, minister without portfolio and Albert Belanger, member for Prescott and Russell. Mr. McKeough has the support of Bill Newman, member for Ontario South.

Mr. Welch took an unusual position in refusing to make any statements about what policies he would pursue as leader or what his position is on various issues.

"The delegates should make their decision on knowing something about the candidate and his party philosophy," said Mr. Welch.

"Ours is a parliamentary system and all issues that come before the government are discussed by the cabinet and caucus. If you get a candidate for this office (the leadership) who has all sorts of specific proposals you are beginning to break cabinet solidarity."

The time had come in Ontario "to ensure that what we have created will meet the aspirations of a new kind of society. The quality of life we must be concerned with cannot be measured by the old standards."

At Ottawa Thursday Conservative backbencher R. T. Potter challenged candidates to speak out on revamping the legislature's committee system.

The Belleville doctor was ousted as chairman of the health committee after he brought in a report that called on the government to include drugs and dental care in medical care and nursing homes in hospital insurance.

He has been touring the province and at news conferences reiterating that delegates to the leadership convention not commit their support until firm stands have been taken on major issues.

He said that to date no candidates have made their stands clear on major matters such as health, education, housing and the process of government.

Commuter Strips Urged

CPR Is Asked to Treat Havelock Train Like Montreal Runs

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Pacific Railway was accused Thursday of discriminating against Toronto in favor of Montreal

Lawyer David Duncan, counsel for the government of Ontario, said CP Rail should offer commuter discounts for strips of tickets on its Toronto-Havelock run, like those offered on trains into Montreal.

CP Rail is seeking permission to discontinue the 100-mile run from Toronto to Havelock, 23 miles east of Peterborough, because it is losing money.

Mr. Duncan told a Canadian transport commission hearing into the issue he would present his main arguments against the discontinuance today.

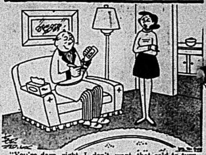
John Kelsall, director of cost analysis for CP Rail, said there is no use reducing the revenue just to encourage people to use a service that is already near capacity and still loses money.

Total loss on the line during 1969, railway spokesmen said, was almost $258,000.

On the basis of cost-per-mile figures suplied by the railroad, commuter lawyer John Medcof calculated the break-even point on tickets as a point between Dagmar and Myrtle—33 and 37 miles west of Toronto. Fares are $1.70 and $1.90, respectively.

Most tickets sold on the inbound run are to Toronto and any purchased east of Myrtle pay their way, Mr. Medcof concluded. Every ticket from Dagmar or a point closer to Toronto, loses the railway money.

The railway says most of the tickets purchased are short-run tickets such as the 65-cent fare from suburban Agincourt.



"You're darn right I don't want that cold to turn into something serious — I'm particularly worried about cirrhosis of the liver or delirium tremens."

Days Longer But Sun Rises No Earlier

OTTAWA (CP) — Have you noticed that while it stays lighter later in the afternoon these days the sun seems to be rising no earlier in the morning?

It's not your imagination. Not only are the days geting longer but, for a while, more extra minutes of daylight are occurring in the afternoon than in the morning.

For example, from Jan. 1 until Jan. 8 the sun rose at the same time each day—7:43 a.m. here—but it set a minute later each day.

This is an annual occurrence which involves a variation of slightly more than 30 minutes over a year between the clock and Sun time.

Two main factors cause it. One is that the eliptical, rather than circular, orbit of the earth round the sun causes a variation in the relative speed of the two bodies.

At the same time, the sun as seen from a given point on the equator varies in position, changing between points north and south of the equator.

The net effect of these factors throws the clock time and sun time out of whack. To correct the clocks so that over a year they conform to the sun, scientists have worked out the equation of time.

Through the equation, the difference between clock and sun time can be calculated. It is the basis of the sunrise and sunset tables found in almanacs.

The equation enables clocks to be geared so that while running at uniform rates they will compensate for the differences with sun time.

At the points of greatest variation, clock time in February is 14.3 minutes behind sun time, and in November is 16.4 minutes ahead of sun time.

People from time to time become aware of the clock and sun time differences. So the time men at the National Research Council, which now is responsible for Dominion observatories and the "official" time, have worked out diagrams to help scientists answer questions.

"You will soon see a distinct difference in the sunrise time," said Dr. Peter Millman who heads NRC's upper atmosphere research.

Fish Contaminated

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal fisheries department has confiscated 17 tons of dogfish scheduled for export to West Germany, saying the fish contained dangerous levels of mercury.

The dogfish, part of a catch belonging to Seafresh Brand Oysters Ltd., a newly-formed, B.C. company pioneering the export and sale of what has been traditionally regarded as a nuisance fish, was seized Tuesday.

W. R. Hourston, regional director for the department, said Thursday the cargo was found to contain .7 part per million of mercury, well above the Canadian safety standerd of 0.5.

Buyer Resistance Creates Housing Surplus

OTTAWA (CP) — Buyer resistance and the general economic slowdown of the past few months has resulted in a higher inventory of newly-completed unoccupied houses and apartments in Canada.

But officials of Central Morgage and Housing Corp. say that while the federal housing agency is watching this trend, it does not find the figures disturbing—yet.

CMHC reported earlier this week that at the end of November there were 6,807 newly-completed but unoccupied single, semi-detached and duplex houses in Canada's metropolitan and major urban areas. This was up 41.3 per cent from a year earlier, and compares with figures of roughly 3,600 to 4,200 over the past several years.

The number of new but unoccupied row, apartment and other dwelling units was 10,833 at the end of November this year, down from 13,201 at the end of November last year. And while this is comparable to figures for the previous year, it is up substantially from the middle and late 1960s.

Some potential house buyers are resisting high prices, and a survey last August showed a substantial portion of the new but unoccupied housing stock then was in the high price range.

The general economic slowdown brought on last year by the government's fight against inflation resulted in proportionately fewer buyers in the market for either new or old houses. Real estate dealers in Toronto, for instance, reported 17 to 18 per cent fewer sales of existing houses in that market.

CMHC officials said the buildup of the new house stock has had some sobering effect on their building plans. It is the first time in many years that the statistics have indicated builders have been caught with new houses not immediately saleable.

Soviet Union Cancels Academic Exchange At U. of T. Because Defector on Campus

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the University of Toronto said Thursday the Soviet Union has cancelled an academic exchange program with the university because of the presence of a Soviet defector on the university campus.

The spokesman said three Russians studying at the University of Toronto as part of the exchange program have been ordered back to the Soviet Union.

The dispute, he said, centres on Dr. Boris Dotsenko, a nuclear physicist granted political asylum in Canada more than three years ago and now a landed immigrant studying at the University of Toronto on a research grant.

The spokesman said Evgeny Bobrov, counsellor for science and technology at the Soviet embassy in Ottawa, phoned president Dr. Claude Bissell of the University of Toronto last Nov. 25.

He said Mr. Bobrov warned the exchange program would be cancelled if Dr. Dotsenko was allowed to continue to study on the campus. Dr. Bissell said Dr. Dotsenko was not on the university's faculty and the school had no right to prevent his studying.

The spokesman said word was received Wednesday that the Soviet Union regarded Dr. Bissell's answer as unsatisfactory and was cancelling the exchange program.

The exchange program began in 1963. Thirty-five students from each of the two countries have taken part since then.

Dr. Dotsenko, who came to Canada as an exchange scientist at the University of Alberta, wrote an open letter to the Soviet Union last August. In it, he charged Russian secret police had ordered him to penetrate this country's scientific community.

Prof. Gordon Skilling, head of the exchange program, said the venture had been useful to both sides but "we wouldn't be willing to make concessions on certain other matters just to keep it going."

In Ottawa, a spokesman for External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Soviet Ambassador Boris Miroshnichenko was told by Canadian authorities Thursday of the government's concern over the exchange cancellation.

A. E. Ritchie, under-secretary of state for external affairs, invited the ambassador to an interview to express regret and concern "about the possible implications for other exchanges," the spokesman said.

The ambassador "had no information about the implications for the three students and one staff member of the University of Toronto now in the Soviet Union."

The exchange program is a private arrangement between the university and Soviet authorities.

The government is also concerned about the effect of the issue on Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin's visit to the Soviet Union late this month to sign an industrial exchange program.

Prime Minister Trudeau is scheduled to visit the Soviet Union in May.

U.S. Court Orders Complete Ban on DDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals has ordered the federal government to seek a complete ban on the pesticide DDT. The court also ruled the government had to hold public hearings before making administrative decisions involving pesticide use.

Deciding whether DDT's benefits outweigh its dangers as a poison may be a "delicate question," the court said Thursday, but it must be explored "in the full light of public hearings and not resolved behind the closed doors of the (agriculture) secretary."

The majority judges said that "we stand on the threshold of a new era" in relations between administrative agencies and the courts—an era in which the courts must call the government agencies to account for their actions.

The court directed the government to spell out standards for using its discretion to suspend pesticide sales while cancellation actions are under way.

During the last three years the agriculture department issued cancellation notices on registrations of DDT for a wide variety of uses—on shade trees, tobacco, some 20 vegetable crops, around the home and in bodies of water.

But pesticide manufacturers could delay cancellation for months or years by appealing, while their products continue to be sold.

DDT would be forced off the market immediately by suspending the registrations while the lengthy cancellation process is held.

The suit was filed here by citizens groups after the agriculture department placed under study a request to begin cancellation procedures for all uses of DDT and did not respond to a petition to suspend DDT sales.

How It Was Done

'Pen' Hostages Punch Way Free

Two Kingston Convicts Seized

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A bid by two convicts for political asylum in a foreign country ended Friday with a punch in the stomach by one of the three Kingston penitentiary officials they had held hostage for 24

The break in the tedious drama came when two of the three hostages were untied so they could go to the washroom while only one of the two prisoners was guarding them.

They had been tied to chairs for most of the time they spent in an office above the federal prison's carpentry shop after being abducted by the prisoners —a convicted murderer and a rapist—Thursday afternoon.

Cass Turner, 53, a senior correction officer, seized his opportunity and punched convict Anthony Jack, 31, of Kenora, Ont., in the stomach.

"He seemed momentarily stunned and I knew this was the chance we had been waiting for," said Allen Marsden, 48, a cabinet-making instructor. "I charged him, hitting him below the hips with my arms and shoulders."

The impact carried both Jack and Mr. Turner over a chair and they fell partially down a stairway leading down to the main carpentry shop where the ordeal started when the prison officials were abducted at knifepoint.

Mr. Marsden said that he and Lloyd Bramley, 52, the third hostage and another cabinetry instructor rushed down the stairway and pinned Jack to the floor.

During the fight, in which two windows were broken, a telephone ripped from the wall and food scattered over the office, Mr. Bramley suffered a small

Chartrand Jailed for Year For New Outburst in Court

MONTREAL (CP) — Labor leader Michel Chartrand was sentenced to one year in jail for contempt of court Friday after an emotional outburst directed at Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet.

Chartrand had prepared a petition seeking trial in Court of Queen's Bench apart from four other well-known Quebecers on charges of seditious conspiracy and membership in the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec. All five are scheduled to appear in court Feb. 1.

Instead of presenting the petition Friday, the 55-year old president of the Montreal central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions made a motion for Mr. Justice Ouimet to disqualify himself on the grounds of prejudice.

"I know you are prejudiced, partial and fanatical," Chartrand shouted while pointing an accusing finger at the bench.

He said the justice has expressed opinions about persons detained under the Public Order Act and added:

"Morally, I would feel wronged to have to be tried before a judge who is prejudiced and partial.

"Everyone knows your opinions. You're smaller than I thought."

Mr. Justice Ouimet rejected the motion to disqualify himself and then handed down the one-year sentence for contempt.

"It's easy to hand out sentences for contempt of court when it's done from behind a row of policemen," Chartrand replied.

When policemen took his arms to lead him from the prisoner's dock, Chartrand made a brief attempt to shake them off.

"See," he shouted, "it's the police who run things."

He continued shouting as police led him from the courtroom, calling the judge a "vile, lousy person" and a "rotten mercenary."

He delivered a similar tirade Thursday when his Feb. 1 trial date was set.

Facing trial with him on similar charges are lawyer Robert Lemieux, writer Pierre Vallieres, teacher Charles Gagnon and Jacques Larue-Langlois, a former CBC radio producer.

Jordan Strife Flares

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas reported new fighting with the Jordanian army today and put their militia in Amman on a standby alert.

A communique issued in Beirut by the Al Fatah guerrilla organization said King Hussein's artillery and tanks had resumed the shelling of guerrilla positions around the towns of Salt and Jerash.

Guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat appealed to Arab leaders to put an end to what he called a "hideous crime" by Jordanian authorities.

The Jordanian government denied in a statement that violence had erupted south of Jerash, but accused the guerrillas of blowing up a viaduct near Salt at midnight Friday night. Salt is 12 miles east of Amman. Jerash is 25 miles north of the capital.

Guerrilla sources, however, said that King Hussein's troops expanded the area of their operations today by bringing up tanks and artillery to blast guerrilla hilltop strongholds along a 10-mile front between Jerash and the town of Ajloun, to the northwest.

The Egyptian government said the new offensive against guerrilla strongholds was "unprovoked and unjustified."

Liner Burns

All 635 Saved In Caribbean

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Hundreds of passengers and crew members who escaped in lifeboats from the grounded French cruise ship Antilles were brought here today by the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2.

The Antilles went aground Friday night on an uncharted submerged reef about half a mile off tiny Mustique Island in the Caribbean and burst into flames. The fire continued to burn early today.

The cruise ship's passengers and crew used lifeboats and other small craft to reach Mustique, where 501 survivors were picked up by the Queen Elizabeth, called to help the stricken vessel. All aboard the Antilles were believed safe.

Another 85 passengers were brought aboard a French vessel and 49 remained on Mustique, the U.S. Coast Guard reported.

"The latest unconfirmed report is that there were 635 people on board the Antilles," said a coast guard spokesman in Miami.

"If this is true, we've rescued all of them. It won't be confirmed until we receive the passenger list."

In Paris, the French Line, which operates the Antilles, said a fuel tank burst when the Antilles struck the reef, spilling oil into the boiler room.

The company said the crew at one time seemed to have brought the fire under control but soon it broke out again in such intensity that it was impossible to extinguish.

Raymond Kerverdo, 47, the captain of the Antilles, members of his staff and fire-fighting crew members were the last to leave the ship, a spokesman said. They were taken aboard the banana boat Point Allegre of the French Line.

The line said there were 350 passengers, including 117 persons who had boarded at San Juan, Puerto Rico, 57 from French islands in the Caribbean, 102 from Venezuela, 11 from Curacao, and four Frenchmen from the mainland of France.

The company said the liner was valued at about $14.4 million, and it considered the ship a "total loss."

Synopsis: A milder flow of air from the south is now developing over the Great Lakes. This flow is producing snowflurry activity on the north shores of most of the lakes. A low pressure system now in the Dakotas will move east today. More snow can be expected on Sunday of a more general nature as this disturbance passes east. As the southerly winds continue today, Sunday temperatures will slowly rise to the 20s today. The outlook indicates a return to below normal temperatures again by the beginning of the week.

Uruguay Will Not Negotiate

MONTEVIDEO (AP) — The Uruguayan government says it will not negotiate with the terrorists who abducted British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson by intercepting his limousine and clubbing his guards to the ground.

The foreign ministry said in a statement, however, that "we will spare no effort to protect his life and obtain his immediate liberation." There has been no word from the kidnappers.

The government has refused to deal with guerrillas responsible for six previous political kidnapings, but Jackson ranks higher than the previous victims.

The 55-year-old British ambassador was abducted Friday as he was being driven to the embassy. The operation was carried out un professional style and with split-second timing by about 10 Tupamaro guerrillas.

Firms in Arrears of Loan Interest

Manitoba Takes Over Forestry Complex

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's NDP government, claiming the four companies involved are in default of a financing arrangement of which it has long been critical, went to the courts Friday to take control of an integrated forestry operation at The Pas.

Premier Ed Schreyer told a news conference his government contends the foreign-backed firms, through arrears in interest and other aspects of performance, have not lived up to their contract with a former Conservative administration which gave them more than $90 million in provincial loans to build the logging-pulp-paper complex.

The government obtained court orders putting the companies under a receiver and freezing their bank accounts, sent representatives to the northwest Manitoba centre to take physical charge, and appointed a Vancouver engineering firm to get the plants completed and into production.

To a question about nationalization at the news conference, Premier Schreyer said that was not the intent of the government's move.

The plants would be operated in receivership but no long-term decision had been made.

There was no immediate indication what counter-action the four firms might take. A public relations representative of Churchill Forest Industries said no statement would be made until the situation had been studied.

CFI, in charge of logging operations and building a kraft pulp mill, was allotted the largest loan at $40.7 million dollars.

The other companies are MP Industrial Mills, building a kraft paper mill, $32 million; River Sawmills, building a lumber mill and a smaller sawmill, $9.6 million; and James Bertram and Sons Canada Ltd., building a pulp and paper mill machinery plant, $9.8 million.

Mr. Schreyer said virtually all of the loans already have been advanced, and "as premier I could not in good faith have agreed to advancing any more and extending the risk position that the province is in."

Liberal leader I. H. Asper, a lawyer and tax expert, declined immediate comment. Conservative leader Walter Weir, who steps down next month when a party convention elects a successor was out of the province.

The initial agreement with the groups headed by FCI, owned by Swiss-based Monoca Ag, was made by Duff Roblin's Conservative government in 1966.

NDP criticism mounted as the new administration began delving into the contracts after dethroning Mr. Weir's Conservatives in the 1969 general election.

At last summer's legislative session Premier Schreyer called them it "not a good deal for the people of Manitoba" in that the companies got 86 per cent of capital costs through public financing along with control of 40,000 square miles of northern Manitoba woodlands.

Reports that the companies were facing heavy court liens for unpaid bills continued to grow in recent weeks, but as late as his regular Friday-morning news conference the premier shrugged off questions whether anything was afoot.

The announcement came at a news conference called hurriedly to coincide with suppertime television.

"We contend that the companies now appear to be in default in a number of respects, including specifically that of being in arrears in interest payments on their loans," the premier said.

He later quoted the arrears at about $1.5-million.

cut over his mouth but the other hostages were uninjured.

By this time, 25 guards who had surrounded the carpentry shop rushed in and overpowered the second convict, Ronald Gerald Turner, 17, of Windsor, Ont., who was downstairs talking to other convicts sent by prison officials to try to negotiate the hostages' release. Five knives made in the carpentry shop were recovered.

The dramatic end followed a three-pronged demand from the convicts that included political asylum in any country that would accept them in exchange for the hostages' freedom.

Warden Arthur Jarvis, who ordered the convicts removed to punishment cells, said the demands were not considered because they simply could not be met.

Their second demand sought release of two prisoners from solitary confinement. Mr. Jarvis did not release their names.

The third request asked that a mediator from the country offering them asylum be brought to the penitentiary to arrange their release.

Mr. Jarvis said he felt that the demands had been hurriedly put together and the convicts had no idea what they wanted when they pounced on the unarmed prison officials as they were leaving the carpentry shop Thursday.

The warden said that although the recent James Cross-Pierre Laporte kidnappings by Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists were not referred to by the convicts he believed they influenced their demands.

At one point, he said, they mentioned a meeting with the Cuban ambassador.

Cuban officials said the convicts would "definitely not" be granted asylum in Cuba if a deal between the Canadian government and the prisoners was made for the hostages' release.

Mr. Jarvis said that three other convicts who were friends of Jack and Turner were allowed into the carpentry shop "to try to talk some sense into them."

This drew the prisoner Turner away from Jack, and allowed Mr. Turner, the prison official, to land his punch to the stomach.

The men gained their freedom minutes after Mildred Redmond, an Indian social worker from Toronto the convicts had requested to see, arrived on the scene.

Mrs. Redmond, a mother of three teen-aged children who helps Indians involved in court proceedings, had left Toronto earlier in the day by car.

During the ordeal, the prisoners played cards with their captives and ate regular meals. Prison activities came to a standstill and other convicts were fed in small eating shifts and remained in their cells as a precaution against possible outbreaks.

Mr. Bramley said they were taken captive when the teen-aged Turner came up behind him and held a knife at his throat. Mr. Marsden was ordered to phone the warden's office and "get the gang out of the shop." The other prisoners were taken to their cells.

Mr. Turner then entered the shop and was jumped by Jack who hid behind a door.

Mr. Turner said that only once did he feel the prison officials were in peril. That was early Friday morning then they were told "that if Warden Jarvis won't do what we want, then we'll have to do it our own way."

The Trent - - An Old Reliable Power Source

Controlling the flow of hydro-electric power to the Quinte region is the job of operators at a transformer house on the Trent River. Ontario Hydro employees check with James Belford of Trenton (left) and other operators at the Glen Miller centre before beginning to work on power lines in the area. The importance of the transformer operations centre has increased in importance while the role of Trent generating stations has been overshadowed by the significance of larger power plants in the province. The transformer building (right) is located behind the old Sidney Generating Station at No. 1 Dam just north of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

Trent's Hydro Power Small But Significant

Most residents of the Quinte area are aware of the fact that Trent River has a long history of supplying hydro-electric power.

For nearly 60 years, generating stations along the waterway have been part of Sir Adam Beck's dream of harnessing the province's rivers to turn the wheels of industry.

There are 10 generating stations on the Trent — five at Campbellford, two at Peterborough and three on the Lower Trent above Trenton.

Built in 1911, those on the Lower Trent until 1957 employed 12 men. Now, two attendants operate all three stations — thanks to an Ontario Hydro automation program.

The attendants make routine checks daily but when there are problems at any of the generations — whether it be hot bearings or low oil — alarm bells in their homes give the warning that sends them out to service the power plants.

Trent generating stations have declined in relative importance over the years as massive power installations have been built along the St. Lawrence and in the far north.

Plants on the Lower Trent at Glen Miller, Frankford and Sills Island produce about seven megawatts of hydro electricity an hour — about enough to supply Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

With Trenton consuming about 19.8 megawatts hourly yesterday afternoon and Belleville about 40, power from the Trent only stands as a small fraction of that consumed even locally.

Despite their age, the Trent plants are economically feasible because of the high degree of automation that has kept operating costs within reasonable bounds.

As the local generating stations have declined in importance, one part of the Lower Trent hydro complex has become increasingly significant.

The operations control centre in the transformer building adjacent to No. 1 Dam now keeps tabs on all Hydro operations from Colborne to Belleville and soon the centre's area of responsibility will be extended eastward to Napanee.

Also, at the transformer building across the road from old No. 1 Dam and the Sidney Generating Station, the flow of electricity to the region is controlled. And with the increased demands of Ontario Hydro's customers in the area, capacity of the transformer has doubled since December 1968.

Control from the Glen Miller operator is such that the power flow cannot be altered in most of the local system without first seeking authorization through him, that is, unless a severe storm makes the break. And, when lightning puts a line out of service, the job of restoring hydro service is controlled from the operations centre too.

Although the generating stations on the Trent are not what they used to be and have lost much of their importance, progress has made the adjacent transformer and control centre a much more vital part of the Ontario Hydro system.

Ability Fund Campaign This Month

Under a new name, the Ability Fund, formerly known as the March of Dimes, will begin its 1971 campaign on Monday, Jan. 18, Mrs. Vera Morphy, chairman, has announced.

Approval for the door-to-door canvas was given by the Belleville Financial Appeals Review Board, a co-operative activity of City Council, Quinte Labor Council, Belleville Chamber of Commerce and the United Community Services.

Persons suffering from disabilities receive aid from the Ability Fund in the form of rehabilitation referrals, supply of artificial limbs, and psychological services such as vocational guidance and recommendation for training and counselling for disabled persons in Belleville.

The Financial Appeals Review Board considers applications for campaigns in Belleville. Proper spacing of such appeals is guided through the board.

The board, in its third year, is chaired by Gerald A. Wishart, vice-president in charge of production at Mead Johnson.

Adult Training Course Resumes Next Week

Since Pope John "opened the windows of the church" with Vatican II, the winds of change have blown new vitality into religious instruction in the separate school system.

To reach Roman Catholic parents and explain the new ways of teaching, the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board has sponsored an adult information course this year.

The second phase will begin Jan. 14, and continue every Thursday evening at Nicholson Catholic College from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Attendance at the first phase in the fall averaged 135 people each evening, said Basil Arbour, director of catechetics for the board and organizer of the course. Separate school supporters from parishes from Picton in the south to Tweed in the north attended the meetings, and some non-Catholics also took part.

"Content of religious education in the schools is not new, but the vehicles used to approach the content have changed," said Mr. Arbour.

"Parents appreciate the opportunity to discuss and air their views, doubts and questions.'

Included in the seven sessions of the winter phase of the course will be discussions of the sacraments, conscience formation, morality today, the catechism, film study, audio - visual aids and modern music and religious education.

Speaker at the first session Jan. 14 will be Rev. Harold O'Neill, professor of theology at St. Augustine Seminary in Toronto.

Robert Cooney, co-ordinator of religious education for York county will be guest speaker at the third session.

Wording of Letter Called 'Indiscreet'

Loyalist College — in common with all other Ontario community colleges — received a letter from the education department requesting information on their operations which could be used in a provincial election.

The letter, signed by Victor Whatton, of the department's community college branch was sent to college presidents in early December.

"As you are aware," the letter read, "there is a provincial election in the making.

"For this reason, I have been asked to prepare a dossier of information about the colleges that can be supplied on demand, by letter or by phone, to persons who are involved in the election campaign in the ridings served by your college or its campuses."

Education Minister William Davis said he heard about the letter for the first time yesterday. He added the letter could be easily "misunderstood."

Herb Jackson, head of the department's community college branch said he asked Mr. Whatton to write the letter but did not see it until after it was sent out. He said he then phoned the college presidents and asked them to remove the letter from their files.

He described the wording of the letter as "indiscreet."

Mr. Jackson said he then sent out his own letter.

He told the presidents: "In the next few months, especially in view of impending political events, we must have basic data on students, staff and space to answer some of the many questions that will be asked about our sector of post-secondary education."

Herbert Young, Loyalist College president, today recalled receiving the letter from Mr. Whatton.

He said it was treated as a normal request for information from the department. The college receives "many such requests and information is always available."

R. C. Quittenton, president of St. Clair College in Windsor, said he had found "nothing untoward" about the request. His college always supplies information about its operations to anyone who asks — including opposition MPPs.

Other college presidents, who remained anonymous, were more critical.

One described the letter as the "height of naivete."

"If anyone wants information all he has to do is ask," he said. "Politicians? They're no different to me."

Gasoline Still Higher

The recent one - cent - a - gallon increase in the price of gasoline and furnace oil has now filtered down to most retail outlets and home deliveries, but the gasoline price war still continues in the Brighton area.

In Belleville, the new price for "regular" gasoline is 52.9 cents per gallon with a few cut - rate outlets underselling this price by as much as four to five cents.

But the gas price war in the Brighton area still continues.

Here cut - rate outlets for many months have been selling regular gasoline for as low as 43.9 cents with the big oil company stations coming within one or two cents per gallon of this price for their regular brands.

And further west in the area north of Whitby and Toronto there has been a gasoline war for years with prices consistently as much as six cents below the Belleville rate.

Poor People's Views Differ

TORONTO (CP) -- A trek by the poor to Ottawa? A mass sit-in at welfare offices?

To demonstrate or not to demonstrate—that was the question that troubled Canada's first poor people's conference here Friday.

A delegate said such nationwide demonstrations were the only means of changing things; another said the only way for the poor to help themselves was through political action.

At one general session, Mrs. Valoree Baker, a member of the Calgary Welfare Rights Association, said poor people must realize that demonstrations on a national scale are needed to promote change in "the system."

She suggested that a demonstration planned by her group in Calgary for Jan. 22 to protest the federal government's white paper on income security and Alberta's white paper on human resources might be made into a national protest.

At a second general session, following a round of closed workshops on such topics as unemployment, a delegate suggested that poor people hold sit-ins at welfare offices Jan. 27, the eve of a federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers in Ottawa.

One man proposed that a steering committee be set up by the conference to co-ordinate a national day of confrontation, possibly following a trek of unemployed persons to Ottawa.

He was opposed by another delegate who said a national demonstration day wasn't going to resolve anything. People had been demonstrating against poverty for years and nothing had happened. The only way for poor persons to help themselves was through political action.

The poor people's conference, planned by representatives of poor people's organizations, has been attended by more than 400 other such representatives. It was suggested initially by the national welfare council, an appointed advisory body to the federal health minister.

Costs of the four-day meeting, including transportation of delegates from all parts of Canada, have been financed largely by federal grants totalling $68,500.

Government officials were not invited to attend, however, and one interested person who joined the meeting on his own was silenced after giving his views briefly at a microphone.

As delegates gave reports of discussions at their workshops, it became increasingly evident that there was a strong desire for more powerful voice in society.

Suggestions included more political representation for the poor at all government levels, redistribution of wealth in Canada, and some type of national organization to represent the poor and maintain a communications link among them.

A printed statement by Elaine Olszewski of the Victoria "Low-Income Group" was distributed to delegates in support of a national poor-people's organization.

She said that without such an organization, poor people "may very well be forced to live in concentration camps in the future."

More workshops are being held today and it was not expected that any of the proposals will gain formal support from the conference until the final general session Sunday.

While some delegates to the earlier workshops discussed the concept of a guaranteed annual income, others came out strongly for full employment as a main priority.

Shotgun Charge Is Dismissed

PICTON (Staff) — William Fraser, 25, Picton, yesterday was dismissed on a charge of intent to endanger the lives of others during a preliminary hearing in provincial court.

The charge followed a shooting incident in the ladies beverage room of the Globe Hotel here, Dec. 28.

The charge was dismissed following evidence given by Fraser's brother, Gary, and a companion on the night of the shooting, Archibald Soules.

Both Gary Fraser and Soules testified that a gun was discharged in the beverage room by William Fraser as his wife, who entered with him, tugged at his arm.

William Lane, defence lawyer for Fraser, told provincial Judge T. Y. Wills that Fraser was "certainly wrong, but I can see no evidence here that he intended to discharge the firearm."

"The evidence of Mr. Soules and Gary Fraser is that the gun was fired in a struggle between Mr. Fraser and his wife," said Mr. Lane.

Crown Attorney Richard Sheehy remarked that "there was an intent to endanger some person or persons by discharge of a firearm that night."

Judge Wills replied: "I have very grave doubts of it, indeed. If on the other hand there is a doubt on the preliminary it should be resolved in favor of the Crown."

Mr. Lane said he was asking for a discharge for Fraser at the present time.

Judge Wills said: "This doesn't release him (Fraser) from any other charge and even a renewal of this charge. I am very loath to do this but I feel there is no evidence he'd planned to do anything with the discharge of the gun."

"There is almost conclusive evidence that his wife caused this. It's not enough to infer an intent."

Mr. Sheehy said he agreed with Judge Wills and said he would not request Fraser's committal for trial.

Warmer Tomorrow

Overnight temperatures again dipped below zero in the Quinte district last night.

At CFB Trenton the duty forecaster reported a low of nine degrees below. In Belleville, an official low of three below was recorded.

Bancroft remained the coldest spot in the district, with the mercury hovering around 25 below during the night.

The Trenton weatherman predicted some snowflurries later today and tomorrow, heralding warmer air. Low tonight in the Bellevile-Trenton area was expected to be around 10 above, rising to a high Sunday of 28.

"FAITH & ACTION" . . .

Now what use it is, my brothers, for a man to say he "has faith" if his actions do not correspond with it? Could that sort of faith save anyone's soul? If a fellow man or woman has no clothes to wear and nothing to eat, and one of you say, "Good luck to you I hope you'll keep warm and find enough to eat", and yet give them nothing to meet their physical needs, what on earth is the good of that? Yet that is exactly what a bare faith without a corresponding life is like — useless and dead. If we only "have faith" a man could easily challenge us by saying, "You say that you have faith and I have merely good actions. Well, all you can do is to show me a faith without corresponding actions, but I can show you by my actions that I have faith as well."

To the man who thinks that faith by itself is enough I feel inclined to say, "So you believe that there is one God? That's fine. So do all the devils in hell, and shudder in terror!" For, my dear short-sighted man, can't you see far enough to realize that faith without the right actions is dead and useless? Think of Abraham, our ancestor. Wasn't it his action which really justified him in God's sight when his faith led him to offer his son Isaac on the altar? Can't you see that his faith and his actions were, so to speak, partners — that his faith was implemented by his deed? That is what the scripture means when it says:

And Abraham believed God,
And it was reckoned unto him for righteousness;
And he was called the friend of God.

A man is justified before God by what he does as well as by what he believes. Rahab, who was a prostitute and a foreigner, has been quoted as an example of faith, yet surely it was her action that pleased God when she welcomed Joshua's reconnoitring party and sent them safely back by a different route.

Yes, faith without action is as dead as a body without a soul.

Commonwealth Talks

Prime Minister Trudeau has done himself and the Canadian public a favor by setting out for the Commonwealth conference in a spirit of humility. He is no miracle worker, he says, and certainly it would be the height of arrogance and hypocrisy for any Canadian leader, or chief of government of any other Commonwealth land to presume to know all the answers.

Of course this is one of the things governments must watch, for with all the world a stage because of instant communications, the utterances of international statesmen are known almost as soon as they are made. But if Mr. Trudeau and his Commonwealth colleagues can achieve some compromise over the issue of British arms for South Africa, for example, they will have performed well.

Apart from this, Mr. Trudeau has noted that one of the most important aspects of the Commonwealth get-togethers is simply learning more about the business of government. To this end he says he hopes to pick the brains of other leaders on how parliamentary democracy can best be served. It is an interesting concept, particularly in view of Mr. Trudeau's own efforts (which incidentally have been strongly criticized by the Opposition) to streamline the workings of Parliament.

There will be sympathy at this time with Prime Minister Heath of Britain in view of the kidnapping of the British ambassador to Uruguay. But then, as was the case with trade commissioner James Cross, when Ottawa was responsible, so too will action necessary to effect his release be the responsibility of the Uruguayan authorities.

Meanwhile, if statesmanship is to be exercized in Singapore over the arms issue it should come mainly from black Africa. It is they who will make or break the Commonwealth. If by their intransigence and hostility in a matter which, essentially, concerns only Britain and South Africa they commit themselves to leaving the Commonwealth, it will be to their loss and their disadvantage principally. If on the other hand one or more among the black leaders recognize that the arms issue alone is not sufficient grounds for leaving the Commonwealth they will have taken the course of wisdom. They know, as does everyone else that the proposed British-South African pact is an outgrowth of a previous arrangement and has to do with countering the increased Soviet naval activity in the Indian ocean, not with repression of South Africa's black population. To pretend to believe otherwise is merely to play politics which alone can threaten the integrity of the Commonwealth.

Hot and Cold

The temperature outside was zero and on the radio The Galloping Gourmet was talking about Australian strawberry shortcake and how it is temperaturewise (ugh — pardon the slang) "down under" at this time — like around 100 degrees in South Australia.

This is a period also when newspapers here sprout with pictures of Australian beauties sunning themselves on Bondi beach, sending further collective shivers down Canadian spines.

Ah, but we are nothing if not hardy types in these northern wilds. How else can one account for all those snowmobilers who defy not only the cold (for all their cosy thermal suits), but public ire and all the attendant hazards of the sport, to be on the move outdoors during this frigid season?

A declining minority — objects of curiosity at the best of times — still go for walks, even at night when the wind and chill factor are keen but which give the satisfaction of knowing, allied with having long since forsaken tobacco, that one may well live longer as a result.

Occasionally, the encircling gloom of a January day can be too much and one wonders at the mentality of those who dreamed up the now famous, "Is there any place you would rather be,?" All around may be a scene of singular desolation — but then next day the sun bursts forth and while it may be zero cold it is healthy too and, for that moment at least, the answer to the above question is the easier to answer.

Dief the Mixer and Supermarket Impulse-Buyer

Public Still Lionizes the Member for Prince Albert

OTTAWA — Diefenbaker-watching is still the most popular spectator sport in the political arena of Parliament Hill.

The Dief - watchers are the amateurs who do it for the sheer fun and games of seeing, hearing or reading what the old political stager is doing and saying next.

They are the amateurs in the sense — or the contrast — of the Trudeau - watchers being the professionals.

Among other reasons, Pierre Elliott T. is in by all perspectives the most deeply concentrated public focus because he is Prime Minister.

And as PM what he thinks, says and does to every Canadian is of bread - and - butter importance.

His decisions can harm or help everyone from the public school drug-hooked dropout to the most financially secure establishmentarian with a Swiss bank account.

And while he is a former Prime Minister and ex-Conservative leader, John George D. now, actually, is only MP for Prince Albert with only his kind of charisma — if that is what it is — going for him.

Unlike PET, what JGD may think or say or do neither provides payrolls nor fills lunch-pails.

The way things are, he can not even speak for the party he led in its greatest hour of parliamentary power.

But much of the old magnetism — or whatever it might have been that drew millions of people — still exerts a pull less only to the Prime Minister's.

You should see the mail mount up on desks and table tops, cabinets, seats of chairs, and even the floor.

And you should see the old familiar faces — as many strangers, too — crowding around.

They are not mobbing him as once they did, like the thousands who waited patiently in line to shake his hand — for many it was enough to just touch him — at a mass come-one - come - all - in - Toronto reception held at the height of his popularity in the mammoth Queen Elizabeth Building on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

You see them daily, when he is in town, clustering quietly around the West Door of the Centre Block, waiting for him to wheel up in his new "Diefmobile."

No security guards, no unmarked police cars in cruising escort, no snappy RCMP salutes.

Nothing but a young, 18, former Fuller Brushman and truck driver up front behind the wheel.

And the old man, 75, climbs out, sticks out a hand and growls "Good to meet you" or "I know you" or "Glad to see you."

Upstairs in his fourth floor office, just down the Centre Block Hall from Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's seldom - crowded quarters, old friends and new faces, with passes slipped them by their friendly neighborhood MP, wait for Dief.

There he lolls back and spins those old yarns you must have heard a score of times, but you keep listening for the new ones he pulls out of that memory book of 10,000 anecdotes.

But it is in the supermarket, Saturday's, that you see the different Dief, one you have probably never dreamed of.

Ottawa Mayor Kenneth Fogarty can go shopping with his smashingly good - looking wife, and nobody gives him a second glance.

But the shoppers are forever kibitzing Dief.

He plays a mad game of "impulse buying" with his wife, Olive.

There he goes, broken-field running along the crowded aisles grabbing goodies off the shelves without care for quality, price or even contents.

It is the packaging that seems to count. If it looks good, and new and interesting, into the shopping cart it goes when he reports back to Olive with an armful of what he suspects may be exotic foods.

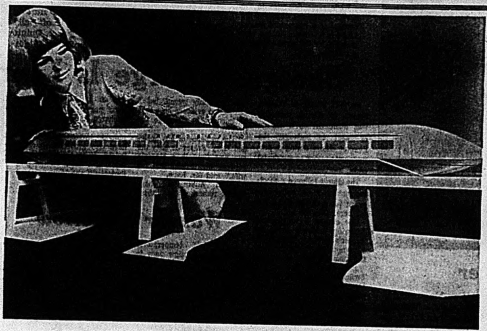
"No John," she says, and he takes them back, but keeps trying, hoping to score a shopping basketful one of these lucky days by eluding all those "No Johns."

Odd, is it not, that the Old Warrior should still be with it public interestwise, as the Wise Men in the Trudeau Think-Tank would put it.

Not really, when you come to think of it.

In these days of what the Prime Minister has frankly warned are times of "tension, unease, frustration and violence, of desperate men seeking ill-defined goals," there is something comforting in contemplating a character who reminds you that the world and even this seemingly unstable country are still in one piece.

Anyway, that is what those mountains of mail and those persisting crowds of visitors seem to say.



Trains of Tomorrow

Could this type of train be the means of halting the decline in Canada's railroad system? This is a model of an express train without wheels which West German planners envisage revolutionizing transportation within a decade. The 300 m.p.h. vehicle is being developed in Munch; instead of wheels, it will glide on magnetic "pillows" produced by electric generators in the train. Commuters might change to local trains running at reduced speed on parallel tracks without either express or local having to stop. (German Features picture).

Anti-pollution Group

Not Opposed to Industry Says Writer

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

On Dec. 30, The Intelligencer published a statement from Gordon Lloyd, Warden of Prince Edward County. Mr. Lloyd is quoted as saying that Pollution Unwanted in Prince Edward County, does not want industry.

If Mr. Lloyd had looked at a membership card, for Pollution Unwanted in Prince Edward County, he would have seen that one of the group's aims is to support the introduction of new industry.

The fact that county officials have not produced the other side of the story regarding the kraft pulp mill supports the business philosophy expressed by Mr. Lloyd, "if we do not do something now, we will just sit for another 20 years."

That sounds like a philosophy that has guided the county into mistakes in the past. It's certainly not a philosophy that leads to good business decisions.

A position of emergency and urgency underlies that kind of business philosophy and county officials probably feel they are in an emergency situation. Yet they have done something sound. They've appointed a full - time industrial commissioner who can do great things for the county, if allowed scope.

With an industrial commissioner, the administration of the county is, for the first time, in a position of basic business security. And the security position presents a new factor to equate. It's a position from which the present administration could do immense service for the county by removing the blinders and taking a hard look at the proposed kraft pulp mill.

Progress comes when you look at what you are doing, and do it right. Not just when you do something.

The Natural Order of Things Helps Keep Population in Check

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

There is alarm over the world's population explosion to the extent that a committee has been organized to see what can be done about the problem.

First of all I feel that a committee like this is as powerless as a committee formed in a mountain village of Brazil to dry up the Pacific Ocean.

Secondly, to alleviate the worries of these concerned people, there are two phenomena which act against over-population.

Man is his own predator and suicide agent. The poorer sections of the world over-populate to the extent that disease is uncontrollable and the majority of the children die before adulthood can be attained.

The intelligent sections of the world are being liquidated by man's efforts to advance among us. The greatest example of race war in our day was the extermination of six million Jews in Germany. Thalidomide crippled thousands of babies. The pill has worried thousands more. And what effects will the pill have on the next generation? More than 50,000 died on the highways of America last year because of man's most useful invention — the automobile. Drugs are out of control in our high schools.

Pollution has reached such a degree of acceptance that the United States government can empty carloads of poison into Atlantic waters with only a feeble protest. Speaking of pollution, "intelligent" people still defy the evidence produced by research that lungs and other organs succumb to smoking. Could it be that more people are dying from civilized over-feeding than from uncivilized hunger?

The second phenomenon is nature's own solution to over-population. History is full of examples: the Black Death, which came from the east, decimated 25,000,000 of Europe's population; a high crime rate helps to relieve the congested areas of Haarlem and the Puerto Rican communities in New York — earthquakes and landslides in South America, and the latest example is in Pakistan where the population is eight times above a healthy level and where a fraction of a million people every November are snuffed out by cyclones. Man's stockpile of atomic energy is so stupendous that his inventive mind cannot fathom a safe method of disposal.

So, let us take heart. There are ways to solve overpopulation without taxing our sweat-creased brow to find one.

Bancroft.

Religious Broadcasts

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In an age that is more characterized by its criticism of people and institutions than it is for praising their efforts I would like to present some roses instead of thorns.

I wish to heartily commend Radio Station CJBQ for its two minute religious broadcasts.

Also I wish to say "thank you" to those already very busy clergy who present the Gospel of brotherliness to a far wider audience than can be reached from their pulpits.

We have some of the most outstanding clergy in Belleville and Trenton of any communities of their size or larger. I hope we who gain so much from their messages of hope and comfort appreciate what they are doing for us.

In an age that overpays some areas of life, who ultimately contribute so very little of real meaning to life, it is refreshing to listen to men who often have so little of this world's goods, share with us what they have so much of, concern for our world.

They Want Action

Pensioners Keep Up the Pressure

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

A few words further on your paper's quote of my recent letter to city council.

I wrote to Mr. Benson on the matter of tax relief for pensioners on Dec. 16. In his reply the premier noted that the proposals in the white paper would mean that a taxpayer 70 years or more, if married would not pay tax unless his income exceeded [illegible]. The question for pensioners is when we can get action.

Since there has been no action by the government I wrote again to Lee Grills, Dr. Potter, Dr. Russell Scott, with copies to Mr. Robarts and Mr. Benson. The only reply to date was received from Dr. Scott

I might mention that in my last letter I noted my concern was not only for myself but thousands in like circumstances.

I also noted that DBS figures for the last ten years showed an increase in average wages of 48 per cent which pensioners do not receive but have to meet the increased cost of living of 27 per cent.

"Pensioners concerned" is [illegible] new organization formed [illegible] bring forward to the govern[illegible] ment the situation of pensioners in Canada, and as there are 1,700,000 pensioners in Canada this is a considerable section of the population.

This organization is asking all pensioners to take the time and trouble in their own interests to write to their representatives at the three levels of government and get some action for relief of the burden of taxation.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

January 9, 1951

Activities for the first half of their club year were recounted at the regular meeting of the Kinsmen Club held at St. Thomas' Parish Hall. The various committee chairmen reported on the work of their respective departments at the "strictly business" meeting There was no guest speaker.

"The greatest need in Canada today, and one of the greatest in the United States, is power that can be brought from the St. Lawrence River," Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, told Rotarians at their luncheon. Mr. Saunders said that if Ontario is to continue to provide its people with low cost electricity, the St. Lawrence development is a must. "All we ask of the two countries is, for goodness sakes, let us have that energy now" he said. "We need it and so do the people of the United States."

For years she filled the world with stories of her courageous flights which set new records for aviators and was one of the great explorers and pioneers of the air. Her name has been written in empire and in world history.

Thrill Of The Chase In Tanzania

Ottawa Journal

A government newspaper in Tanzania says girls in mini-skirts may soon be rounded up by authorities. It's the latest move in a year-long campaign to rid the country of minis, wigs, skin - lightening cream and bell-bottom trousers, which the ruling political party says are "decadent inventions of the the West." Trouble is, decadent is defined as "in a sta[illegible] of decay or decline" and we'[illegible] yet to see anything to do with a mini that could be described as decaying or declining. And if minis are decadent, how would the government describe topless dancers, X - rated movies and stage shows along the line of "O Calcutta!"?

'Big Brother' Makes Scene In Britain

Auckland (N.Z.) Star

Big brother is beginning to intensify his watch on the lives of private citizens. The name of his game is the ugl[illegible] word "computerization". Br[illegible]ain is now on the threshold of entering a "data bank society", in which the State will have complete computer tabulations on every man, woman and child in the country. Jew and Arab Live in Peace On Armageddon's Sunny Plain

ARMAGEDDON, Israel (Reuter) — Jew and Arab are living harmoniously at Armageddon where biblical tradition says the forces of good and evil will fight the last great battle at the end of time.

Despite the apparently unending Middle East conflict, this hill-rimmed cultivated plain basking in sunlight seems the antithesis of the final war of the world which Armageddon symbolizes.

Arab villages and Israeli kibbutzim coexist side by side, and both Jew and Arab report neighborly relations free from tension, despite the proximity of Israel's uneasy border with Jordan.

From time immemorial the town of Megiddo, from which the name of Armageddon (in Hebrew Har Megiddo—the Mount of Megiddo) is derived, and the surrounding Vale of Jezreel in northern Israel, have been a battleground for the empires of the Middle East.

It was here that the Egyptian Pharoah Thutmosis III, in the year 1478 BC, waged war to secure a strategic opening on the Via Maris—a land highway linking Egypt with Mesopotamia.

Here King Solomon built one of his "cities of the chariots" as a cavalry garrison to guard the entrance to the plain, and the ruined stables and palaces of the great city can still be seen.

Megiddo's strategic importance and numerous battles made the town a symbol of war and Armageddon a symbol of the last of all wars.

In his New Testament revelations, John prophesied a battle involving the kings of the whole world, gathered together in "a place called, in the Hebrew tongue, Armageddon."

And today only 20 miles to the east, lies Israel's border with Jordan and the biblical town of Beisan, which has been a frequent target of Palestinian Arab guerrilla rocket attacks from Jordan's Gilead Mountains.

But at Armageddon itself, Jew and Arab have tilled the land and pastured their flocks in peace since the Arab-Israeli war of 1948, as a result of which the Jews controlled the plain and the Arabs settled in the hills.

Avraham Hartmann, secretary of Kibbutz Megiddo nestling behind the ruins of King Solomon's city, says: "Our relations may not be extremely close but we live with Arabs as neighbors do in any part of the world."

At the hilltop Arab village of Umm-El-Fahm, a few miles to the south, Arab farmer Ahmed Khasul echoes his words: "There may be no great friendship, but there is also no tension. We are neighbors."

Salvation Army 'Saint' Spreading Wings in North

VANCOUVER (CP) — The man known as the "saint of skid road" in Vancouver, Maj. William Leslie of the Salvation Army, is spreading his wings northward in British Columbia.

Maj. Leslie, founder of Harbor Light Refuge in Vancouver and Miracle Valley, a wilderness rehabilitation centre for alcoholics, has started on Miracle Ranch, a project located 10 miles north of Hazelton, in north-central B.C.

He hopes the new project will go well beyond the basic alcoholic rehabilitation type of work to become an all-inclusive program for native people. He wants it to cover family services such as day care, unwed mothers and problems of the aged.

Work started in November on the 123-acre property, some of it fronting on the Kispiox River, which was purchased by the Army in September.

Maj. Leslie hopes to use Indians with alcoholic problems in the construction and operation of his new centre—as he did at Miracle Valley.

The first project proved that men fighting their way back from years as panhandlers and bums could regain old skills and thus build self-respect and strength.

Maj. Leslie has been concerned for many years about the problems of Indians in northern parts of B.C. Many have been attracted to the bright lights of the city, and those on skid road ended at the Harbor Lights shelter. Many, started on the road to recovery, had no place to go and returned to the skid road environment.

Maj. Leslie feels that Miracle Ranch will be the answer for many of these native Indians.

Woman Land Developer Involved in Big Project

TORONTO (CP) — Magda Pennington is another example of a woman engaged in work normally done by a man.

No, she isn't a jockey, taxi driver or football player. She's a land developer, currently involved in a project valued at more than $1 million.

Mrs. Pennington has been designing houses and apartments for 12 years. She previously spent eight years designing foundries in her native Hungary.

After remodelling cheap houses at the rate of 30 or 40 a year, Mrs. Pennington decided to tackle bigger projects. So she moved into the new-housing field, developing homes that cost from $75,000 to $135,000.

From there it was a logical step to her latest and most expensive project—a 33-suite luxury condominium in central Toronto.

Condominium, a comparatively new venture in Canada, is a form of multiple housing which permits each purchaser to hold title to the unit he occupies. Owned jointly with other occupants are common elements such as the lobby, elevators, recreational facilities and land.

"I come from Europe where 90 per cent of the homes are condominium," says Mrs. Pennington. "People don't know it, but it is really the future for this country too."

She is serving as developer, builder, interior decorator and sales agent for her condominium. The building was designed by an architect, but she requested and received numerous changes in his plans before she approved them.

The eight-storey building has natural fireplaces, large living-rooms measuring 24 by 13½ feet and radiant electric heating filtering in from the ceilings. A two-bedroom suite will cost $42,900 and a three-bedroom $52,900.

All are completely air-conditioned and have large balconies. Other features of the building include a, doorman, sundeck, gymnasium, saunas and underground parking.

Ann Landers

Active Town Leader Has Drinking Problem

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in the hope that my mother will see this letter and do something about herself. Mom is a big wheel in our town. Everyone knows her as an active leader and a crusader for worthy causes.

Her problem: Booze. Mom doesn't touch a drop during the day. She starts nipping while she fixes supper. She cooks with sherry and drinks half a bottle before Dad gets home. If he is 30 minutes late, the food is burned and she is plastered. Mom fell twice last week and was lucky she didn't break her neck. It makes me sick to see a woman of her intelligence staggering around making no sense. I'll be going away to college next year and I'm scared to death of what might happen to Mom if she's left alone in the house. Please, Ann, tell her to join A.A. — D.M.

DEAR D.M.: Telling her to join A.A. is no answer. Until your mother feels she's ready for A.A. it won't do her any good. I hope she sees this letter, recognizes herself and decides the time is now.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My fiance and I have a family crisis we'd like to settle before we marry. I hope you will not think we are a couple of nuts.

Neither Leonard nor I use tobacco. We both dislike smelly ashtrays and the lingering ordor of stale smoke on draperies and upholstered furniture, not to mention the small holes that appear mysteriously after the nicotine fiends have left. We do not want any cigarette or cigar smoking in our apartment. Problem: My mother is a heavy smoker. When I told her of our decision she stated flatly that she would not visit us if that's the way we felt. (Incidentally, she lives in this city.)

Our decision has become a topic of conversation among the relatives. Are we being foolish, stubborn and unreasonable?

—CANADIAN DILEMMA

DEAR CAN D.: Since you and Leonard have decided there will be no smoking in your apartment your mother should respect your wishes — as you would respect hers under similar circumstances. (P.S. Anyone who cannot go without a cigarette for two or three hours is in a bad way.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago you printed a saying in your column: "To worry is not to trust. To trust is not to worry." These words helped me and my family through a very rough period.

My older brother was sent to Vietnam just about then. Everyone in the family adored him. If anything had happened to my brother we would have all gone to pieces. I embroidered your saying, framed it and hung it on the kitchen wall. It became our family motto.

My brother is home now and we are so thankful. I am sure we all worried less because of the comfort we found in that saying. Although I made the tapetstry to give us courage while waiting, I now realize it goes for every aspect of life. Thank you, Ann. — POUGHKEEPSIE.

DEAR PO: I'm glad the motto helped, and I'm sure your letter will help others.

MR. AND MRS. BRIAN CASSIDY

Cassidy – Chisholm

Rev. Dean Baker officiated at the wedding ceremony in St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed on Saturday, Dec. 26, 1970, when Mary Lou Chisholm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Chisholm of Roslin was united in marriage to Brian Carthagh Cassidy, son of Mr. and Mrs. G .E. C. Cassidy of Tweed. Peter Marchen at the organ played traditional wedding music and accompanied his brother James Marchen in appropriate vocal selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length wedding gown of chantilly lace featuring a fitted bodice with square neckline, trimmed with seed pearls, and long lily point sleeves. The gown was fashioned in three-tier effect with the full skirt falling to a slight train at back. A full length veil of nylon marquisette and Belgian lace was caught to a tiara of chantilly lace. She carried a cascade of red roses intermingled with holly.

Mrs. Shirley Sutherland of Brantford, sister of the bride as matron of honor wore a floor length red velvet empire styled gown styled with high neckline and wrist length sleeves trimmed with white marabou. She carried a white fur muff crested with a spray of red sweetheart roses, and wore matching red rosebuds in her hair.

Dennis Blake of Belleville was groomsman, while the ushers were Gary Cassidy of Toronto, brother of the bridegroom and Harvey Chisholm of Roslin, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the Land O' Lakes Curling Club, Tweed where the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a midnight blue velvet dress with silver accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a gown of ivory English crimplene accented with gold thread, golden shade accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

a black needlepoint coat highlighted with white star mink at neckline and cuffs and a matching white mink hat with a contrasting corsage of holly.

For the honeymoon trip, the bride chose a moonstone grey wool dress accented with winter white trimming with

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Previous to her recent marriage Mrs. Brian C. Cassidy (nee Mary Lou Chisholm) was honored at several miscellaneous showers including one given by Mrs. Dennis Blake at the home of her mother Mrs. M. Genereaux in Tweed; by Mrs. Ron Hagerman, also by Mrs. John Fargey in Roslin, and at one given by the staff of the S. H. Connor School at the home of Mrs. Fred Albert in Thomasburg.

Short Shorts Turn Heads at Summer Resorts

PARIS (AP) — Despite a Siberian winter, some Paris fashion mentors are pushing shorts so skimpy they would turn heads at sun-basked summer resorts.

It's far from a groundswell fashion trend yet, but there are hints that some major houses presenting collections at the end of January will be going along with "le short."

So far they have turned up mainly at Paris night clubs and cabarets in what seems to be a revolt against the midi and the maxi — boosted by the ready-to-wear industry as a replacement for what is left of the miniskirt.

Girls lunching at chic bistros or supping at discotheques display the shorts under long fur or wool coats. The shorts come mainly in black velvet or pleated satins in a wide range of colors.

Such ready-to-wear houses as Daniel Hechter, Sonia Rykiel and Cacharel are championing the cause. Some haute couture houses seem to be falling in line, but reluctantly.

Dior has none of its main collection on sale now, but its two boutiques have four models. One is in red satin, another in jet sequins, a third in a Deauvil navy blue sailor suit, worn with a double-breasted blazer. The fourth is designed as bloomers.

Jean Patou has none on sale currently, but plans to design some for his next collection. The Patou boutique, however, displays a striped black and white jersey shorts suit.

The year 1970 was one of fashion anarchy and contestation. Hemlines took a double plunge, first to midcalf and then to the ankles.

"Le short" was making inroads as the new year came in, but one fashion-conscious Parisienne said: "I think they're absolutely stupid — and cold, too."

THE ART OF DISCOVERY

"Who ever wants to see, observe, discover, will. The stuff for discovery is everywhere." — J. F. Dobie.

* * *

"When we were children, deep in hobbies," recalls a Belleville lady, "my mother used to say in words to the effect:

"Whatever you collect for your collections which interest you, make certain each item is the real thing; the best possible. Then you have something worthwhile, valuable and original, from which you will derive a sense of fulfilment, discovery."

Whereupon ensued a discussion concerning persons considered masters of the art of such discovery, such as:

"Bach, who wasted little time; at the age of five copied out by moonlight, so some work of composers, so great was his love upon discovering their beautiful music, which lead him on to his musical career.

"Or of an 81 years' old Rabbi, recently mentioned, renowned as a calligrapher of sacred scrolls. His love for calligraphy never lessened regardless of the perfection demanded. Each word uttered reverently before he wrote it precisely spaced. If three mistakes were made, the work must be buried. All of his work is a masterpiece.

"How about Mr. R. C. Sheriff, whose idea for a play about life in the trenches in World War I from which he had just returned, persisted, and kept him writing, polishing and adding to it, over a period of years without hope of it ever being performed. Yet — it was accepted. Its success exceeded his wildest dreams, winning world acclaim, as "Journey's End."

"What of the London-born Swiss lad (in 1779) who at 19 received his medical degree at Edinburgh. He specialized in scientific pursuits. His research developed the idea of cold - storage; touched on modern picture camera; contributed to the invention of his "log - scale"; he caused and innovated sand filtration with the London water supply which led to the Public Health Act of 1870.

"He lectured for 30 years on animal physiology, writing a treatise he considered his finest work. He belonged to 15 scientific societies. He was a wellknown public Victorian figure.

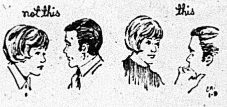
"Yet, today, he would be forgotten, but for a strange love he had for a little hobby. He filed away synonyms and antonyms, which he began to collect in his 20s, (he lived to be 90), and when he retired from public life at 70, he collected his filings and had them published, and lived to see his book through 25 editions.

"Stranger still, is the fact that, though 20 million copies have been sold to date, practically nothing is known about the man, until this year — 101 years after his death, the first biography, by D. L. Emblem is being published, by T. F. Crowell Co., though his name is a household word and second only to Noah Webster. You will know him by his famous Thesaurus: Dr. Peter Mark Roget.

In his column, Mr. R. J. Needham once noted: "No man can be true to himself . . . without becoming original, for there is in every creature a fountain of life which . . . . will create a fresh atmosphere, and bring to life fresh beauty."

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I'm tired of hearing how wonderful Mrs. Mitchel is and how much better the children like the food she fixes. I'm not going to have her babysit again. The children will learn to love her better than they do their own mother."

Mother: "Mrs. Mitchell is a good, kind babysitter and she does keep the children happy. I'll have to get her recipe for the potato soup they like so much."

A babysitter, no matter how much she may be loved, is not likely to replace a mother in a child's affection. Be glad your children's love can extend to others.

Bureau Reports Women's Measurements Have Grown

WASHINGTON AP — It takes more woman to fill a size 36-D bra than it did 30 years ago, and that's official.

The U.S. national bureau of standards reports that women's body measurements have grown since it published a standard 12 years ago based on a 1939 survey.

The purpose of the new standard is to update the sizing of women's apparel.

Based on data collected from the departments of agriculture and health, education and welfare, the U.S. Air Force and mail order houses, the comparative study of women's body measurements shows the size 12 of yesterday, 34-25-36, is today's 35–26-37.

"There's a general increase in bust, hips and waist," said a quality control manager of a large mail order house. "We find women are getting heavier. Some say it's because they're more sedentary. They sit more and their hips spread."

In four classifications of women's sizes — misses', women's, half-sizes—for shorter women—and juniors—some measurements have increased one to two inches in what the latest government survey calls "body landmarks."

Successful Living

Be Gentle with Mental Patients

By DORIS CLARK

One of the things which the family (of the convalescing mental patient) may have to face is the unpredictability of his behavior. A broken leg mends within a certain period of time; only a brief convalescence is necessary after most illnesses.

Yet the former mental patient is one day seemingly sensible, free from delusions, and his old affectionate self. In the very next hour he may be "talking sick" again, accusing his wife of things he has imagined, or complaining that he is not having the success in life he deserves.

Relatives have heard all this before in the acute phase of his illness, and now here it comes again frm somebody who is supposedly better!

Bewildered and discouraged, the family members are apt to take a "no-nonsense" line in an effort to talk him back to common sense; whereas a quietly spoken, "Oh, John, you know that isn't really so" and a later reference to the true facts will not only avoid bitterness but will also help the patient to accept reality. — Helping a Mental Patient At Home (National Association for Mental Health)

Dear Doris: For my son's wedding I shopped for a very plain suit and hat to match. The wedding was held in the church basement. It was quite cool and I thought a suit the most sensible outfit. I showed it to the bride-to-be and to our son and they seemed pleased.

After the wedding, and after he had spent a weekend at the bride's mother's place he came to me and was very angry because I had got my wedding outfit without consulting the bride's mother. We knew she was wearing a short-length dress.

I suffer with colds, Doris, and knew I culdn't wear a dress in comfort. Is it necessary to gp to the bride's mother and tell her what you want to wear? — Hurt

Dear Hurt: Usually the two mothers talk over what they are going to wear. This is in the interest of harmony in color and style. You don't want to clash, nor on the other hand look like twins.

But it's not something to start a family feud over! Your son is in a tough spot, with a doubtless a bride who joins in the chorus. It is going to be up to you to overlook such petty criticism.

• • •

Dear Doris: Why do some guys act so nice and say they will call and don't?

I live on a farm about 15 miles from the small town he lives in. For a couple of weekends the roads were not too good because of rain but don't you think that if a guy likes a girl he could call, at least? He is very nice but seems to like to stay home.

My uncle is getting married soon. If the invitation reads: "and escort", should I ask him? I'm sure he would accept and we'd have a good time. — Disappointed

Dear Disappointed: We could dream up a few possible excuses, like he had to help his parents that night or it was exam time and he was studying or he might have been sick. I'm suspecting, though, that he just doesn't respect his own promises.

When a yung fellow is enjoying a girl's company he hates to see the evening come to an end without suggesting a next time. Then when the time turns up circumstances interfere. He may hardly remember that you expect to hear from him.

Write and invite him to your uncle's wedding. Then leave all initiative — phone calls, acceptance, all future dates — up to him.

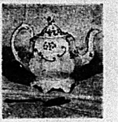
Since the 16th Century Teapot Household Item

Teapots have been a household essential since tea was brought to Europe in the 16th century. By the 19th century every family had at least one teapot and usually two, one for company and one for the family.

Many early teapots are unmarked but their shape and decoration is some guide to the date of manufacture. Once Europeans had stopped imitating individual chinese teapot styles, they turned their attention to shapes popular with silversmiths. Chocolate pots and coffee pots were made in silver in distinctive shapes which in turn were adapted to teapots.



Picture Credit: Dundurn Castle Restoration

The family teapot had a status of its own. Large teapots represented a greater use of tea and a corresponding affluence. The size of the teapot was only tempered by the strength of the lady who had to lift it to pour.

To an extent the weight problem was solved by the use of the tea urn, and tea kettle on stand, both in metal and each of which might hold two gallons. They were not reproduced in china.

In the late 18th and early 19th century many teapots, otherwise unmarked, can be dated by shape. The most distinctive late 18th century shape was the "helmet", which remarkably resembles an inverted helmet with handle and base added. The similarity in cream pitchers is even more striking than in teapots.

The helmet shape persisted for several decades. The main feature in addition to the shape is a collar, often very pronounced above the spout in which the lid is fitted. The helmet was followed by the "boat", a very similar shape with a large spout formed into the body of the pot like the prow of a boat.

The teapot illustrated is typical of the 1840's. The clue is the base, really an attached pottery trivet and a feature of many tea sets of this period.

Early silver teapots with straight sides sat on silver trays. Even these were found to mark the table and legs were added to the tray. About 1790 - 1800 ball feet were added instead of legs and about 1800 the feet were added to the teapot without a tray. Potters copied the style and china teapots were made with ball feet at the beginning of the 19th century.

In the middle of the century there was a Victorian penchant for polygonal shapes, usually six or eight sides. The teapot illustrated has eleven, with overglaze hand painted decoration on an ironstone base.

Porcelain and china teapots of the late 18th and early 19th century command premium prices. A pot of the 1840's is worth at least $20 and likely more.

Answer: Yes and I am glad to add it to my program of almost an apple recipe per week this season.

DUTCH APPLE PIE

Pastry:

- 1¼ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- ½ tsp. salt
- 1-3 cup shortening
- 2½ tbsps. butter
- 2 tbsps. ice cold water

Add salt to flour then cut in the shortening and butter with pastry blender until size of small peas. Add the 2 tbsps. ice cold water, 1 tsp. at a time, mixing in with fork. Press dough into a ball on lightly floured board and roll out to fit 9" pie plate and build up firm fluted edge.

Filling: 3 cups apples, sliced into unbaked pastry shell

Crumb Crust:

- 1 cup brown sugar
- 4 tbsps. butter
- 3 tbsps. flour
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- 3 or 4 tbsps. rich cream (for top)

Combine Crumb Crust ingredients and sprinkle over top of apples. Drizzle cream over evenly to moisten crumbs. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 35 min. or until apples are soft and a rich syrup has formed.

Question: My husband asked me to make gingerbread because he remembers that his mother used to make it in the middle of winter . . . Amy R.

Answer: I hope the following pleases him.

ONE-BOWL GINGERBREAD

After sifting and measuring flour, place sifter over large beater bowl and sift through it the flour, soda, salt, sugar and spices. Add shortening, molasses and egg and beat 2 min. in electric beater or until velvet smooth by hand. Add boiling water and beat 2 min. more. Line bottom of an 8 x 8" pan with wax paper. Butter it and sides. Turn in batter. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 55 min., but be sure to test by gently touching at centre to see if top is done. Turn out and cool on cake rack.

Girl Attacked for Generosity

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mary Perkins's telephone has been ringing constantly ever since word got out she was being tormented for taking four homeless black children on a pre-Christmas shopping spree.

"People keep calling to say they're proud of me," the 11-year-old girl said Friday. "I tell them, 'Thank you very much'."

Until this week, Mary was getting a different type of message.

Her mother, Isabel Perkins, said a small group of neighborhood children had attacked Mary, who is white, and taunted her daily with obscenities and the term: "nigger-lover."

But that stopped when Dade County Constable Ivan Nachman charged four teen-agers—two boys and two girls—with assault Thursday and the Miami News carried a story about Mary's ordeal.

"Now, the telephone rings constantly," said Mrs. Perkins.

"We had to take it off the hook last night so we could get some sleep. Everybody wants to let us know how proud they are of Mary and how sorry about what happened to her."

Mrs. Perkins said the callers had been all ages and all races.

Mary used the $10 she had saved for her parents' presents to buy gifts for the black youngsters. She acted after reading how Miami Police Sgt. Bill Kimbro, a Negro, had dug into his pocket and put the children's family—evicted from their apartment—up for the night.

On Christmas Day, her mother said, a group of white teen-agers attacked Mary and sent her home in tears with a bloody mouth.

Letter to Colleges Comes Under Attack

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario opposition party leacers Friay criticized a letter sent to community college presidents which they said indicated an attempt to make political propaganda for the Progressive Conservative government.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, said the letter apparently indicated an attempt "to get trumped-up propaganda from senior administrators to keep people satisfied about the cost of education."

He said he hoped that the presidents would refuse to comply with a request by the provincial department of education. He said they were asked to supply favorable information about their colleges which could be used as political ammunition by Conservative candidates in the next provincial election.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said: "My reaction is really one of disgust, because in the last year the Conservatives have shown they're willing to use any method to win an election."

Soon after receiving the letter in early December, most college presidents were telephoned by th head of the province's community college branch and told to remove it from their files because it could be politically embarrassing.

"As you are aware, there is a provincial election in the making," began the letter, signed by Victor Whatton of the department of education's community college branch.

"For this reason, I have been asked to prepare a dossier of information about the colleges that can be supplied on demand by letter or by phone, to persons who are involved in the election campaign in the ridings served by your college or its campuses. . . ."

Eucation Minister William Davis said he heard about the letter for the first time Friday. He said it could easily be "misunderstood."

Long Snowmobile Trip

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Three snowmobile drivers arrived here Friday afternoon, after a two-day 217-mile trip from Owen Sound.

The three made the trip to promote the Owen Sound Winter Carnival, Jan. 15-24. Bob Shouldice also will compete in the Kawartha Cup snowmobile competitions this weekend.

Havelock Train Said 'Hybrid'

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario government spokesman Friday called Canadian Pacific Railway's train between Toronto and Havelock, Ont., an unworkable hybrid.

Kirk Foley, director of economic analysis for the department of transport, said the only feasible way to operate the line would be to split it into two parts—a commuter train on the outskirts of Toronto and a fast through-train to Peterborough and the end of the line.

He was testifying at a hearing of the railway transport committee of the Canadian transport commission into an application by the company to drop the service.

At present, the train carries about half its passenger load in the 15 to 20 miles closest to Toronto, making it impossible to maintain over the entire 100-mile run the 65-per-cent average load necessary for the train to pay its way.

Mr. Kirk said the lack of a good train service to Toronto would hamper areas such as Peterborough, which was one of the proposed centres of development in the Toronto-centred region plan—blueprint of growth in the region for the balance of the century.

Loss on the line during 1969, railway spokesmen said, was almost $258,000.

Canadians Exposed To Rabies

OTTAWA (CP) — Travellers who visited the Hacienda del Lobos resort hotel in Puerto Vallarta, Mex., during the last two weeks of December may have been exposed to a rabid animal, the health department said Friday.

A raccoon-like animal called a coati mundi, chained in front of the hotel, died on January 2 and was later shown to have rabies, a news release said.

"Several people are known to have been bitten by this animal and there are, at present, 25 people in Mexico on anti-rabies treatment."

The statement said seventeen Canadians were registered at the Hacienda del Lobos between December 15 to 31, the infectious period, "and may have been exposed to the same animal."

The health department statement says other Canadians in the town during the last two weeks in December may also have been exposed to rabies by petting the animal.

They are asked to see their doctors immediately or to contact their provincial health departments.

Mo-Hawks 'Kid Line' Helps Ground Flyers In 5-2 Victory

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Belleville Mo-Hawks' "Kid Line" was too good to be true Friday night.

As if contributing two goals in a 5-2 Mo-Hawk win over Barrie Flyers were not enough, the George Godson-Wayne McConnell-Ray Johnston under-25 trio also kept their Barrie first line checks off the scoresheet.

The Flyers' big line of Mike Dubeau, Corby Adams, and Pete Panagabko couldn't elude their Mo-Hawk shadows long enough to prevent the first Belleville win over Barrie in three tries this season.

"You stop them and you stop 70 per cent of Barrie's offence," coach Dave Jones estimated in praising his youngest line's performance. "I'll bet that Barrie line isn't shut out too many times this season."

Jones launched the Mo-Hawks towards their fourth straight win, and fourth place in the eight-team OHA Senior A standings with a goal at the game's 5.27 mark.

The Mo-Hawk playing coach sent Les Colligan in alone on Barrie goalie Ken Payne then followed up the play to sink the game's first goal on his own rebound.

DOUG SENIOR

John McMillan temporarily tied the game on a breakaway at 16.58, before Mo-Hawks Doug Senior and Wayne McConnell took over.

Senior ocnverted a couple of perfect Al Ferguson setups into his 13th and 14th goals in the second period, and McConnell boosted the Mo-Hawk margin to 5-1 with two similar third-period goals set up in the slot by linemates Godson and Johnston.

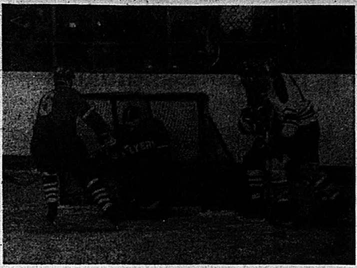
Little Fern St. Onge scored late in the game on another breakaway, one of four Steve Rexe had to face in the game.

Rexe, who had an unusually quiet night thanks to an outstanding checking display by the Mo-Hawk forwards, outguessed veteran Pete Panagabko at a crucial second-period juncture, and whittled his goal-against average to 3.38, third-best among senior circuit goalies.

The offensive standout was centre Doug Senior, who came up with his most inspired effort in his first season as a Mo-Hawk.

Senior split the Barrie defence and pulled goalie Payne on one spectacular second-period rush but couldn't retain control of the puck.

"Doug was really flying", agreed Jones, who was impressed with the way the club has been "spreading the goals around".



Ken Payne Thwarts a Mo-Hawk Scoring Chance

Each of the three lines scored against the Flyers, and there are now a half-dozen potential 20-goal scorers in the lineup. Linemates Senior and Ferguson each have 14, McConnell has 13, Ralph Plane and Lorne O'Donnell nine each, and Jones seven in only 14 games. Even defenceman Greg Marchen has eight.

The win boosted the Mo-Hawks over the 500 mark, and their 13-12 record puts them in fourth place, one point in front of Kingston and only six behind the Flyers who have played two more games.

That gap could be narrowed with win tonight in Owen Sound. A weekend road trip to Galt and Oakville comes before the next scheduled home games, a Tuesday Jan. 19 affair with Kingston Aces.

Returns from Wrestling Trip

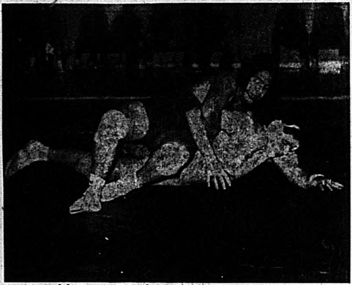
Brant Comes 'Back to Earth'

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Harold Brant has been home for a week now, but it will still take some time for him to "get down to earth" after a Christmas vacation in southern Europe.

The Shannonville wrestler took part in a tour of Yugoslavia by Canada's junior champions, designed to give the youthful grapplers some international experience.

"Yes, we all had a great time," was his general summary of the 17 day trip that took them to three different countries.



Harold Brant Displays New Aggressive Tactics

The majority of the time was spent in Yugoslavia, where the Canadians participated in three different meets. After landing in Vienna, Austria the team travelled to the Yugoslavian city of Belgrade and later to Skopje, near the border of Greece.

Harold described the Yugoslavian climate as, "a lot warmer than it is here. It was about 40 degrees and there was no snow."

Getting to view the country itself proved to be a difficulty because of the large amount of time spent competing or travelling from place to place. Communicating with the other competitors was also a problem because the team had only two interpreters, and one of these was assigned permanently to the coach.

"We competed against wrestlers from the southern part of Yugoslavia," noted the Belleville athlete, "it's the only section of the country that wrestles freestyle, all the rest is Greco-Roman and you can't use your legs in that."

Brant wrestled a total of six times during the course of the tour, winning three of his heavyweight matches. At Skopje, in what was billed as the Yugoslavian Junior Nationals, he took a second place finish with his only loss being a close 2-0 decision to the bronze medal winner in the European championships.

Harold felt that his biggest gain from the trip, outside of the opportunity to travel to the different countries, was that he was able to re-vamp his style of wrestling because of the experience gained.

"I'm using an entirely different stance that I picked up from one of their coaches and it feels a lot more comfortable", says Brant, "also I learned to be more aggressive. I was waiting until the other man made the first move and as a result I was getting beat."

The team in general fared quite well, picking up a pair of firsts at the Skopje competition and according to their heavyweight entry, all Canadians increased their wrestling knowledge.

After the rigorous competitions in Yugoslavia, they were able to relax for a few days in Rome, before returning home last Saturday.

There was only one minor drawback to the experience. "In our first high school meet a guy moved up two weight classes to wrestle me", said Harold, "I guess I'll be getting that for the rest of the year. With the publicity and then you're expected to win every match."

Nevertheless, after the European trip he'd be the first to agree that being champion is worth the added pressure.

Bounces Go to Crushmen In Win Over Trenton

TRENTON (Special) — Bad bounces in the game's opening stages opened the door for the Oshawa Crushmen to record a 10-4 victory over Trenton in their Friday night Eastern Ontario Junior B encounter.

"The team played quite well", said Trenton manager John Yott, "play was pretty well evenly divided, but they had at least four or five goals deflect in off someone's leg or skate."

The second place Crushmen scored four times in the opening ten minutes, while Trenton could reply only once in the opening period. Tony Minaker replaced Peter Pettingill in the net for the Golden Hawks and allowed the remaining six goals.

The second period was the best for the losers who needed the first 40 minutes of play on the short end of a 6-2 score.

Bim McFall and Mike Hall played strong games for Trenton coming up with a goal apiece, while Ken Holmes and Jeff Howard added the others.

McFall's tally was a picture effort as he stickhandled the length of the ice and deked the Oshawa goalie. Minaker played well in the Golden Hawks' goal.

BIM McFALL

Oshawa, minus the services of centre Steve West, who scored a pair of goals Friday night for the Juniors A Generals, got a hat trick performance from Len McAvoy.

Trenton had 11 penalties in the game, while Oshawa picked up one less.

Rumors that the Trenton entry would not be able to complete the 1971 schedule were squelched at a Thursday night meeting when the board of directors gave the team a vote of confidence.

Centennial's junior Chargers kept their unbeaten string intact last night, but the seniors and midgets couldn't take the Tigers by the tail as Trenton won two of the three Bay of Quinte COSSA basketball match-ups.

Trenton seniors opened up a four point lead in the west section with their fourth win in as many games stopping Centennial 54-51.

The junior contest went to the Chargers by a 59-42 margin as they pulled even with Quinte while Trenton capped the midget game 57-46.

Belleville B's Attempt To Beard Lions Sunday

The Belleville Fairways, who appear to have shaken their early season lethargy, notching two wins and a tie in their last four outings will get a chance Sunday to find out just how much they have improved.

The fifth place Belleville B's were originally slated to meet the Cobourg Cougars, but a schedule change will put them against the powerful Peterborough Lions for the first time since the Eastern Ontario Junior B league leaders captured the gold medal at the Ontario games.

Belleville's last meeting with the Lions resulted in a 15-1 drubbing in the Liftlock city and the Fairways will be looking for some measure of redemption on their home ice.

A big boost to the locals would be the addition of right winger Terry Meagher who attended their Tuesday night workout. Meagher, who worked in practice with sturdy pivot Brian O'Coin could help get some offensive power into an attack that has managed only two goals in three meetings with Peterborough this season.

O'Coin has logged 67 minutes in penalties this season, but at the same time has managed to come up with 10 goals and seven assists good for a second place tie in the team scoring statistics.

Goalie Pete Elford promises to be a main stumbling block in the way of the Belleville sharpshooters after recording two shutouts with the Junior A Petes when spelling off John Garrett.

Game time is 8 p.m. Sunday night.

Banned, Filly Races In Florida

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Racing Commission officials expressed surprise Friday night after hearing Miss Ella Cinders, a four-year-old filly banned on Ontario tracks, had finished second in a race at Florida's Tropical Park in the afternoon.

Edward Gorman, the ORC's supervisor of throughbred racing, said the filly's owner, Toronto realtor David Mann, was to have informed the commission before his horse ran in Florida

Miss Ella Cinders had not run since Sept. 19 when a urine analysis disclosed presence of the drug procain. The analysis followed a 12-length win for the filly at Woodbine.

The ORC said at the time the filly could not be raced again until the case was disposed. However because of lengthy proceedings and legal problems, the ORC permitted Mann to move the horse to Florida.

Gorman said that while the commission allowed this concession, 'I strongly doubt that it was informed that the filly ran today."

Healey Helps Put Finishing Touches on ex-Flyer Teammates

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa's battling 67s moved a notch closer to league-leading Peterborough Petes Friday night by downing Oshawa Generals 6-4 at Ottawa while the best the Petes could manage was a 5-5 tie with Toronto Marlboros in Onario Hockey Association Junior A action.

For their own part, 67s are a precarious point above, St. Catharines Black Hawks, who breathed down their necks by giving Kitchener Rangers their fourth-straight defeat, a 5-2 decision at Kitchener.

In he night's other game, seventh-placed Hamilton Red Wings, although outshot 48 to 18, managed their second straight win for new coach Bill Harris by defeating the Flyers at Niagara Falls 3-2.

Six Ottawa players scored a goal apiece in their victory. Blake Dunlop, Jim Cowell, Peter Gaw, Bryan McSheffrey, Don House and Rick Ball each scored for 67s. Steve West counted twice for the ninth-place Generals. Peter Sullivan and Terry O'Reilly scored the other Oshawa goals.

A rare penalty shot was awarded 67s in the finale. Doug Keeler missed his first attempt on the free shot but was given a second chance by referee Gaston Bordeleau, who said Oshawa goalie Gilles Gratton left his crease to stop the shot. The second shot also failed.

At Toronto he Marlboros came back from a four-goal deficit to tie the Petes before 4,641 fans. It was the second meeting in two nights, Petes having downed the Marlies 7-5 Thursday.

Steve Vickers led Toronto with two goals while Steve Shutt, Dave Gardner and Ralph Hopiavuori each added singles. Skip Foster paced Peterborough with two goals and Craig Ramsay, Jim Mahon and Doug Gibson added the others.

Toronto trailed 5-1 near the end of the second period but came back with four unanswered goals to earn the tie. The third Marlie goal was counted by Gardner on a penalty shot. It was awarded when a Peterborough player grabbed the puck in his own goal crease.

Toronto bombarded John Garrett with 40 shots while Peterborough managed only 19 shots at two Toronto goaltenders.

The winning goal at Niagara Falls came when ex-Flyer Mike Healey picked off a loose pass and relayed it to Pat Hickey, who drove a low, screened 40-footer past goalie Rick Sims.

Mike Veisor played a sensational game in the net for Hamilton as the Flyers were held to a 1-0 first-period lead despite outshooting the Wings 21- to 2.

Other Hamilton scores were by Ron Leblanc and Terry Ryan. Steve Stone and Morris Titanic counted for the Flyers.

Kitchener's loss was the fifth straight of the season for the Rangers at the hands of St. Catharines.

Bob MacMillan paced the winners with three goals before 4,069 fans. Other Hawk tallies went to Brian McBratney and Gerry Andreatta.

On the losing side Tom Cassidy scored his 26th goal and Bill Barber his 17th.

NHL Expansion Boom Opens Gates For Outstanding Rookie Candidates

TORONTO (CP) — Most National Hockey League coaches tend to tout their own rookies while ignoring anyone else's contenders for the Calder Memorial Trophy, but Red Kelly finds the situation different this year.

"If you were awarding the Calder Trophy right now, there must be about a dozen guys you could give it to without looking bad," said the Pittsburgh Penguins' coach, whose team was here to play the Maple Leafs.

First-year men are the leading scorers on five clubs.

Tom Webster, 15 goals with Detroit Red Wings and Gil Perreault, 16 with Buffalo Sabres, are the lone leaders with their clubs.

Rookies Bob Berry with Los Angeles Kings and Serge Bernier with Philadelphia Flyers each has 13 goals to make them co-leaders—Berry with Bob Pulford and Bernier with Bobby Clarke.

And while Minnesota North Stars' rookie Jude Drouin's nine goals has been doubled by teammate Danny Gjant, Drouin is the team leader in points with 15 assists compared to Grant's five.

At New York, Rangers' rookie goalie Gilles Villemure is the league-leader with a goals-against average of 1.75.

MORE

"There's no question," said Kelly, "that a lot of guys are catching on because the NHL expanded from six teams to 12 in 1967 and now to 14. That means a lot more jobs are open.

"Who's to say, though, that a fellow like Villemure didn't belong in the NHL long before this?"

Villemure, 30, had played only nine previous games with the Rangers during two different seasons. The NHL defines a rookie as anyone who hasn't played more than 25 games in any previous single season or six or more in any two previous seasons.

That rule also means the Leafs' Billy MacMillan, 27 years old and 13 goals scored, and 29-year old Guy Trottier with 12 goals, are both rookies.

The abundance of top rookies in the NHL this year is a result of a good group of graduating juniors, says Kelly.

"More than that, though, a lot of the expansion teams had kept their draft choices this time where as they'd dealt them away before. And a junior would stand a better chance with us, for example, than with New York or Boston.

"So you see a lot of good junior grads with expansion clubs —Perreault at Buffalo, Dale Tallon with Vancouver, Fred Barrett on defence with Minnesota and the kid we drafted seventh, Greg Polis."

Other top rookies include Guy Lapointe and Marc Tardif with Montreal Canadiens, Jim Lorenz and George Morrison with St. Louis Blues, California Seals' Ernie Hicke and Dan Maloney and Jerry Korab with Chicago Black Hawks.

Barkley Interim Detroit Coach

DETROIT (AP) — Ned Harkness admits his brief tenure as coach of the beleaguered Detroit Red Wings "has been a rat race."

DOUG BARKLEY

But suddenly he is taking over from Sid Abel and that race should become even more hectic. Yet: "I want to stay until they bury me," Harkness says.

If Red Wing fans react with boos, catcalls and eggs as anticipated for tonight's National Hockey League game against Buffalo Sabres at Olympia Stadium, the burial might be sooner than Harkness expects.

However, it will Doug Barkley who will be standing behind the team bench for the game in a temporary coaching role.

Harkness, the target of bitter criticism from newly resigned general manager Sid Abel, Friday was named Abel's replacement in a surprising move by owner Bruce Norris. Norris also said that Barkley, coach of the team's Fort Worth farm club, "will take over behind the bench for the next few games while we consider various candidates for coach."

"It did come as a bit of a surprise," the 49-year-old Harkness said, adding later, "It's a great break for me, opportunity-wise and financial-wise."

The first-year NHL coach, who previously spent 21 years coaching college hockey, said he wanted to emphasize that "I haven't been relieved of my job as coach."

"This was made very clear to me by Mr. Norris. . . .

"If I follow the requirements of Mr. Norris as general manager I don't feel I could also coach and do both jobs right.

"I told Mr. Norris if I couldn't do justice to coaching duties I'd rather see someone else with them."

It was only Wednesday that Abel, following a meeting with Norris in Chicago, resigned after three decades in the Wings' organization as a player, coach and general manager.

When he made the announcement, Abel fired a number of verbal broadsides at Harkness, saying he could not assess him as a coach "because I don't think he is one."

Cassius Not Up His 'Ali'

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The president of the World Boxing Association is pulling for Joe Frazier to beat Muhammad Ali in the March 8 heavyweight championship fight at Madison Square Garden, and says if Frazier can't he hopes the United States Supreme Court can.

Bill Brennan of Richmond said even if Ali, whom Brennan still call Cassius Clay should beat Frazier, the WBA may not recognize Ali as the titleholder.

Brennan said the WBA's position hasn't changed since August, 1964, when Ali was preparing to meet the late Sonny Liston in a return bout.

The WBA official said: "We told Clay's lawyers that we would withdraw WBA recognition if he went through with the second fight with Liston. They practically told us to go to hell.

"The fight was held and we unanimously withdrew recognition of Clay."

Brennan said the WBA hasn't been asked to sanction the Ali-Frazier match.

"And I wouldn't take it upon myself to say what the position of the WBA executive committee would be should the promoters of the fight ask for sanction," Brennan told the Richmond times Disaptch.

Frazier is the recognized WBA champion, and Brennan said he could not foresee the WBA penalizing Frazier for fighting Ali.

"If we did something like that the whole world would be down on us," Brennan said. "This is a fight that everybody in the world is wanting. It could gross anywhere from $10 to $12 million."

The U.S. Supreme Court still hasn't given its decision on Ali's draft-evasion conviction, and if it comes before March 8, the Louisville fighter might face a prison sentence before the fight.

Record-Length Foul

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spencer Haywood was 3,000 miles away and hardly responsible for Buffalo Braves' foldup against Seattle Supersonics Friday night, but the Braves are protesting in his name anyway.

And why not? Everybody else who plays Seattle in the National Basketball Association is doing it.

Buffalo suffered through a 32-point second half and dropped a 110-102 decision to the SuperSonics Friday night. Then they protested because Haywood's name was on the Sonics' active roster.

The American Basketball Association refugee was busy with a court appearance in Los Angeles and did not come East with the Sonics. But the Braves were the sixth straight team to protest a game against Seattle since the Sonics signed Haywood.

In other NBA games Friday night, Los Angeles Lakers tagged Philadelphia '76ers 123-117, Portland Trail Blazers downed Chicago Bulls 113-105, Portland Pistons took Cincinnati Royals 115-104, San Francisco Warriors nipped San Diego Rockets 120-117, Baltimore Bullets topped Atlanta Hawks 115-104 and Boston Celtics defeated Phoenix Suns 122-114.

Keith Erickson poured in 12 points in the final period and Wilt Chamberlain's defence led Los Angeles to its victory over Philadelphia.

Sports On All Fronts

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Racing Commission officials expressed surprise Friday night after bearing Miss Ella Cinders, a four-year-old filly banned on Ontario tracks, had finished second in a race at Florida's Tropical Park in the afternoon. Edward Gorman, the ORC's supervisor of thoroughbred racing, said the filly's owner, Toronto realtor David Mann, was to have informed the commission before his horse ran in Florida. Miss Ella Cinders had not run since Sept. 19 when a urine analysis disclosed presence of the drug procain. The analysis followed a 12-length win for the filly at Woodbine. The ORC said at the time the filly could not be raced again until the case was disposed. However, because of lengthy proceedings and legal problems, the ORC permitted Mann to move the horse to Florida. Gorman said that while the commission allowed this concession. "I strongly doubt that it was informed that the filly ran today."

Carleton University Ravens moved into top spot in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association eastern division hockey standings Friday night by dumping McGill University Redmen 7-3 at Montreal and moving one point ahead of the idle Montreal Carabins. In the other eastern section contest, University of Ottawa Gee-Gees nipped third-place Laval University 2-1 at Quebec to move a point ahead of Queen's University, now in last place. In the west, McMaster Marlins, who were tied with University of Windsor for fourth place, moved into sole possession of third place by defeating University of Western Ontario Mustangs 5-4 at Hamilton. The University of Toronto leads the league with University of Windsor second.

'Swinger' Leads Glen Campbell Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Smith, a free-swinging, quick-quipping bachelor, has his game in gear, his mouth clamped shut and a new attitude that he isn't talking about.

"I'm not going to talk much yet," Smith said after taking a two-stroke lead Friday after two rounds of the $110,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles open golf tournament.

Smith, 28, from Sacram
Calif., has yet to win in r than three years on the tour. He hasn't finished hig than fifth.

"I got in there for an interview and talked and talked and talked," he said. "The press secretary told me later I'd better save something in case I won.

"I never got back in the interview room (finished ninth)."

Smith, one of three tied for the top spot going into the second round, took a scrambling 69 for 135—seven under par on the Rancho Park course—in the morning chill. That left him two strokes in front of Art Wall, Ray Floyd, Bob Lunn, Don January and Phil Rodgers, tied at 137. Rodgers and Wall had 67s, January a 68 and Lunn and Floyd 69s.

Masters champion Billy Casper and Tom Shaw, tied with Smith going into the second round, slipped to 72s for 138 and were tied at that figure with U.S. Open champion Tony Jacklin, who had a 69.

Arnold Palmer had an erratic 71 for 142 and was well back in the pack.

Gilbert Continues Scoring Slump

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Is Rod Gilbert trying too hard?

The Montreal-born right winger for New York Rangers ascended to the National Hockey League in 1961 ticketed for superstar status.

A diligent worker, showing streaks of greatness, he has yet to attain the all-star role expected when he jumped into the big time directly from junior hockey with Guelph.

With the exception of the 1965-66 season when he missed most of the schedule after undergoing a spinal fusion, the 29-year-old bachelor has been a consistent 20-goal scorer, still searching for his first 30-goal season.

But last year was one of frustration. He tailed off to 16 goals after a 28-goal year, his point production dropped from 77 to 53.

While observers feel his game is showing improvement this year, by the half-way mark of the schedule his over-all point picture is about level with last season. The Rangers are pushing Boston Bruins for top spot in the NHL's East Division.

HE'S 31ST

With 11 goals and 17 assists, he's 31st in the NHL scoring race and trails team-mates Jean Ratelle, Walt Tkaczuk and Dave Balon.

Of his 1969-70 performance, Gilbert said earlier this year:

"There were a few factors involved. Maybe I wasn't as conscientious about offence after awhile so I concentrated on defensive play. That's important up here, too."

ROD GILBERT

Some skeptics feel Gilbert leaves his best shots on the practice ice.

"I've always worked hard. . . . You have to work hard all the time. That is what this game is all about."

The five-foot-10, 180-pounder will get an opportunity to put his theories to practice in the second half of the NHL schedule starting tonight when the Rangers visit Bloomington, Minn., and Minnesota North Stars.

In other games today, Los Angeles Kings play the Canadiens in an afternoon game at Montreal. At night, Pittsburgh Penguins are at Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago Black Hawks are host to Boston Bruins, Detroit Red Wings entertain Buffalo Sabres, Vancouver Canucks are in St. Louis against the Blues and California Golden Seals play the Flyers at Philadelphia.

Six games are on tap Sunday with Philadelphia in Montreal for a matinee performance, Toronto at Detroit, New York at St. Louis, California at Boston, Los Angeles in Buffalo and Minnesota moving over to Chicago.

Russian Ski Jumpers Get Food Poisoning

MOSCOW (AP) — The entire Soviet Union ski-jump team, including world champion Garry Papalkov, has been taken to hospital in Moscow with acute food poisoning.

The sickness, which a Soviet spokesman said occurred at the Munich Airport, forced the skiers to miss international meets in West Germany.

The newspaper, Sovietsky Sport, published a telegram of protest Friday sent by the Soviet Ski Federation to the West German Ski Federation.

In Munich, a spokesman for the West German Ski Federation said the food poisoning was regrettable, but it was not their fault if the Russians "upset their stomachs with a liver-dumpling soup."

Voyageurs Beat Quebec Aces

y THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Voyageurs knocked division-leading Quebec Aces in American Hockey League ction Friday night and picked p third-place in the standings.

In other games, Baltimore Clippers edged Cleveland Barons 4-3, Springfield Kings nudged Hershey Bears 5-2 and Rochester Americans and Providence Reds played to a 4-4 tie.

At Montreal, the Voyageurs exploded with four unanswered third-period goals to break a 5-5 tie. The Voyageurs trailed 3-2 after 20 minutes.

Bobby Sheehan led the Montreal attack with four goals. Phil Roberto scored twice while Bob Murdoch, Germain Gagnon and John French added singles.

Bill Clement tallied three times for Quebec. Don Saleski and Jim Mair scored once each.

The win moved Montreal one point ahead of Providence in the Eastern Division. The Reds are last with 30 points.

The Voyageurs played without the services of centre Fran Huck. Montreal's general-manager Floyd Curry confirmed after the game that Huck has asked the parent Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League to trade him.

"He's unhappy with Montreal . . . the city and everything," Curry said.

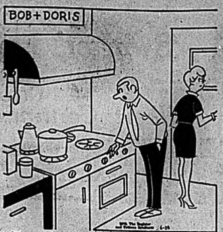
At Springfield, rookie Al McDonough banged in his 13th and 14th goals this season to pace the Kings. Mike Boland, Wayne LaCahce and Don Westbrooke got the others.

Ralph Keller and Bob Leiter scored for Hershey.

Springfield moved to within three points on Quebec who hold down first place in the Easern Division with 37 points. Hershey and Rochester occupy the Western Division cellar, each with 34 points.

At Cleveland, Rick McCann and Tony Goegan scored two goals within a 20-second span of the second period to give Baltimore the win.

Fred Speck and Kent Douglas got the other Clipper goals. Billy Heindl, Joey Johnston and Grant Ericson countered for the Barons, who failed to gain on the Clippers, top team in the Western Division with 45 points. Cleveland has 39 points.



"The pilot is out, Doris, and your burner didn't light—I WONDERED what smelled better than usual."

Entertainment Roundup

LONDON (Reuter) — A British MP called on a giant publishing group Friday to withdraw a magazine for young people because it contained an article in which actor Peter Fonda praised LSD.

The magazine, 19, published by the International Publishing Corp., quotes Fonda as saying LSD "sorted out my problems and led me to success in Easy Rider after a bad start as a mixed-up alcoholic."

John Selwyn Gummer, a Conservative MP, said the magazine was "grossly irresponsible" because "it contained an article which can glamorize drug-taking and encourage young people to experiment with LSD."

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — American comedian Tom Lehrer, 42, said here Friday night he hates President Nixon.

Lehrer, here for a television charity show, told reporters the United States has had good and bad presidents, but President Nixon was the first he could say he hated.

Lehrer said people had asked him to make jokes about the Vietnam war and President Nixon, but he could not.

"It's like asking a resident of Pompeii to make remarks about lava," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Richard Kollmar, husband of the late columnist Dorothy Kilgallen and who for a decade played radio crime fighter Boston Blackie, died in his sleep late Thursday. He was 59.

The veteran radio performer had fallen in his Manhattan home Monday, friends reported Friday.

Kollmar and the late Miss Kilgallen, married in 1940, achieved success with a morning gossip and opinion radio show called Dorothy and Dick which was broadcast for 18 years.

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge ruled that actress Joyce Matthews Schmitt is entitled to $100,000 worth of jewelry now held in the estate of showman Billy Rose, to whom she was twice married and twice divorced.

In a brief decision following a hearing Thursday, Surrogate Samuel Di Falco directed the estate to turn the jewelry over to her.

Government Called Communist

Winnipeg Women Flee to U.S. from Manitoba

NEW YORK (CP) — So far, only one country has volunteered to take in the three women of Latvian extraction who fled their home in Winnipeg Dec. 2, charging that they feared for their lives under Manitoba's "Communist" government

The country is Canada.

And rather than go back to Canada, Lucija (Lucy) Abolins, 27, her mother Viktorja, 50, and sister Aipo, 20, say they would rather renounce their citizenship.

"It would make me a person without a country," Lucy, who speaks for the three, said in an interview. "But then perhaps some other country would have us."

The women, whose $1,000 savings ran out 19 days after they arrived here, now are being supported by the International Rescue Committee and have been ordered out of the country by Jan. 14 by the state department, which turned down their request for political asylum.

While allowing the women appeared sincere in their belief, a state department spokesman said in Washington Friday the department and the committee, which specializes in helping refugees from Communist countries, could find no basis for the claims of persecution.

However, a committee spokesman said his organization had helped the women because they were "in a highly emotional state and should not be left without funds and shelter," and had set no time limit on continuing to meet their expenses.

The Canadian consulate has offered to help the women by assisting them in getting back to Canada. The offer was rejected.

"In the final analysis," said Lucy, "we thought that if we stayed any longer it was at the risk of our lives."

She sai they had been threatened by Communists in various ways "depending on what they are ethnically," and added it was some sort of physical threat—"the final thing"—that prompted them to pack up and fly to New York.

"We didn't come to this continent to live under Communist rule," she said, charging that Manitoba's Premier Ed Schreyer is an admitted Communist and Prime Minister Trudeau runs a government that is "national socialist—well, socialist anyway."

"We came from Latvia to get away from communism."

The family fled the "Bolsheviks of Latvia" in 1943, going to Germany, where they were in a refugee camp until 1950, when they emigrated to Canada after being refused by the Americans because they had Lucy's grandmother with them.

The sisters ran a restaurant for awhile, but the business failed.

Lucy could offer no concrete examples of the threats, which she said had been going on for years.

"In a situation, where there is no revolution there is no way you can prove it in a court of law."

She said the trouble started when she was 16 and "grew and grew until it culminated in this situation".

"When I was working I would run into Communists and they would threaten me."

For instance: "One of these days you're going to die if you don't go along with the new social revolution."

She said that under former premier Duff Roblin, a Conservative, the Communists in Manitoba had "kept their mouths shut, but now they threaten violence."

Meanwhile, the future for the three is highly uncertain. While they can renounce their Canadian citizenship, the government is under no obligation to take note of the fact. Under the law, Canadians renounce their citizenship only if they swear allegiance to another country, or take out other citizenship.

Harold Grimes of the committee said he did not believe any other country would take them.

"I would like very much for them to find a country which would take them, but I think this will be very difficult."

U. S. Deserter Leaves Canadian Wife for Home--and Jail

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Virgil Polston, who deserted from the United States Marines in August, 1969, said goodbye to his Canadian wife and his freedom here Friday knowing the next 10 years of his life could be spent in prison.

He said he would turn himself in after visiting his family.

He says he left the Marines after he was refused leave to visit his dying stepfather in Baltimore, Md., just before Christmas in 1968. A few days later his stepfather died and Virgil, 19, was again denied leave to attend the funeral.

When he was finally granted leave, he decided not to return.

He was caught and imprisoned. Following his release, he ran away twice more. He was caught and punished each time.

After his third term in a military prison, where he says he was "physically beaten and harassed to the point where I was ready to commit suicide," he escaped to Canada.

He went to Toronto where a friend of his mother's helped him find an apartment. He existed by doing odd jobs.

A few months later he met and married Lorraine Provost, a waitress in a restaurant near his apartment, and they moved here, her home town.

"It was love at first sight," he says.

But he began to yearn for his home in the United States and wrote a letter to President Nixon asking whether he could return.

He told the president he was not "one of those hippie anti-Vietnam persons" and that he had volunteered for active duty in Vietnam after enlisting in the Marines on his 17th birthday.

"Sir," he wrote, "I'm willing to do anything to be able to come back. The only thing I want to be assured of is not going back to the brig. I almost probably did suffer a nervous breakdown, it was the first time I was locked up and I couldn't take it.

"I will volunteer to go to Vietnam, anything, but not being locked up again."

His letter was published in the Baltimore Evening Sun Dec. 17 and has received wide publicity in the U.S. since then.

Brazil Plans To Release 70

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The Brazilian government was rounding up 70 prisoners today and planned to fly them to exile in exchange for kidnapped Swiss Ambassador Giovanni Bucher.

Leftist terrorists who abducted Bucher in Rio last Dec. 7 have said they would release the diplomat as soon as the prisoners arrive safely at their destinations.

In a brief note Friday announcing its agreement to release the prisoners, the government said it now considers the list submitted by the guerrillas as complete.

The note, signed by the ministers of justice and foreign relations, gave no departure time or destination for the prisoners, but the kidnappers have demanded that the prisoners be flown to Algeria, Mexico or Chile.

Government sources had threatened to kill Bucher unless their ransom demands were met. The government refused two of the demands—that a revolutionary manifesto be published and that Rio's suburban trains give free passage to all customers during the negotiations.

The government also said it would not fre any prisoners if they were serving long sentences or if they were involved in previous kidnappings or murders. It rejected some names from earlier lists submitted by th guerrillas, saying some prisoners did not want to leave the country.

Red Rudi Hides As Britain Won't Let Him Remain

LONDON (Reuter) — Rudi Dutschke went into hiding today, bitterly disappointed over the failure of his appeal to be allowed to stay in Britain.

An order by Home Secretary Reginald Maudling that the 30-year-old former West German student leader should be expelled from Britain as a threat to national security was upheld Friday by an appeals tribunal.

Home office officials Friday night asked Dutschke's lawyers to find out how long it would be before he was ready to leave.

Dutschke, his wife and their two children, were believed staying with friends in northern London. Friday they left an apartment near Cambridge University, where Dutschke had begun a three-year research course.

The expulsion order touched off a storm of protest from politicians, newspapers and university professors.

In a statement released through his lawyers Friday night Dutschke said "I have never engaged in direct political or organizational activity in Britain."

DA Won't Prosecute

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A complaint against John Wayne involving an alleged obscenity-spiced clash between the actor and Vietnam war protestors waving Viet Cong flags won't be prosecuted by the district attorney.

"I think the complaint was a put-on," District Attorney John Price said Friday. Wayne has denied the incident happened.

Gregory Kirkwood, 22, of Sacramento filed a complaint with the police seeking to have Wayne charged with disturbing the peace during an inaugural gala Monday night for re-elected Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Kirkwood said the 63-year-old Wayne, star of war films dating back decades and a strong defender of American Vietnam policy, spotted Viet Cong flags Kirkwood and friends were waving outside the gala.

Wayne shouted "What the . . . . is that!" and had to be restrained from charging the demonstrators, Kirkwood said.

Last U.S. East Coast Liner on Final Voyage

NEW YORK (AP) — With three mournful blasts on her whistle, the last American-flag passenger liner on the East Coast sailed into the twilight on her final voyage Friday.

A scant half-dozen wellwishers stood in the darkened pier shed to watch the Santa Rosa, 15,000 tons, depart for a Caribbean cruise. No ceremony was held.

On her return Jan. 21, the liner will go into lay-up at Baltimore, leaving four U.S. passenger vessels operating from West Coast ports as the sole survivors of a once-mighty fleet.

"I hope to continue sailing—on freighters," said Captain Frank Siwik, skipper of the Santa Rosa since she was built in 1958. "I began there and I can end there."

With him on board for the final voyage were 263 passengers and 270 crew members.

The final voyage of the Santa Rosa brings to an end a chapter in the history of transatlantic communications that began with the sailing of the steamer Phoenix in 1809.

Koreans Say U. S. Ship Sunk

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea said today it sank a "U.S. imperialist armed spy ship" Wednesday night to show with an actual deed "that the warnings of the Korean people are not empty talk."

In South Korea, national police said North Korean gunboats sank a South Korean fishing boat with 11 persons aboard and fired on another fishing boat Wednesday night in the Yellow Sea, near the seaward extension of the Korean armistice line between North and South Korea.

Canada's Banks Cut Prime Interest Rate to Seven Per Cent

By BUD JORGENSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's largest banks reduced low-risk interest rates Friday, a result of easier monetary conditions and pressure from lower rates in the United States.

There were also new announcements of cuts in mortgage loan rates, notably by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The prime rate—the rate banks charge their best customers—will go to seven per cent from 7.5. It is the third prime rate reduction in seven months. The rate was at seven per cent in March, 1969 and it jumped to a record 8.5 per cent by July, 1969 and stayed there for a year.

The banks will also reduce to five per cent from 5.5 the interest paid on non-checking savings accounts.

CMHC cut its mortgage rate to 9.25 per cent from 9.5.

The new prime rate will go into effect Jan. 13 at Bank of Nova Scotia and Royal Bank of Canada branches. The Bank of Montreal, Toronto Dominion and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce will adopt the new rate on Jan. 15.

All five will reduce the rate for non-checking savings accounts on Feb. 1.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Board—the central bank counterpart of the Bank of Canada—reduced its lending rate to major reserve banks to 5.25 per cent from 5.5 earlier this week. The U.S. central bank had cut its rate to 5.5 from 5.75 last Nov. 30.

Several large U.S. banks announced earlier this week a reducion to 6.5 per cent from 6.75 in their prime rate.

The round of prime-rate cuts here was started by the Bank of Nova Scotia and by mid-afternoon the other four banks had followed.

The Royal Bank announced Thursday it was dropping its mortgage rates by one-half per cent to 9.25 for National Housing Act loans and by one-quarter per cent to 9.75 for conventional loans.

Toronto Dominion announced identical mortgage rate cuts Friday.

The Bank of Montreal lined up with a 9.25-per-cent rate for NHA mortgages and also announced that home-improvement loans sponsored under sections of the act would be cut to nine per cent from 9.25 where the repayment period was less than three years.

The Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. rates applies to money provided by the treasury to the federal housing agency for direct lending when funds are not available through other lenders approved under the National Housing Act.

H. W. Hignett, president of CMHC, said the lower rate is "in line with easier conditions in the private mortgage market."

Mortgage rates for prime conventional loans were at 10 per cent or more during most of 1970. In December, many lenders cut the rates to 9.75 per cent. This rate was adopted Friday by the Canada Trust, Huron and Erie companies and the Bank of British Columbia.

The prime rate cuts by the banks follow by about wo months a reduction to six per cent from 6.5 per cent in the bank rate. The bank rate is the rate the Bank of Canada charges chartered banks.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"Let me listen to one of those eggs—if I don't hear anything moving around in it I'll chance a dozen."

Buffalo Plants Close

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Two more plants in the Buffalo area with a total of 121 employees say they are closing permanently.

The announced layoffs Friday by the Quaker Oats Co. and the Abex Corp. brought to 942 the numbers of persons who stand to lose their jobs because of reductions or closings of Buffalo-area industries disclosed during the week.

Poor economic conditions and reduced demand for products were the commonly cited reasons.

Stock Markets Rally Sharply

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets rallied sharply this week in anticipation of reductions in prime bank interest rates.

By Friday, the Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a prime indicator of market movement, was up 2.07 points to 176.51.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index rose 1.59 to 174.46. Advances outnumbered declines 216 to 141.

The anticipation was justified Friday when several chartered banks reduced their prime rate to 7 per cent from 7½ per cent. The prime rate is the interest charged on loans to a bank's best customers. The reductions are effective next week.

Several institutions also announced reductions in National Housing Act and conventional residential mortgage interest rates.

The prime rate reduction among Canada's five major chartered banks followed similar reductions among banks in the United States.

On Wall Street, however, the Dow-Jones average of key industrial issues slipped 1.91 points to 838.92. Analysts blamed the loss on profit-taking after several weeks of sharp advance.

By Friday, Canadian markets had extended advances to four consecutive sessions.

The Toronto market posted its best one-day advance Friday in more than a month.

It was the third consecutive week that Canadian markets had moved upward.

On index at Toronto, golds rose 7.29 to 169.10, base metals 1.39 to 92.74 and Western oils 3.06 to 194.90.

Public Is Said Muzzled

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is "trying to muzzle both the public an Parliament" by refusing to allow witnesses to appear before a House committee studying its bill to set packaging and labelling standards, Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said Friday.

Mr. Baldwin said in a news release that the Liberal chairman of the health committee, Steve Otto (York East), had denied the request of a group to appear before the committee, although he had invited the group to submit a written brief.

Attached to the release was a letter from the committee's clerk to the group. The letter said the committee heard outside witnesses only when dealing with "subject matter" such as a white paper.

When studying bills, only ministers and public servants were invited to give oral evidence.

A spokesman for Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said the admission of witnesses was a matter for the committee to decide, not the government.

The letter was addressed to G. C. E. Steele of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada.

U. S. Expects to Sell More To Canada in Coming Year

WASHINGTON (CP) — Despite predicted increases in exports to Canada, the commerce department says foreign trade prospects for 1971 indicate a slowdown in the over-all growth rate for United States exports and a faster climb in imports than last year.

In a forecast of 1971 trade in all major market areas, the department sees a moderation of U.S. export sales while the domestic economy's pickup will speed import growth.

A main feature of U.S.-Canada trade involves the automotive industry.

"Exports to Canada are likely to advance considerably faster in the next 12 months than the marginal increase recorded last year," says the department's magazine Commerce Today.

"Because Canadian plants supply a significant part of the economy-car market, the recent shift in consumer buying patterns toward smaller vehicles, plus the projected large gains in auto sales this year, should ensure an expansion in imports of parts and accessories."

Elsewhere, the study notes imports of office machines climbed by two-fifths in 1970, with imports of statistical machines from Canada being a major factor.

It also notes that imports of civilian aircraft fell sharply in 1970 but the drop was offset by much larger receipts of parts, mostly from U.S. subsidiaries in Canada.

Conversely, the auto business will stimulate imports from Canada, with the magazine noting that a contributing factor "to the higher inflow of consumer items will be the recovery in the first half from strike-depressed levels of automotive imports from Canada."

Sluggish car demand in the U.S. and the strike against General Motors held the advance in these imports to less than one-tenth last year in comparison with a 31-per-cent climb in 1969.

The publication also says greater crude petroleum imports are expected this year and "most of the advance will be from Canada."

Over-all, the lengthy study notes that in 1970 U.S. exports rose strongly to nearly $43 billion. While shipments will again increase, the rate of advance is expected to be below the estimated 15-per-cent gain recorded last year—the fastest growth in foreign sales since 1964. The new estimate is 10 to 12 per cent.

Liberals Will Hold Conference

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Liberal party will spend three days this month discussing the responsibilities of 12 government departments proposed by party leader Robert Nixon to replace the 23 that now exist.

About 1,000 delegates are expected at a policy conference scheduled here Jan. 21-24.

Co-chairmen are Donald Rosebrugh, secretary of the Liberal party in Ontario, and John Parkin, a Toronto architect.

The cabinet portfolios proposed by Mr. Nixon are justice; industry, trade and development; education; labor; urban affairs; treasury; community and social services; consumer and commercial affairs; environment; resources; agriculture and rural development; and prime minister.

Discussion of what responsibilities would be assigned to each department will centre on background papers prepared for release to delegates between Jan. 11 and 19.

Mr. Nixon will attend news conferences in six major municipalities the week before the conference at which the background papers will be explained.

This formula spells research

On January 1st, Northern Electric Laboratories became Bell Canada-Northern Electric Research Limited, Canada's largest industrial research and development corporation.

To mark the fact that this is not a mere change of name, we have devised a new formula. And with it, a new symbol. Together they portray research, but let us explain. Next to the figure of man stands the circle of the world. Next to the world, an arrow indicates direction. Man plus world plus direction create our symbol of people reaching out to the challenge of their environment.

Such is research as we conceive it—not technical brilliance alone, not invention for the mere sake of change, not performance for the sole search of success. But the simple desire to bring our human resources to the service of others: the telecommunication industry, research fraternities, our country and various nations beyond our borders.

Our new formula has a long way to go: such is its challenge. But we intend to apply it to the fullest measure of our means. In a spirit of innovation, dedication and excellence.

British Columbians Proffer Various Constitutional Ideas

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbians bombarded a parliamentary committee for almost eight hours Friday with proposed amendments to Canada's constitution and specific suggestions for overcoming the century-old problem of making it a Canadian instrument domiciled in this country.

In morning and afternoon sessions, each running more than an hour beyond the alloted time, the joint Commons-Senate committee on the constitution listened to a stream of briefs advocating proposals ranging from establishment of a federal office of education to entrechment of fundamental human rights within the constitution; from environmental protection to guarantees of the aboriginal rights of Indians.

They heard former justice minister E. Davie Fulton recommend that an immediate start be made on bringing the British North America Act, the present constitutional instrument, into complete Canadian jurisdiction without need for reference to the United Kingdom Parliament. And they were urged by Mr. Fulton and a group of university professors to resist any temptation to draft a completely new constitution. The professors described the often criticized BNA Act as "one of the most successful constitutional documents ever written."

Committee members were thunderstruck by the "fantastic interest" in constitutional matters on the West Coast.

"We havent' encountered anything approaching this elsewhere," said committee co-chairman Dr. Mark MacGuigan, (L—Windsor Walkerville), who rescheduled Friday's sessions in the 1,000-seat ballroom of Hotel Vancouver after an overflow crowd of 700 swamped accommodation in a smaller meeting room at Thursday's opening session of a six-day swing through British Columbia.

More than 500 persons, including student groups from three Vancouver high schools, participated actively in Friday's sessions, drawing from committee member Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) of New Brunswick an exclamation of "fantastic."

"This is a real bouncing, ginger group," he said.

Two student groups presented prepared briefs urging the parliamentarians to write into the constitution provisions for federal control of environmental and pollution matters, guarantees of educational equality throughout the province and of the right to employment.

Bob Hughes, 15, of Burnaby High School, called for compulsory retirement of members of Parliament at age 60, arguing that since youngsters were considered too young to vote, "it follows that anyone who becomes old and senile should be banned."

Young, middle-aged and elderly members of the audience spoke in favor of a bill of human rights and for immediate action on pressing problems of pollution and economic welfare. Many expressed impatience at delays in taking comprehensive corrective action because of the division of jurisdictional powers between federal and provincial governments and the lengthy process of reaching agreement on constitutional change.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Doctor's Warnings Being Disregarded

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My husband is killing himself. He won't listen to the doctor or to me. He smokes. He drinks. He overeats. He overworks. He doesn't take vacations. If you ever wanted a picture of a man committing suicide, I'd send you the "negative".

He's only 42. His doctor has tkaen X-rays and EKGs. He tells me, and has told him, that he already has an enlarged heart. In addition to everything I have told you, my question is this: What is meant by an enelarged heart? Does it mean it is stronger or weaker?

I'll also add that his father and two brothers died in their late 40s of heart attacks. Just what can a wife do to help a stubborn husband who doesn't seem to care what happens to a widow and her children? — Mrs. Y.

Comment: I'll come right out with it and say the picture (without having seen the negative) is bleak. Your husband's family history is not a good one. Yet I have known some patients with similar poor family histories of heart disease, who were thankful to be warned of the danger to themselves. They took especially good care of their health and outlived the family members who had bad hearts.

Not knowing your husband's actual condition I can't say what has caused his "cardiac hypertrophy" (enlarged heart). It may be due to coronary disease, to high blood pressure over a long period of years, to old rheumatic heart disease, or other reasons.

An enlarged heart doesn't mean a strong heart; it signifies a weakened heart muscle. The heart enlarges simply because its original amount of muscle tissue isn't strong enough to do the job required: pump blood efficiently to all parts of the body.

When the enlargement becomes great and the heart begins to fail, then come such symptoms as shortness of breath, swelling of ankles, cough, indigestion and other complaints.

Yes, I'll agree with you that your husband is committing slow suicide. Living in tension, getting fat, smoking and drinking too much, undervacationing — such are man's weaknesses that heart disease feeds on.

But perhaps there's still time. Show him this column. Added to the admonitions of your own doctor and yourself, it may hold a mirror up to him so he can see himself as he really is. An enlarged heart needs treatment by a doctor and full co-operation by the patient.

• • •

For Mrs. H.: Your dentist is to be commended for calling your physician. Be thankful that between them they decided to give your son penicillin before and after his tooth extraction.

What is an ordinary surgical procedure for most people can be dangerous for a patient who has congenital heart disease or a history of rheumatic fever with complications of the heart valves.

What your doctors have been trying to do is prevent bacteria from causing unnecessary complications like endocarditis (infection and inflammation of heart valves).

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it really true that smoking does not cause lung cancer in women? So many people have told me that only men get it that I feel I am unnecessarily giving up a habit I enjoy. — Mrs. G.

Comment: Women get it, too. In fact more are getting it because women have been smoking more. And women get emphysema and bronchitis, also. You will feel better knowing you are not "unnecessarily" giving up the smoking habit.

U. S. Plans Dozen Fast Submarines

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States will build 12 new highspeed nuclear-powered attack submarines to meet the challenge of a growing Soviet underwater fleet.

Contracts worth about $750 million to build the new 688 class submarines were awarded Friday night by Navy Secretary John H Chafee.

They will complement the current 41-vessel fleet of Polaris- and Poseidon-equipped submarines built during the last decade.

Chafee said it is anticipated that more ships of the same new design will be built in subsequent years. He did not specify how many, but some reports mentioned a total of 24.

Trudeau Visits Canadian-built Reactor Amid Packistan Hovels

BULLJI, Pakistan (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau drove in a Rolls-Royce Saturday to this little village of shacks made out of mud, stone, burlap, lath and tree branches.

He came to inspect a nuclear reactor which Canada has built for Pakistan at a cost of $43 million.

Outside the cement fence topped by broken glass and barbed wire, pitifully thin children squatted in the dust and waved as the Rolls-Royce drove by.

Inside the fence, the beautifully-dressed children of 30 Canadian families played on a thick green lawn.

On the lawn were set out chairs under gay umbrellas and tables with little cakes protected against the odd fly by colored cheese-cloth.

The Pakistani waiters stayed behind a high cloth screen until ordered to appear with tea for the guests.

Pakistani officials also attended the garden party but they did not have their wives or children and they sat at tables by themselves.

There was no mingling of Canadian and Pakistani reactor technicians though Dr. H. I. Usmani, head of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission said in a welcoming speech that Canadians and Pakistanis at the reactor site are one big happy family.

The reactor, scheduled to produce power this summer, sits beside the Arabian Sea in a bleak landscape of salt flats and scrub growth 25 miles west of Karachi.

A small boy was tending goats which, however, ran in and out of the shacks. A weary camel driver escorted his beast which bore a groaning load of bales. A woman dressed in rags beat her laundry—more rags—beside a stinking slough of green slime.

A few hundred yards away inside the reactor compound the teacups tinkled in merry conversation and Canadian wives in miniskirts shook hands happily with a beaming Mr. Trudeau.

Potted flowers had been set along the clean roadway and pretty tablecloths blew in the breeze from out a cloudless sky. The temperature was about 80.

Mr. Trudeau said it was a great experience for Canadian children to know another land.

Then he drove in the Rolls-Royce through the gate and past the village where even hardy palm trees were dying. A small dark girl stood beside an emaciated donkey and waved at the big car.

Down the road was the Canadian compound, a walled area in the desert with lawns and ferns and air conditioners protruding from newly-painted houses and apartments.

Leadership Candidates Say Little on Policies

TORONTO (CP) — Few clear-cut statements of policy were in evidence as campaigning for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party got under way in earnest this week.

The 1,720 delegates, who meet Feb. 10-12 to select a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts, appeared to have little to choose from on the basis of such issues as education costs, taxes, control of the environment and foreign domination of the economy.

All candidates have made the same admission: The present government has been "pre-occupied with many of the material aspects of life."

All have said the time has come in Ontario for "a new kind of society", but have offered no firm proposals for achieving this end.

Candidates declaring themselves to date are all cabinet ministers. They are:

Education Minister William Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, Financial and Commercial Affairs Minister Bert lawrence and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence.

Only in limited areas has any candidate been willing to detail the kind of policies and programs that he, as premier, would try to impose on his administration.

The exceptions include:

Mr. McKeough, who suggested ways in which national control of the economy "possibly" could be effected; Allan Lawrence, who proosed reducing educational costs to one-third the total provincial budget, and Mr. Welch, who said he would favor an unspecified lowering of the voting and drinking age. The cautious approach taken by all candidates in their opening statements has surprised Queen's Park observers because of Mr. Robarts' dictum that he should be succeeded by a man with new ideas and new approaches to government.

All candidates have political experience that belies their years:

—Mr Davis, 41, was first elected in 1959 and has been in cabinet since 1962.

—Mr. McKeough, 37, was elected in 1963 after experience at the municipal level and has been in cabinet since 1967.

—Bert Lawrence, 47, was first elected in 1963 after municipal experience and rose rapidly in cabinet stature after his appointment early in 1970.

—Allan Lawrence, 45, who is also minister of northern affairs, was first elected in 1958 and entered the cabinet in 1970 after years on the backbench.

—Mr. Welch, 42, was elected to the legislature in 1963 and entered the cabinet in 1966.

The reticence of candidates on policy issues may be broken during a series of seven regional meetings in which they will apear on the same platform to meet convention delegates.

Kerr Will Not Be Candidate

TORONTO (CP) — George Kerr, 47, Ontario minister of energy and resources management, told his riding Friday night he will not be a candidate for the leadership of the provincial Progressive Conservative party.

He told a Halton West riding convention in Burlington that he would rather devote his time and energy to fighting pollution in the province than become premier.

The convention was called to name 10 riding delegates to the party leadership convention here Feb. 10-12.

Mr. Kerr said he would withhold announcing his support for a leadership hopeful until all candidates declared themselves. However, he is believed leaning toward Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs.

Canadians Moved from NATO Front Line to Rear Reserve Role

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian ground forces in Europe, halved in the past year to 2,800 from about 6,000 men, have apparently given up their former front line NATO position for a rear reserve role in the southwest corner of Germany.

While the precise job of the force is a military secret, a defence department spokesman said Friday planners regard as "extremely reasonable" the suggestion that the response to an attack would be to hold back in reserve, rather than the former response of dashing to active defence positions.

The battle group, equipped with tanks and armored personnel carriers, completed a move in October from the front lines of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defence perimeter at Soest in the north German plain to Lahr, in the hilly Black Forest country a few miles from the French border.

With the move—and the simultaneous cut in strength—the ground force also switched NATO affiliations to a U.S. command area from the British commander responsible for the north German area.

By the end of October's move, the Canadians had still not come to an agreement with the U.S. commanders on their new job in the south, well behind the brunt of any potential Soviet invasion through central Europe.

The reserve role has been expected since Prime Minister Trudeau announced in April, 1969 that the force would be trimmed and the move was announced shortly afterward.

Some observers have suggested that the force would disperse into the forested hills of the Lahr area—even across the Rhine River into France—if a Soviet attack materialized.

Defence department spokesmen stress that the current role is strictly temporary.

Expected this spring is the government's white paper on defence policy, which will outline the make-up and tasks of the Canadian Forces after 1972.

That year is important. The big gun of the force, the Centurion tank, is expected to be obsolete by about 1974. And it would take about two years to line up a replacement and get it operational in the field.

The decision on the post-1972 role of the force therefore must be made fairly quickly.

An alternative has the force moving to an air-mobile role—giving up the tanks and personnel carriers for light guns that can be flown quickly to trouble spots around the flanks of Europe. The big drawback of this option—apart from strategic issues—is the high cost of the aircraft that would be required.

Coincidentally, the weapon of the 2,000-man air group in Germany —the CF-104 strike-reconnaissance jet—will also have to be replaced in the mid-70s. The air group now is testing the CF-5—just off the assembly line —for a possible European mission.

The government has bought 115 CF-5s, but has put some in storage for lack of work. The bill for those aircraft is $212.8 million.

This week the ground force began its first major practice exercise since going south to Lahr.

More than 900 track and wheeled vehicles, with M-109 self-propelled howitzers and Centurions, made the 300-mile trip to the 57,000-acre U.S. training area at Grafenwoehr for their annual operational evaluation.

Poor People Propose Demonstration Jan. 25

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates to the poor people's conference here returned to their homes across Canada Sunday with plans for a national demonstration Jan. 25, a spate of resolutions to work on and a broader outlook on poverty problems.

Although the four-day conference, attended by more than 400 representatives of local self-help organizations of poor people, had its unruly and explosive moments, many delegates said they found it generally good.

It was Canada's first such conference, bringing together people from widely-different backgrounds and geographic areas. They had one thing generally in common: a personal knowledge of poverty and a desire to see it eradicated.

This wasn't enough to provide unity of thought, however, and many times tension and dissent between different groups and persons became apparent.

But before the meeting's final session ended, a delegate suggested that another one should be held in a year.

This one was initiated by the national welfare council, an advisory body to the federal health minister. It was finaced by federal government grants totalling $68,500, including transportation expenses for most delegates.

Long hours of workshops on such topics as unemployment led into a final general session Sunday during which delegates chugged through more than 70 resolutions from the discussion groups.

Since most delegates left in the afternoon, there was almost no time for discussion on individual recommendations, and sometimes several were passed on one vote.

They agreed that poor people's organizations should stage local demonstrations Jan. 25 as a display of national unity among them. These could take the form of sit-ins in welfare offices, petitionig governments, boycotting stores, or whatever other measure the group favored.

Bolivian Rightists Crushed

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — A group of army officers seized the armed forces headquarters in La Paz early today in rebellion against Bolivia's three-month-old leftist military regime. A few hours later President Juan José Torres announced the revolt had been crushed.

In a broadcast, Gen. Torres said some leaders of the coup had taken refuge in foreign embassies—chiefly in the embassy of Peru. Torres called them right-wingers and reactionary subversives.

In the early hours, the rebels announced they were acting to keep Bolivia frm being delivered to "another imperialism as dismal as that of North America." They did not identify it.

Envoy Back From Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN envoy Gunnar Jarring planned talks today with representatives of Egypt and Jordan to sound them out on the proposals he brought back from Israel.

The Swedish mediator returned Sunday night from two days in Jerusalem, where he conferred with Premier Golda Meir and Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Jarring termed the talks with the Israelis "very interesting and useful" but refused to tell reporters anything about Israel's proposals. He said as he left Israel that he was looking forward to a "successful continuation" of his Middle East talks in New York.

An Israeli communique said Jarring agreed to submit Israel's proposals to the Arabs, but the announcement gave no details.

Israel is known to want secure and agreed borders and a signed peace treaty to end 22 years of conflict with the Arabs.

Mrs. Meir and Eban also were believed to have urged that Jarring move his headquarters from New York to some neutral spot close to Jerusalem, Cairo and Amman—Cyprus, for example—so that the negotiations could be carried on by the foreign ministers of the three nations, not their ambassadors.

Jarring refused to say whether he would visit Cairo or Amman in the near future, and there was no indication either Arab government had invited him.

In Cairo, meanwhile, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat fired ssssss shrdlu etaoi shrdlucmfw a new blast at the United States and indicated diplomatic relations could not be resumed until Washington demanded withdrawal of all Israeli troops from the territory it occupied in the 1967 war.

One-price Structure Advocated

VANCOUVER (CP) — An imaginative proposal to institute a common price structure across the country as a means of alleviating economic disparities between regions and sharply opposing views on the monarchy highlighted the final Vancouver hearing Sunday of the parliamentary committee on the constitution.

In one of 18 briefs presented to the joint Commons-Senate committee before more than 600 persons, Jack Arnold of Vancouver proposed that it be made mandatory that all goods protected by tariff be made available to Canadians at the same price in any part of Canada.

Mr. Arnold, assistant to the general manager of the B.C. Safety Council but appearing as an individual, said the present tariff walls and freight-rate structure favor centrally-located industry in Ontario and Quebec.

This imposed a double penalty on Canadians living outside the two provinces—the increased cost resulting from a protectionist tariff policy and freight costs.

'George! I've just remembered. You're unemployed!'

A and P Stores Facing Strike

TORONTO (CP) — A grocery union threatened Sunday to strike Thursday at A and P food stores in 30 Ontario cities, unless a satisfactory contract is reached and ratified by then.

The announcement came one day after the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. Ltd. announced it would close today to mark down prices and enter the discount food war.

The strike is threatened by the 2,000-member Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America.

Victor Pathe, president of the union's retail council, said in a prepared statement, "The A and P employees represented by this union have a stake in the success of the company's discount price program but we are not prepared to take discount wages and conditions any longer."

He said the union's contract expired Dec. 14 and that at the request of the company the union postponed a scheduled pre-Christmas strike.

"Although considerable progress has been made in discussions on wages there are still vital strike issues to be resolved concerning job security, fringe benefits, the drug plan and medical coverage, which is now taking $15 a month or more out of our members' pockets."

Heath Defends Arms Sale Plan

NEW DELHI (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Heath will meet here today, split over British policy of selling arms to South Africa.

Trudeau, a strong critic of selling arms to the apartheid state, and the British leader are on their way to the Comomnwealth prime ministers conference in Singapore, where a major argument is expected over the arms issue.

The Canadian leader also will have talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. The British arms sales to the South Africans—still not made—are expected to figure in the discussions. India also opposes the sales.

Trudeau stopped over Sunday at Mathura for a visit to the birthplace of the Hindu god Lord Krishna, and was welcomed by priests into their temples as if he were a Brahmin, the highest of the Hindu social castes.

The priests applied sandalwood paste to his forehead, placed a gold and silver-laced saffron scarf around his neck and then permitted him to walk—after taking off his shoes—to the inner sanctum of the temple from which non-Hindus normally are barred. The prime minister placed a marigold garland at the feet of a statue of a god.

A priest wished the "blessings of Lord Buddha" on Trudeau while maroon-robed, shaven-headed monks sat on the ground and chanted a prayer for the prime minister.

During the visit to the temple an old man fell to his knees and tried to kiss Trudeau's feet, but the prime minister helped him to his feet.

The Canadian leader's visit to the temples took place at Brindaban near Agra, where there is a city of temples devoted to Krishna.

At Mathura, near Agra, Trudeau looked at 2,000-year-old sandlewood sculptures.

Trudeau arrived in India Saturday on a Canadian armed forces jet after a visit to Pakistan. His first stop was Agra, and he spent an hour at the Taj Manal there.

"What could I say?" was his comment when asked to give his impression of the 300-year-old marble monument built by Emperor Shahjahan as a memorial to his wife Mumtaz Mahal.

"You should see it alone and in silence."

Trudeau, however, saw it with about 150 persons including members of his official party, Indian officials and security personnel.

Trudeau made the 37-mile trip from Agra to Mathura by car Sunday morning and returned to Agra to fly on to the holy city of Benares on the River Ganges. At Benares, he was given a warm welcome after he landed in an Indian air force plane.

Before Trudeau dines with Heath today, the British leader will make what British officials say will be a major speech to the Indian Council of Foreign Affairs.

Heath had two hours of talks

Militant Jews Plan to Harass Russian Diplomats in U. S.

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of the militant Jewish Defence League says his group will step up its anti-Soviet campaign by forming teams to "trail and harass" Soviet diplomats working here.

"We don't want to build cultural bridges on the bodies of three million Jews," said Rabbi Meir Kahane when asked if his organization's activities might not aggravate Soviet-American relations.

Speaking outside the Soviet mission to the United Nations, Kahane said Sunday that "the life of each Russian will be made miserable" under the harassment campaign.

The league has spearheaded a number of anti-Soviet demonstrations in recent weeks to protest the condition of Jews living in the Soviet Union and the trial and conviction of 12 persons, most of them Jews, for an attempted hijacking.

In response the Soviet Union has officially protested the campaign. In Moscow during the weekend the cars of three American correspondents were damaged in apparent retaliation.

Kahane, who founded the JDL in 1968 said he called for harassment of Soviet diplomats after hearing reports of the Moscow incidents.

A few league members followed cars emerging from the mission here Sunday. Police escorted the cars and blocked off the street.

Arkadi Gouk, first secretary at the mission, said Sunday night: "Some of our people were followed by some unknown people with provocative purposes. Who they are, we don't know."

He said the diplomats and staff personnel had been followed to their homes and had been called names.

In Moscow, Pravda published a long article Sunday saying that "Zionist storm troopers" were conducting a "campaign of terror and provocation" against Soviet citizens in the United States. But it said the majority of Americans condemned such acts.

The newspaper also described in detail the bombing of the Soviet cultural office in Washington last Friday.

An anonymous woman called news agencies after that blast and said: "This is a sample of things to come. Let our people go. Never again!"

The league denied responsibility for Friday's bombing but refused to condemn the act. It took the same position after the Nov. 25 bombing of the Aeroflot and Intourist offices in Manhattan.

Most major Jewish organizations have denounced the tactics of the league.

Soil, Fruit, Pesticide Specialist To Speak

PICTON (Staff) — A fruit growers meeting sponsored at Prince Edward Yacht Club, January 14, by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food will feature guest speaker Byron Beeler, director, Soils and Crop Branch, Toronto.

A native of the Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia, Mr. Beeler is a graduate of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College and MacDonald College of McGill University. His basic training has centred on horticultural science but he has taken post graduate studies in the area of soil science related to plant nutrition leading to a master's degree. Mr. Beeler has been employed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture since 1958 and several years ago served as Fruit and Vegetable Extension Specialist in Prince Edward County. He has also worked as program supervisor of the fruit and vegetable extension service and more recently, as director of the soils and crops of that branch.

In this latter capacity Mr. Beeler is responsible for a team of crop advisory specialists located in key production areas of Ontario. Mr. Beeler is also chairman of the Departmental Pesticide Committee and represents the Department on the Pesticide Advisory Board of the department of health and the interdepartmental subcommittee on pesticides, herbicides and fertilizers. Pest control recommendations for Ontario are forwarded primarily by the staff of his branch.

BYRON BEELER

Mr. Beeler is a professional agrologist and is a member of the Agricultural Institute of Canada, the Ontario Institute of Agrologists, the Canadian Society for Horticultural Science and the Canadian Society of Rural Extension.

Mr. Beeler will show slides and speak of his recent summer tour through European apple research stations at this week's meeting.

A second featured speaker will be Sam Piott, president of the Ontario Fruit and Vegatable Association who will explain the new constitution and its effect on Quinte growers.

Fruit and vegetable specialist for Prince Edward County, Robert Cobbledick explained yesterday that one significant change has been included in the new constitution offering larger representation for local apple growers. Each local fruit and vegetable growers' organization approved by the OF and VA will be allowed to appoint one director from its area for every 50 members of fraction thereof, up to a maximum of five representatives. In Prince Edward County approximately 67 apple growers are represented by the local fruit growers co - operative which likely will now be entitled to two directors.

Mr. Cobbledick remarked, "Our fruit growers are numerous enough that if we organized a separate apple association, we could be entitled to at least one more director for this area and in this rapidly moving apple industry an additional voice for us, that I feel, could be quite helpful."

He suggested that fruit growers attending the meeting should be prepared to give "serious consideration to nominating and electing an Apple Executive for our area." He stressed, "For our opinions to get consideration we must have representation."

Belleville Stores Are Not Affected

The two Belleville supermarkets owned by A and P (Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company) will not be affected by the threatened strike of unionized store workers in other parts of the province.

An official at one of Belleville stores said local workers did not belong to the union which was threatening strike action on wage and fringe benefit issues.

Victor Pathe, representing the Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union of North America said in Toronto Sunday that 2,000 full and part time employees covered by the union would not report for work on Thursday morning unless a satisfactory work contract was reached.

Union officials say wage rates at A and P stores are lower than in other grocery supermarket chains and wage parity is being asked.

In Belleville, A and P store workers, although not unionized, receive the same pay as in unionized stores.

In many Ontario centres A and P stores are closed today to allow for repricing as the big grocery chain joins the current supermarket discount war.

But in Belleville it is "business as usual."

"We are already discounting in Belleville," said an official at the Plaza store.

Even if the threatened strike materializes in other centres, Belleville stores will have no difficulty in stocking their shelves.

A and P warehouse employees are covered by a different union and would continue on the job in the event of a strike by unionized store workers, it was stated.

RESOLVE TO PROTECT CHILDREN FROM HARM

Begin the New Year with the solemn vow to keep anything that is poisonous or dangerous out of reach of children.

SMALL CHILDREN WILL SWALLOW ANYTHING

Their curiosity is so great that they will put even bad tasting things in their mouth. Hospital cases have resulted from lye, gasoline, bleach, ammonia, insecticides, worm medicine, paint, lighter fluids, shampoos, deodorants, glues, cements, and all types of cleaners.

TOO MUCH OF ANYTHING IS DANGEROUS

Keep all medicines in an out-of-reach medicine cabinet. Discard old medicines by flushing their contents down the toilet. Always give the exact dosage as specified, never more. The most frequent single home poison is Aspirin, given in too large a dose to children, or taken in error.

IS YOUR HOME DANGER-PROOF?

Check your kitchen, basement, garage, tool shed and every room for danger. Protect your under the sink cabinets with locks. You will never forgive yourself if your child or one of a relative or friend is harmed by your lack of precaution.

Allore Hearing Adjourns

The hearing into the suspension of Hastings and Prince Edward separate school superintendent F. B. Allore was adjourned almost as soon as it began in Hastings County Court House this morning.

Frontenac County Judge A. R. Campbell granted the adjournment at the request of Mr. Allore's solicitor, John Wintermeyer.

Immediately afterward, 12 of the 14 trustees of the 1969-70 board in attendance went into session with the board's two lawyers in an adjacent room. Also conferring with the lawyers, Willard Esty and James Murphy of Toronto, were members of the board's administrative staff.

Mr. Wintermeyer requested the adjournment to give a "communication" privately to the two board lawyers.

Board members left the court house at noon, but had no comment on the nature of their discussions.

The hearing reconvened at 2 p.m.

Any decision is complicated by the fact that until Wednesday, no duly constituted separate school board exists.

The former board's term of office terminated Dec. 31, and the new board will not be inaugurated until 8 p.m. Jan. 13.
